GAS WORKERS GO ON STRIKE WHEN DEADLINE PASSES

Governor's Last Minute Plea Offering State Board's Service Fails to Deter Them.

UNION TO HAVE STANDBY CREWS

Phone Numbers to Call in Emergency —2000 Laclede Employes Plan for Long Siege.

A strike of more than 2000 Laclede Gas Co. operating employes began last midnight despite the last-minute intervention of Gov. Phil M. Donnelly. He had offered the services of the State Board of Mediation in an effort to bring about settlement.

The company said it expected to be able to maintain flow of gas to all customers provided nothing unusual occurred. Negotiations continued last night as the strike deadline neared, but efforts to break the stalemate failed.

Text of the Governor's telegram, sent to union and company officials, was as follows:

"Missouri laws provide protection to the public against strikes in public utilities which jeopardize the public interest, health and welfare. I request therefore that you forthwith find some peaceful means of settling all issues causing the strike threat announced for midnight tonight. The services of the State Board of Mediation are immediately available and are hereby proffered to you."

Gov. Donnelly said his office would remain open and he would be in touch with developments.

The union announced a plan whereby crews of union repair men would remain available, independently of the company, to handle emergencies that might arise during a strike. A spokesman said the public could telephone union headquarters for service in event of a serious emergency.

Union Statement.

As representatives of the AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union met with company officials in a final effort to settle the dispute and avert the strike of about 2200 employes, Joseph Appelbaum, a vice president of the international union, issued the following statement:

"The unions have rejected the company's offer simply because it is entirely inadequate. There are a number of major issues in dispute, among which is the point on wages. The company has deliberately stalemated these negotiations by injecting at the very last moment issues that would tend to destroy some of our contract features that have been in our agreements for a number of years.

"The company is deliberately provoking and imposing on the gas consumers in St. Louis and the public in general this coming strike. With the attitude being displayed by the company, there is little hope for settlement of the disputed issues today. The union is preparing for a long strike."

Emergency Calls.

The union gave newspapers a list of six telephone numbers which hospitals and other institutions might call for emergency service, and which might be called by anybody in event of extreme emergency. The numbers were given as follows: JEfferson 5-7700; JEfferson 5-7701; JEfferson 5-7702; JEf-

HUMPHREY PUTS BUDGET SURPLUS AT 1.8 BILLION AT FISCAL YEAR'S END

WASHINGTON, June 30 (UP)

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY GEORGE M. HUMPHREY estimates that the Government will have a $1,800,000,000 budget surplus when the current fiscal year ends tonight.

Humphrey promised to try for a balanced budget in the new fiscal year, but he said he could make no predictions until Congress adjourns. "If we did it once, maybe we can do it again," Humphrey said.

He appeared before the Senate Finance Committee yesterday shortly before it approved a House-passed bill putting a 278 billion dollar ceiling on the national debt for the 1957 fiscal year. Humphrey said the debt now stands at slightly below $272,500,000,000.

POLICE ORDER LT. JOSEPH TO DETAIL INCOME

High-Ranking Officer Involved in Pay-Off Inquiry to Appear Before Board.

Lt. Jake Joseph, one of the higher ranking officers involved in the police pay-off inquiry, has been required to make a written report on the source of about $4500 in additional income over and above his salary for the years 1951 and 1952, the Post-Dispatch was told last night.

The report was made to Inspector James E. Thompson who declined to discuss the case. Lt. Joseph is scheduled to appear before the Board of Police Commissioners tomorrow.

Joseph conferred yesterday with Assistant Chief of Police Joseph Casey, but both declined to discuss the nature of the conference. The Police Manual states that "a copy of the charge and specifications together with notice of time and place of trial shall be served on the officer at least 48 hours before time set for trial."

Lt. Joseph paid approximately $500 in interest and penalty charges on the additional income to the Government, the Post-Dispatch has learned. In a previous report last year on the additional income the police officer contended he got $700 in cash from his mother, $600 in the sale of tools and had saved more than $3000 during 1951 and 1952.

Income Detailed.

Asked about the $4500 additional income, Lt. Joseph told a Post-Dispatch reporter his mother gave him "some money" two months before she died. He added that part of the $4500 was "savings, and the rest was from the sale of power tools."

Lt. Joseph said he had been advised that "actually I should not have paid the Government any penalties but I went ahead and did it anyway." He reported the penalties paid were "less than $500."

He said the charges against him "are all a pack of lies." He added that Pauline Cloin, a key figure in the police pay-off investigation, told him on one occasion that "she would frame me or get my job."

Joseph said that Mrs. June Lytz, Mrs. Ruby Hoffman, and Pauline Cloin "were always pals. They always worked together. If you closed down a place run by one of them, one of the others would start up."

Mrs. Lytz was shot and killed in April 1955, setting off the long investigation of alleged pay-offs to police by brothel operators. She operated June's Bath and Massage Parlor at 308A North Theresa avenue. Pauline Cloin formerly worked for Mrs. Lytz. Ruby Hoffman is a former brothel operator.

Cites Federal Praise.

Lt. Joseph said he was praised recently by a Government official "for ridding St. Louis of prostitutes." The lieutenant quoted the Government official as saying that as a result of his (Joseph's) work there is no organized vice in St. Louis.

He said that Circuit Attorney

STEELWORKERS GO ON STRIKE AS SCHEDULED, 650,000 IDLE

Walkout Takes Effect at Midnight—Final Negotiations End in Stalemate—No New Talks Set.

NEW YORK, (Sunday) July 1 (AP) — Some 650,000 steel workers went on strike across the country early today against an industry which, in one way or another, affects virtually everyone in the land.

The walkout officially took effect at midnight although the steel mills were already at a standstill because of the necessity for cooling their giant furnaces slowly. This began two days ago.

At Pittsburgh, some 30 pickets ringed the gates of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. Strip sheet plant three hours before the official strike time.

United States Steel Corp., the world's biggest producer, reported the first pikcets appeared at its Gary, Ind., works also about three hours before the deadline, followed a few minutes later by pickets at the South Chicago works. The picketing was peaceful.

In final statements, both the United Steelworkers Union and the companies affected accused each other of causing the strike.

New Talks Not Set.

Nothing was said about a new date for efforts to work out a solution for the paralyzed industry.

In a union statement, President David J. McDonald declared:

"The responsibility for the shutdown in steel production rests entirely with the steel companies. There was no need for this shutdown.

"There is no need for the shutdown to continue if the steel companies are now willing to act fairly and justly rather than arbitararily and arrogantly."

He said the union stood ready at any time to negotiate a "fair settlement."

The 12 major companies closely connected with the negotiations here — which would have set a pattern for the industry—said:

"The only proposals that the union has made have been so excessive that they afforded no realistic basis for bargaining."

Furthermore, they added, the contract proposal put forward by the companies "represents the largest increase in actual purchasing power they have ever attained. . . ."

Industry Also Ready.

The industry added that it, too, is ready to continue talks at any time.

Both sides said they would stand by, on call.

But persons close to the parties expressed doubt there was any chance of another get-together within a week, considering the July 4 holiday and other matters.

Two final negotiation sessions—the last concluding just six hours before the strike deadline — blew up with each side refusing to budge an inch.

John A. Stephens, chief industry negotiator, strode forth and told reporters: "We have not reached an agreement."

A moment later McDonald voiced the same statement.

Industry sources said the strike would halt about 90 per cent of the country's steel production. The other 10 per cent is produced by steel unions hav-

JUNE'S WEATHER NORMAL; THAT'S VERY GOOD INDEED

Weather during June was normal in most respects and, that is very good weather indeed, Weatherman Harry F. Wahlgren said yesterday.

The month ran true to form. There were nine days with maximum temperatures of 90 degrees or higher. Mean temperature was 77 degrees, 4.5 above normal.

High for the month was 94, recorded June 21. Low reading was a cool 53 on June 1. This range was not unusual, for the record readings for the month are a high of 104 in 1952 and a low of 43 in 1838 and 1839.

It was the fifth straight June in which rainfall was more than an inch below normal, totaling 2.39 inches. Normal rainfall for the month is 3.80 inches.

The 1.56 inches of rain that fell in a 24-hour period June 19 and 20 was the heaviest 24-hour rainfall since Sept. 23 of last year.

College Tests Whisky for Curing Snakebite, With Some Success

TEMPE, Ariz., June 30 (AP) —Is a slug of whisky really an antidote for snakebite?

The National Science Foundation has given Arizona State College at Tempe $2000 to seek the answer. So far the research has been promising.

Dr. Herbert L. Stahnke, director of the college's poisonous animals research laboratory, injected a double dose of scorpion venom into a rat. Then he gave the rat a fast dose of scotch. The rat recovered.

Similar experiments are planned with the venom of gila monsters, rattlesnakes and black widow spiders.

U.S. GRAND JURY VEXED OVER NEW DELAY IN INQUIRY ON TAX SCANDALS

Contemplates Steps to Get Justice Department to Act—Brownell Had Promised New Evidence.

By THEODORE C. LINK
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

Steps to persuade the Justice Department to resume its investigation of tax scandals in the Truman Administration are contemplated by a federal grand jury here, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday. This is the second complaint by the grand jury against Justice Department delays in the tax scandal investigation.

The jury began its work 18 months ago, with specific instructions from Chief Judge George H. Moore to seek indictments of Government officials alleged to have obstructed prosecution of income tax evaders. It recessed April 4 in order not to interfere with the trial of Matthew J. Connelly and T. Lamar Caudle, two former Truman Administration officials it had indicted.

When a District Court jury here found Connelly, appointments secretary to President Truman, and Caudle, former head of the tax division of the Department of Justice, guilty June 14, the grand jury expected to be recalled to duty. The 23 members had in mind a statement of Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. at the time of the recess indicating they would be recalled before the expiration of their term July 23.

Letter to Judge Moore.

In a letter to Judge Moore, the Attorney General said: "It is not contemplated that the investigative activities of the Internal Revenue Service should cease or abate while the grand jury is in recess. They will continue apace, and should greatly simplify the task of the jury when hearings are resumed."

Instead of being recalled to receive evidence supposedly worked up by 42 Department of Justice agents during the recess period, the jury recently heard a television quotation of Brownell to the effect that the conviction of Caudle and Connelly "completes a whole series of investigation." Brownell was quoted further as stating that he "knew of no trials in the near future."

Brownell's latest statements are in sharp contrast to his April letter to Judge Moore, in which he suggested that the tax investigation be passed on to a new federal grand jury if the court deemed that necessary to carry out the instructions of January 1955.

Bitter Disappointment.

The jurors, headed by the foreman, Leo M. Zilliken, an official of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., are reported to regard Brownell's attitude as indicating a lack of interest in matters to which the jury devoted its attention on many of the 118 days it actually was in session prior to the recess. Members of the panel are reported to have expressed bitter disappointment that much of their effort will be wasted unless they are recalled and the minutes of their findings are passed on to the next grand jury.

There has been no word from Brownell since the Connelly-Caudle verdict. Wyllys Newcomb, special assistant attorney general who presented the evidence against Caudle and Connelly, both to the grand jury and at the trial, is reported resting at his home in New York and has not been heard from. It has been pointed out that the statute of limitations for practically all matters examined by the grand jury runs only until Sept. 13.

Judge Moore had no comment on the grand jury's plight, and it was not indicated by what means Foreman Zilliken or Deputy Foreman Frederick C. Ahrens, also of St. Louis, plan to make their feelings known to Brownell.

In an unprecedented formal complaint filed in court last March, the grand jury declared that emphasis had been shifted from alleged obstruction of justice by high officials of the Truman administration to lesser tax matters. "We do not feel," the jury stated, "that the change was in the best interests of the completion of our duties."

After receiving the jury's complaints, Judge Moore, who also had been critical of the lack of progress, referred the matter to Brownell. The jury then resumed the tax scandal investigation until its recess.

A second federal grand jury here has devoted its attention to investigations of election campaign expenditures and to possible anti-trust violations.

POLISH TANKS, BIG GUNS APPEAR TO BE CRUSHING LAST OF UPRISING

Gunfire Dies Out After Midday — Travelers Say They Heard Dead Ranged From 400 to 600 at Poznan.

Berlin, June 30 (AP)—Polish heavy artillery and tanks tonight appeared to be crushing the last holdouts of a workers' bread and freedom revolt in the rubble of Poznan.

Westerners streaming out of Poznan told of tanks and artillery throwing a ring of steel around the city. A Frenchman said artillery was firing on the center of Poznan.

Gunfire echoed through the streets in the morning but died out in the afternoon, Westerners said.

Two Portuguese business men said they were told from 400 to 600 Poles were killed in three days of street fighting. Warsaw radio increased its estimate of the number of dead from 38 to 48.

The radio spoke angrily of "marks of devastation" in Poznan and indicated mass trials for ringleaders. It said an investigation of those under arrest had begun.

'Certain Power' Assailed

One Warsaw broadcast in the English language charged a "certain power" helped to foment the uprising by "openly supporting subversive movements in Socialist countries." This appeared to refer to the United States, often accused by the Communists of such activity.

Warsaw radio said Premier Cyrankiewicz visited 31 wounded in Poznan hospitals. The patients were soldiers and civilians wounded in the fight against "Fascist provocateurs," the broadcast added.

The radio said hospitals were jammed with the wounded. Doctors, surgeons and students of the Poznan Medical Academy volunteered their services.

The broadcast said the worst devastation was in Kochanowskiego street. The state security police building is here. The building was the object of the workers' wrath when the uprising broke out Thursday.

"The building of the state security service clearly shows the marks of the fighting," the Warsaw broadcast said. "Here four members of the service, among them a lieutenant and an ensign, were killed.

"In expert fashion, the rioters surrounded the building . . . with machine-gun nests. This proves that the action was directed by people who are schooled in diversionist fighting."

Rubble Being Removed.

Warsaw said citizens were volunteering to remove the rubble.

Polish workers launching the uprising shouted for bread, called for the Russians to leave and demanded better living conditions.

The rebels apparently were equipped with plenty of weapons at the outset.

Some unconfirmed reports said Polish troops abandoned their tanks and turned them over to the rebels on the second day of the uprising. Three Frenchmen arriving from Poznan said they saw Communist militamen join the rebels.

Sefton Delmar, London Daily Express correspondent, said in Warsaw two tanks and "several units of infantry" helped workers capture the Poznan radio station Friday morning.

The rebellion "is just about over," Delmar told Merrill Mueller, NBC correspondent at Rome, in a telephone conversation.

TRAFFIC DEATHS OVER 4TH EXPECTED TO BE AROUND 130

CHICAGO, June 30 (AP)— The National Safety Council estimated today that 130 persons may be killed in traffic accidents during the one-day Fourth of July holiday observance this year.

The council joined with the International Association of Chiefs of Police in urging an enforcement crackdown on traffic violators and irresponsible driving behavior. The two groups said that rigid enforcement could help hold the toll to no more than 80—the figure they said is normal for a Wednesday in early July.

The estimate of 130 deaths is for the 30-hour period from 6 p.m. local time Tuesday to Wednesday midnight. It includes only the deaths that occur between those hours and not those who die later from their injuries.

Aboard Downed Plane

MR. and MRS. JOHN MAAG of Los Angeles, passengers on plane that crashed, at their wedding 18 months ago. Maag lived in St. Louis until after World War II.

List of Those On Planes; 16 On Way Here

Sixteen passengers in a TWA plane that crashed in Arizona yesterday in a flight from Los Angeles had St. Louis as their destination.

United Air Lines, operator of another plane that is missing, probably in the same area, told the Post-Dispatch no St. Louisans were aboard its craft so far as was known.

Persons expected by relatives here included the following:

William H. Markey Jr., 401 Tuxedo boulevard, Webster Groves, business manager of the Catholic Hospital Association of the United States and Canada.

Wayne G. Jeffrey, 3620 McKibbon road, St. John, an engineer for the Missouri Research Laboratory whose wife was at the airport.

Sidney R. Joslin of 108 East Fourth street, Hartford, Ill., an employe of the S. C. Dabbs Construction Co. of Granite City. He has two small daughters. Neighbors said Joslin had been in Los Angeles on business and had expected to return last night.

A Miss Alice Meyer of St. Louis was listed by TWA at Los Angeles as having been aboard the plane as a non-paying passenger, meaning that she was an airline employe or a relative of one. A spokesman for the airline in St. Louis said she was not employed here, and that the office had no record of a pass for anyone of that name.

Dennis Phelan, a former St. Louisan who moved to Kansas City about four months ago, also was on the TWA plane en route to Kansas City, where he has been employed by TWA. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Phelan of 203 West Jewell avenue, Kirkwood, and formerly was employed by McDonnell Aircraft Corp. here as an engineer.

Others expected here were:

Miss Janice Haas of Springfield, Mo., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Haas, who drove to St. Louis to meet her as she was returning from a sorority convention.

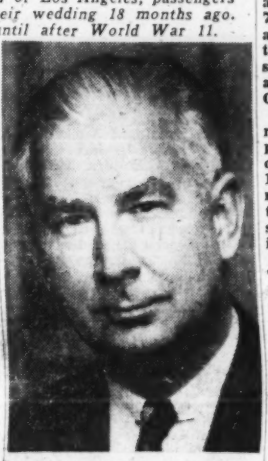

Mr. and Mrs. John Maag and their month-old son. Maag, a Los Angeles real estate dealer, who was awaited at the St. Louis airport by his brother, Walter, of 7009 Rock Hill road, Affton. John Maag moved to Los Angeles from St. Louis shortly after World War II.

J. W. Payne Jr., of Haxton, N. J., awaited at the airport by his brother-in-law, Clarence H. Hughes, 16 Doerschlen lane, Frontenac. Payne was coming to St. Louis from Los Angeles for a visit.

Robert Perisho of Moro Bay, Calif., whose sister, Mrs. Fred Huddelstun of Casey, Ill., was at the airport.

Miss Bessie Whitman of San Francisco, half sister of Mrs. Robert E. Lacy, 5821A Wood-

RELATIVES WAIT WITH ANXIETY AT AIRPORT HERE

The lobby of the big new terminal building at Lambert-St. Louis Field was a scene of agonizing anxiety last night for relatives who went there to meet persons they were expecting on a TWA plane from Los Angeles that did not arrive.

Some stayed on long after the scheduled arrival time, hoping for some word of assurance.

When they inquired at the TWA ticket counter they were referred to Edgar W. Willer, passenger relations representative, who quietly broke the news that the plane was missing and ushered them into an area back from the lobby, there to wait as long as they liked.

The flight was due at 5:57 p.m. Until about 5:30 p.m. it was marked "late" on the flight board, then "more information at 7 p.m.," but at 5:45 all reference to it was removed.

The fact that two planes were missing with 128 persons aboard was not generally known around the lobby.

DOCTOR WATCHING SURGERY GIVES HIS BLOOD TO PATIENT

WASHINGTON, June 30 (UP) — Dr. Kenneth R. Nelson, a Washington pathologist, while observing an operation in a Washington hospital, was pressed into service in an unusual way.

The patient suddenly developed a need for fresh blood of a type hard to get. Nelson, former director of the Washington Blood Center, had that type. He rushed four blocks from the hospital to the blood center and gave a pint of blood. The blood was processed and Nelson himself rushed it back to the hospital.

The patient still was under surgery when Nelson returned and the blood was administered. The whole incident took less than half an hour.

7 ST. LOUISANS OR EX-RESIDENTS HERE BELIEVED ON FIRST CRAFT

Both Planes Left Los Angeles — TWA Ship's Wreckage is Spotted on Butte in Arizona's Grand Canyon.

WINSLOW, Ariz., June 30 (AP)—The wreckage of one of two big airliners which disappeared today on flights east from Los Angeles was spotted tonight in Northern Arizona's Grand Canyon.

Lynn Coffin, chief ranger at Grand Canyon National Park, said the plane was identified as a TWA Constellation carrying 70 persons. Coffin said Pelan and Henry Hudgin, operators of the Grand Canyon airlines, spotted the wreckage from the air about 25 miles northeast of Grand Canyon village.

The brothers said they saw no signs of survivors. They reported that the wreckage was on the side of a butte about 1000 feet above the Colorado river. The wreckage was scattered over the hillside, they said, and two fires were burning in the area.

(Thought to be aboard the TWA plane were seven St. Louisans or former residents of the St. Louis area).

WINSLOW, Ariz., June 30 (AP)—Two huge airliners carrying 128 persons and flying virtually the same easterly route were presumed to have crashed today in mountainous northern Arizona. Sixteen of the passengers on one of them were bound for St. Louis.

By nightfall the planes which left Los Angeles within minutes of each other had been missing for more than nine hours. Military, civil and airline searchers, working both in the air and on the ground, checked into countless rumors of wreckage but found none.

Except for one Air Force plane which continued to scour the rugged terrain on the chance of spotting a fire or flare, the search was halted until sunrise Sunday.

The area over which a Trans World Airlines Constellation with 70 aboard and a United Air Lines DC7 carrying 58 are believed down is a broad expanse of wasteland covering thousands of square miles of high, jagged mountains, deep canyons and parched desert.

(The St. Louis-bound passengers were on the TWA plane. A United Air Lines spokesman said that so far as the airline knew there were no St. Louisans on its plane.)

Clouds Over Area.

Heavy thunderclouds hung over the area during the day, but no one in authority would speculate as to what might have happened to the planes.

United Air Lines and TWA said each plane had enough fuel for 8½ hours when it began its flight. That means both would have run out of fuel about 6:30 p.m., Arizona time.

The TWA Constellation carried 64 passengers, mostly TWA employes or relatives of employes, and six crew members. United's craft had 53 passengers and a crew of five aboard.

The first word that the planes were in trouble came from Winslow, in northern Arizona. The CAA reported it started a search for the planes at 11:46 a.m., after trying unsuccessfully for an hour to establish radio contact.

Wide Search Begins.

As the Air Force, civil aviation authorities and law enforcement agencies throughout northern Arizona organized for a search, there was a flurry of reports that wreckage of one or both planes had been spotted.

The TWA plane left Los Angeles International Airport bound for Kansas City and St. Louis via Daggett, Calif., Trinidad, Colo., and Dodge City, Kan. It was last reported 54 minutes later over Lake Mohave, a desert lake near the California border. Its final destination was Washington, D.C.

The United craft took off three minutes after the TWA plane, headed for New York via Needles, Calif., Painted Desert, Ariz., Durango and Pueblo, Colo., Hutchinson, Kan., St. Joseph, Mo., Joliet, Ill., Chicago, Detroit, Mich., Philadelphia and Newark, N. J. The last report from it was at Needles, Calif., at 10:58 a.m.

Wreckage Report.

The most persistent of the wreckage reports had one or both planes down in the Marble Canyon-Tuba City area at the western end of the vast Navajo Indian reservation.

An Arizona Highway Patrol car started for the area but had

Hagerty's New Target: To Get President Back to White House

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 30 (AP)—White House press secretary James C. Hagerty today thought up a new way to duck reporters' questions regarding President Eisenhower's second-term intentions.

During the three weeks the President was in the hospital in Washington Hagerty had a stock deply to all inquiries on whether the Chief Executive would stay in the presidential race. The reply was: "I have only one interest and that is getting the President of the United States out of the hospital."

An hour after Mr. Eisenhower arrived at his farm home here today after being discharged from the hospital, a reporter asked Hagerty how he was going to answer the inevitable political questions from now on.

"I have a new interest," Hagerty laughed. "I am interested in getting the President back to the White House."

That one could be good for a couple of weeks—the length of time Mr. Eisenhower intends to spend recuperating at his farm.

U.S. OFFERS FREE FOOD TO POLAND WITH RED CROSS ACTING AS AGENT

Herbert Hoover Jr. Acts in View of 'Bread' Riots in Poznan — Dulles Criticizes Russia's Position.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP) —The United States, exploiting the grave troubles facing Communist rulers in eastern Europe, dramatically offered today to ship thousands of tons of free food into Poland.

"The reports of serious disorders in Poznan, Poland, seem to be marked by demands by the population for bread, and we are informed of serious food shortages in Poland," Under Secretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr. said in a letter to Harold Starr, general counsel of the American Red Cross.

Hoover asked Starr to determine through the International Red Cross whether Poland would accept the gift.

Spotlights Poznan Rioting.

The action served to focus new attention on the political crisis which flared in Poland with the rioting at Poznan.

It put the United States in the position of offering help to people whose anger against their present rulers and against Russia is said to be stirred in great part by Russia's drain-off of Polish factory and farm output.

State Department officials said privately today they are convinced that the Poznan uprising has a broad significance for all Communist eastern Europe. They said Soviet domination has lowered living standards and denied political freedom in the whole area and all the satellite people are uniformly affected.

Secretary of State Dulles in a statement released in his behalf by the State Department today said the Khrushchev-Bulganin regime in Russia is now obviously "confronted with grave problems." He said these problems arise partly from the "mounting demands of the subject peoples" and partly from what Dulles called "the solid front of the free peoples."

Dulles's statement was written in comment on Senate approval last night of the Administration's proposed foreign aid bill, at a higher level than the House had voted. Dulles praised the passage, called for funds to carry out the program and said this is a time when "the free nations should not falter."

Letter to Red Cross.

Hoover's letter to the American Red Cross said:

"The United States Government, on behalf of the American people, is ready to make available to the League of Red Cross Societies (the International Red Cross) for free distribution through Red Cross channels to the people in Poland and particularly to relieve the critical situation in the Poznan area, appropriate quantities of wheat, flour and other foods.

"The United States Government would make the food available to the League of Red Cross Societies without cost at an appropriate port of entry in Poland.

"In keeping with our usual requirement that the consumers of American relief grants be informed of the source of the supplies, the food so provided would be labeled for distribution as a gift from the American people."

The American Red Cross said it promptly relayed the offer to the league of Red Cross Societies at Geneva, and was assured it would be transmitted at once to the Polish Red Cross.

State Department officials recalled that Herbert Hoover Sr., before he became President, guided relief work in Poland after the first World War.

Food Appeal to President.

Also today, a group of prominent Americans including two former ambassadors to Poland, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle and Arthur Bliss Lane, addressed an appeal to President Eisenhower "to take urgent steps to ship to Poland 100,000 tons of surplus wheat."

The signers said that as American citizens they were "profoundly moved by the brave effort of the Polish working people to liberate itself from the Communist overlords."

The Poznan riots have engaged the closest attention of top officials here as evidence of general unrest in Communist eastern Europe.

One result of the outburst, in the view of these authorities, may be to cause the Kremlin to put the brakes on the process of relaxing the police state controls with which the satellite countries have been ruled.

The easing of secret police rule has been underway for several months in connection with the downgrading of the late Joseph Stalin. The relaxation was unquestionably one of the explosive elements which led to the worker uprisings in Poznan.

Reports reaching the State Department say another cause lay in the fact that foreign visitors at an industrial fair in Poznan were being shown and supplied with food items which were not available to the people of Poznan.

Plans Boomeranged.

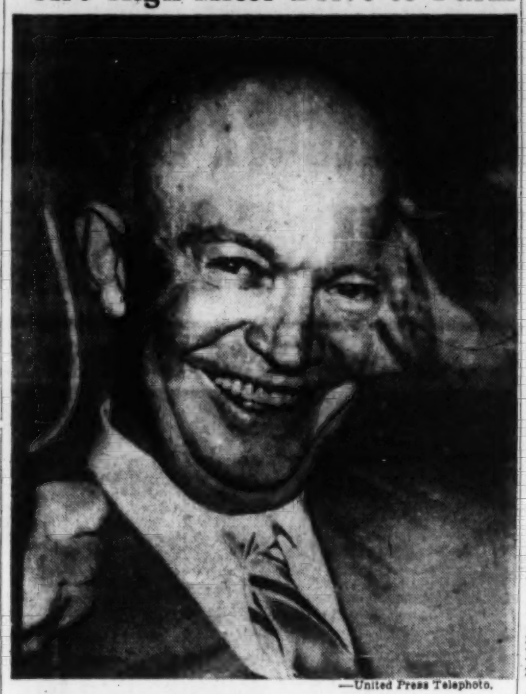

The Red arrangers of the fair appear to have been caught in their own trap on this point; the outbursts they set off shocked the very foreign guests the fair was designed to impress.

Some authorities here said the demonstrations appeared to have been well planned in advance, with evidence of organization quite foreign to spontaneous mob action.

Officials expressed great interest in reports from Poznan that some individual soldiers in military units called out to suppress the demonstrators had thrown their weapons to the crowds they were supposed to fire on. A refusal by troops to kill their own people can present an extremely serious problem for a dictatorship government in a time of political instability and popular unrest.

There is no doubt in the highest quarters here that eastern Europe is now going through such a time. What it will mean in the long run is not clear. How far the instability reaches into the population of the Soviet Union itself is also unclear but there is little doubt that it does.

Eisenhower Tired, but Spirits Are High After Drive to Farm

—United Press Telephoto.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER flashes famous smile as he sits back in automobile en route his Gettysburg (Pa.) farm yesterday.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 30 (UP) — President Eisenhower, pale and weak but in high spirits after three weeks in the hospital, came to his farm home today for "at least" two weeks of convalescence and to weigh his second-term plans.

The President, accompanied by Mrs. Eisenhower and two of his doctors, made the 85-mile automobile drive from Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington in two hours and two minutes. The doctors said he showed natural fatigue but display no signs of undue strain.

His loss of weight — six pounds—was evident, however, and his ruddy complexion had vanished after his stay in the hospital.

The President walked very slowly when he left the hospital and held Mrs. Eisenhower's arm for support. He had a noticeable limp.

Mr. Eisenhower left the hospital three weeks to the day after some of the finest surgeons in the nation had operated on him for an intestinal obstruction which had threatened his life.

While the doctors feel the operation actually increased Mr. Eisenhower's life expectancy, it was bound to cause him to consider his political future once again. He went through a similar period of meditation early this year and decided his serious heart attack last Sept. 24 did not bar him from seeking re-election.

Mr. Eisenhower has said nothing about his political future since his operation. White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told accompanying reporters today that Mr. Eisenhower has not discussed the subject with him either.

Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower were both smiling gaily when they left the hospital. The change of scenery was a big milestone in the President's recovery. It also was the eve of the Eisenhowers's fortieth wedding anniversary.

They expected to celebrate the occasion at a quiet dinner tomorrow night with their weekend guests, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Leonard D. Heaton who are celebrating their thirtieth anniversary. Dr. Heaton, commanding general of Walter Reed Hospital, headed the team of surgeons at the President's operation. It was he who actually performed the surgery.

The Heatons and Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, the President's personal physician, were in the motorcade from Walter Reed to Gettysburg. This permitted the two doctors to keep watchful eye on the President.

Mr. Eisenhower rested his head on a pillow during the journey. He and Mrs. Eisenhower waved happily at Gettysburg battlefield sightseers who cheered as the presidential car turned into the last mile to the farm.

Hagerty told reporters the President undressed soon after arrival and lay down on a sofa bed in his first-floor den.

Dick Flohr, a Secret Service agent and the President's driver, piloted the big White House limousine at somewhat reduced speed and tried to make the ride as gentle as possible.

The 14-car cavalcade created little stir along the route, but a few persons did recognize the President and wave.

Mr. Eisenhower had been expected to leave the hospital a week ago. But Hagerty insisted there was no significance to the extra stay.

A wifely tug on the arm kept President Eisenhower from forgetting his goodby for one of the surgeons who operated on him three weeks ago.

The President was in such a hurry to get out of the hospital that he failed to see Dr. Isidor Ravdin of Philadelphia, standing in the small elevator lobby through which Mr. Eisenhower passed on his way out.

As the President headed for the door, Mrs. Eisenhower reached out and firmly wheeled him around to face Dr. Ravdin. Both men grinned broadly as the President shook the doctor's hand.

POLISH RIOTING GIVES SATELLITE RULERS JITTERS

Radios From Baltic to Black Sea Warn That Any Uprisings Will Be Crushed.

FRANKFURT, Germany, June 30 (AP)—The rulers of Russia's East European satellites appeared today to be haunted by fear that anti-Communist uprisings might spread all the way from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Throughout the Communist-ruled lands, radios warned that rebellion similar to Thursday's bloody revolt in Poznan, Poland, would be dealt with ruthlessly.

The East European Red regimes stressed at the same time that much was being done to improve living conditions.

In Hungary, a Budapest newspaper said:

"We are not going to deviate from our adopted path. The Poznan provocation is bound to fail."

Reports from behind the Iron Curtain said news of the Poznan revolt spread swiftly and had become the subject of excited discussion.

Disorders Denied.

There were unconfirmed reports of disorders in the tiny Baltic countries of Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia—now part of the Soviet Union. But the police chief at Riga, the Latvian capital, denied it and said everything was calm there.

United States Ambassador Joseph E. Jacobs said all was quiet in Warsaw, the Polish capital, 150 miles east of Poznan.

In the Czechoslovak capital, Prague, United States Embassy officials reported all quiet but declined to say whether there were visible signs of excitement or extra police on duty.

Vienna reported too few travelers from Hungary and Romania arrived in the Austrian capital to know many details about the reaction in those countries. In East Berlin, where Communist workers revolted on June 17, 1953, life appeared normal and there were no visible safety precautions.

Excitement in East Germany.

At German border points, travelers from the East German cities of Leipzig, Dresden and Halle said the Poznan revolt had created "tremendous excitement."

Western radios beamed hundreds of broadcasts to eastern Europe, sending messages of encouragement from western governmental and labor leaders.

Not even the most optimistic western diplomats in western capitals appeared to hope that the Poznan revolt would lead to the Polish people regaining their freedom.

In East Germany, the Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland warned the people to remain quiet. It said all "violent enemies" of the regime trying to take advantage of a relaxation of government rule would meet with the iron fist of the state.

B-47 CAN PIERCE ANY DEFENSES, QUARLES SAYS

Air Secretary Asserts New Portsmouth (N.H.) Base Will Be on 24-Hour Alert.

PORTSMOUTH, N.H., June 30 (AP)—Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles said today "we are confident that the B-47 (medium jet bomber) can penetrate any defense existing today to deliver an atomic attack."

In this, Quarles obviously was saying that even Russia's strong interceptor and anti-aircraft defense could not stop the swift bombers from boring into the Soviet heartland to drop hydrogen bombs.

Quarles made this statement in an address at ceremonies opening the new Strategic Air Command base at Portsmouth. He said it would cost more than $70,000,000 when completed. Two wings of B-47s, the workhorses of the bomber fleet until they are eventually replaced by the heavy B-52s, will be based at Portsmouth.

150-Plane Base.

"Some time next year, more than 150 of our big strategic aircraft will be operating from these runways," Quarles said. "We will have some 90 B-47 Stratojet bombers, 40KC-97 tankers, and 8dozen C-124 Globemasteh transports, along with other support and liaison planes. his will give this base more airplanes than you might find in the entre fleet of one of our major commercial airlines.

"Let me give you a picture of how we will use these airplanes to give us global mobility. We are confident that the B-47 can penetrate any defenses existing today to deliver an atomic attack.

"With the KC-97 tankers operating from this base to extend their range by aerial refueling, our B-47s are able to proceed direct to target points and then on to post-strike bases. Alternatively, the C-124 Globemasters can fly men, spare parts and maintenance equipment to overseas bases, making ti possible for us to operate immediately from any base in our overseas system."

Quarles said operations at Portsmouth will be on a 24-hour day, seven-day week basis, with crews constantly alert for take-offs.

The strategic bomber base at Portsmouth, Quarles said, would be protected by Air Defense Command units at Presque Isle Air Force Base, Maine, and Otis Air Force Base, Mass.

By the United Press.

"While we pray that the bombers to be based here may never have to take off on combat missions from these runways," he said, "the American people and our allies can rest more secure. . . .

"This establishment is a threat to no one—its purpose is to deter war and thus to protect us from aggression."

Quarles said these are the "facts of life" in the cold war:

"Our best protection against a surprise attack is to maintain the kind of effective deterrent strength which will make it evident to any potential aggressor that the consequences of aggression against us would be completely unacceptable. . . .

"This is a base of steel and concrete, built to house fighting men. Its runways and hangars accommodate powerful atomic bombers.

"Some might say that this base is dedicated only to destruction. To me, it is a bulwark of peace . . . which heroic Americans have always been willing to fight and die for."

Teen-Age Princess Begins Duties As the Future Queen of Holland

Beatrix Would Inherit Throne if Juliana Abdicated in Reported Rift With Prince Bernhard.

AMSTERDAM, June 30 (AP) —A rosy-cheeked teen-age Princess, at times smiling through tears, today began her official duties as Holland's future Queen. This came at a time when a marital rift was said to be threatening the royal house.

Even as 18-year-old Princess Beatrix was formally introduced to Amsterdam's city fathers, a three-man commission of Dutch elder statesmen was under royal appointment to smooth out difficulties concerning her parents, Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard.

Describing themselves as "disappointed and hurt" at publications abroad of a rift between them, the couple jointly asked yesterday for help and advice of the three-man commission.

One of the commission members made it clear privately that the purpose of their task was to get the couple to smooth out their difficulties and thus end Holland's first public royal family crisis.

He said it was hoped a solution could be found, but he added he could not deny that if a reconciliation is not reached, abdication could result.

In that case, Princess Beatrix would become Queen in place of her mother.

Member of State Council.

The young princess, when she became a member of the state council in February, said:

"I shall prepare myself for the task (of becoming Queen) which I hope and trust lies before me in a yet far distant future."

There was guarded speculation that the royal couple might even consider separation or divorce in case of an abdication. But in Holland, where the royal family represents the best in religious life, that possibility seemed the remotest.

Top persons in both the government and the royal house told foreign correspondents that the Queen and the German-born Prince were "poles apart" and had been so for years.

Three weeks ago the German magazine Der Spiegel told of a rift between the two over the position of Miss Greet Hofmans, a 61-year-old faith healer.

Both the Queen and the Prince called in the faith healer in 1948 at a time of desperation after their youngest daughter, Princess Maria Cristina, now 9, was born partially blind.

Promised Child Would See.

Miss Hofmans was reported to have told the couple that the princess "will see again. God will restore her sight completely within two years."

She was invited to live in the palace so she could be near the child.

However, the child's eyesight did not improve, it was reported, and after the Prince became concerned over the faith healer's close religious association with the Queen, he became angered and ordered her out.

There were repeated reports, never denied officially, that the faith healer continued to see the queen, a deeply religious woman.

"What form and to what extent is Miss Hofman's influence over the Queen," a government spokesman said, "is hard to say.

"One thing is certain, she has never overstepped her constitutional authority as queen, and until she does it is not a matter of the government."

Former Queen Wilhelmina joined the royal party at the last minute today to watch her granddaughter begin her duties as heir-presumptive. The 75-year-old queen mother is to have tried several times to persuade the royal couple to patch up their differences.

BRITISH YOUTHS IN GANG ATTACK OF 4 U.S. SOLDIERS

LONDON, June 30 (UP)—A dozen British teddy boys (zoot-suiters) attacked four American soldiers with broken bottles and bicycle chains last night near the American Embessy. One soldier was taken to a hospital.

Witnesses said the teddy boys drove up in two fast cars, apparently looking for a fight. Police arrested six of them after a running battle.

EAST GERMANY SAYS IT WILL CUT ARMY BY 30,000

Following Soviet Lead —Strength to Be 90,000 Men Instead of 120,000.

BERLIN, June 30 (UP) — Communist East Germany today announced a 30,000-man cut in its new army that will limit it to a total strength of 90,000 men.

The government, following Russia's military manpower reduction, said it decided to reduce its armed forces as a gesture of good will and of its intention to reach a political understanding with West Germany.

The army was officially organized last winter by proclamation. Actually, the core of the army was already in existence in the well-armed East German people's police force.

Some 3000 members of the army in their Hitler-type uniforms paraded in West Berlin last May day in defiance of four-power occupation rules against such displays.

The government announcement said the cabinet decided to limit the 120,000-man prescribed strength of the seven-division national army to 90,000.

It was the first time the Reds even admitted they planned an army that large. No figures had been given before.

The Reds' action followed by weeks the Russian announcement to pull out 30,000 troops from East Germany and demobilize them as part of its announced program of lopping 1,200,000 men from the Soviet military machine.

Western observers said some 350,000 Russian troops still remain in East Germany.

VACANCIES IN APARTMENTS DECLINING, FHA REPORTS

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP) —Vacancies have declined, for the first time in three years, in rental apartment projects insured by the Federal Housing Administration, FHA announced yesterday.

FHA Commissioner Norman P. Mason said the new report, covering 520,000 dwelling units in all parts of the country "suggests strongly there is no widespread surplus situation."

The vacancy rate as of April 1 had dropped to 3.2 per cent. The rate last year was 4.4 per cent and in 1954 it was 3.5 per cent. The showing "demonstrates the need for a sustained level of home building activity," Mason said.

RECEIVER SEIZES BRIDGE AT ALTON, CONTINUES TOLL BUT CUTS IT 10C

Charge Now 15 Cents Instead of 25 — Action Prevents Transfer of Property to Missouri.

The Alton end of the Clark bridge over the Mississippi river was seized by a receiver under an Alton city court order yesterday, a few hours before the bridge was to have been transferred by St. Charles county to the State of Missouri.

Toll collections, at 25 cents per passenger car, were discontinued by St. Charles county as of midnight, but Receiver Paul D. Davey promptly resumed them, at 60 per cent of the old rates, or 15 cents per automobile. The toll station is at the Alton end.

Seizure of the bridge property in Illinois was under an injunction issued by Alton City Judge I. H. Streeper Thursday, ordering the St. Charles county court not to transfer title to the bridge to the Missouri Highway Commission, and not to discontinue tolls.

Both the transfer and toll discontinuance were provided in a contract between St. Charles county and the highway commission approved by the county court last June 5. The actions were in line with the county's promise in 1936, when it bought the bridge for $2,757,000, to free it of tolls after purchase bonds were retired.

Cash for Approaches.

The injunction suit was filed Wednesday by the city of Alton, which contended chiefly that the tolls should be continued to cover construction cost of additional approaches in Alton. Another Alton contention was that elimination of toll collectors would mean there would be no guards to prevent children from wandering onto the bridge, because there is no pedestrian walk on the structure.

Filing of the injunction suit was approved Wednesday night by the Alton city council, after members brought out that Illinois taxing agencies, including Alton, would lose about $22,000 a year in taxes after the bridge became Missouri property.

J. F. Schlafly, Alton attorney and member of the Bi-State Development Agency, told the council the St. Charles county court had "turned a deaf ear" to Alton appeals that toll collections be continued and proceeds used for Alton approaches. He said he spoke in his capacity as a citizen, not representing the development agency.

Plea for New Bridges.

There was no mention of another Alton proposal, either in the suit or at the council meeting, but Alton spokesmen in recent months have urged the St. Charles county court to continue toll collections and use them to finance construction of two new bridges. They would parallel both the Clark and the nearby Lewis bridge, over the Missouri river, thus providing two traffic lanes in each direction.

The county court turned down this proposal after opponents pointed out the county's promise to free the bridge after the bonds were paid off. The Lewis bridge became toll-free in 1951 and was turned over by St. Charles county to the Missouri Highway Commission.

Joseph B. Wentker, special counsel for St. Charles county on bridge matters, declined comment yesterday on what the county court's action would be.

"We are under contract with the Missouri Highway Department to stop collecting tolls at midnight," he said. "We will discharge that obligation." He pointed out that continued collection of tolls after payment of obligations would be a violation of state law.

He declined to express an opinion on the injunction, on the ground that "other interested parties, including the state of Missouri and members of the St. Charles county court," were involved.

Service of the injunction notice was on Leo Maas, bridge manager, at his Alton office. When members of the county court failed to appear in Judge Streeper's court he ordered the injunction to be permanent and named Davey receiver, under $50,000 bond.

The court ordered also that tolls be cut 40 per cent, collections deposited in an Alton bank and that toll collectors and other bridge employes be retained on the job.

St. Charles county had set aside $58,000 in toll revenue as severance pay for the employes, to be paid on their scheduled dismissal last night. Plans for payment, however, had been in abeyance pending determination of legality of severance pay to public employes.

Capturing White Rhinos for Zoo Cost Hunters Injuries, Sickness

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

HEINZ RUHE (seated), German wild animal dealer, chatting with DIRECTOR GEORGE P. VIERHELLER in a visit to St. Louis Zoo.

Member of Animal Collecting Family Tells of Expedition — Two Prizes to Be Shipped Here Next Spring.

The job of capturing two white rhinoceroses, which will be shipped to the St. Louis Zoo next spring, gave five African big game hunters some unwelcome additions to their own private collection of bumps, bruises and other occupational ailments, a German wild animal dealer said here yesterday.

Heinz Ruhe, member of a family which has been in the animal collecting business for about 100 years, said one member of the safari suffered a broken collarbone when the enraged mother of one of the white rhinos charged his truck, overturning it.

Two others contracted malaria and one got a mild case of sleeping sickness, Ruhe said, adding that the ailing members of the expedition last year had to be evacuated from the wilds of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan by plane. This left the remaining hunter to lead 22 natives (and the captured rhinos) on a 15-day trek back to civilization, he said.

Second Largest Land Animal.

Ruhe, interviewed at the zoo, where he was visiting on one of his periodic trips through St. Louis, said the white rhino is the second largest land animal in the world, the elephant being the biggest. The two which will be brought here for the opening of the new elephant house in 1957 will be the first on display in the Western Hemisphere.

Only about 375 white rhinos exist in Africa, Ruhe estimated. Before last year's venture, only four had been captured. They are in zoos in Europe.

Ruhe did not take part in the safari himself, which was led by his brother, Hermann, who operates the family's animal ranch in Tanganyika, and Willy De Beer, a professional hunter. De Beer's son and two nephews went along.

The group caught four baby white rhinos, giving two to the government of the Sudan, a condition on which a rhino-trapping permit was issued. This pair now is in the zoo in London.

Dispute With Milwaukee.

St. Louis Zoo Director George P. Vierheller's acquisition of the other two animals from the Ruhe family caused a minor explosion last March in Milwaukee zoological circles. Zoo officials there, contending they had been offered the rhinos for $25,000, complained that Vierheller bought them "out from under us." What the St. Louis zoo is paying has not been announced.

To capture each baby rhino, Heinz Ruhe said, the hunters loosed a pack of dogs, which chased the mother rhino away. A safari truck then was maneuvered near the baby, which was lassoed, tied and pushed into another truck.

One of De Beer's nephews suffered a broken collarbone when one of the mother rhinos made her vengeful return. The other nephew caught sleeping sickness and De Beer and Hermann Ruhe got malaria.

The two baby rhinos awaiting shipment here are growing fast and are getting tamer all the time, Heinz Ruhe reported.

"Beautiful creatures," he said. "Docile. Compatible. You can ride on them."

ELECTRIC TIMERS PUT INTO SERVICE BY COUNTY POLICE

A program to inform motorists that their speed is being timed electrically was started yesterday by St. Louis county police, who issued 46 warnings and three tickets charging careless driving by speeding. Missouri has no highway speed law.

The timing devices were set up at two places in the county yesterday, at Lindbergh boulevard and Dorsett road, and on Lucas-Hunt road, south of Natural Bridge road. An electric wire sheathed in rubber records the passing of an automobile on a roadside device, which operates in conjunction with a similar device farther along the road. Both operations yesterday were in 40-mile-an-hour zones.

Signs advertised that the devices were in use, thus removing charges that a "speed trap" was in operation. The three drivers receiving traffic violation tickets will be required to appear in magistrate court.

12,212 AT LAST NIGHT'S SHRINE CIRCUS PERFORMANCE

A total of 12,212 persons attended last night's presentation of Moolah Temple Shrine's fourteenth annual circus and fireworks display at Public Schools Stadium, 3001 North Kingshighway.

The circus, which began last night and will continue through Wednesday nightly at 8:15 o'clock, presents 100 acts and 20 major displays. Proceeds will go to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children and 23 other agencies.

EXPRESS HIGHWAY TO CLOSE

The Express Highway will be closed tomorrow from 10 a.m. until noon to permit surveying crews of the State Highway Department to make certain measurements in safety, Director of Streets Frank Kriz announced yesterday.

The measurements are being made in connection with the Market street cut-off and near the western terminus of the highway in Forest Park where the Daniel Boone Expressway will connect with it, Kriz said.

FOUND DEAD, PISTOL IN HAND

Willard E. Gegg, manager of the Libert Auto Salvage parts department, was found shot to death yesterday in the bedroom of his home, 5052 Maffitt avenue.

His wife, Octavia, told police Gegg came home from work and changed clothes. She heard a shot and found him lying across a bed. He had been shot in the head and a revolver was in his right hand. He was 47 years old.

GRANITE CITY CO. AND USW EXTEND STEEL CONTRACT

Any Wage Increase Agreed On in Industry Negotiations to Be Retroactive.

A strike set for last midnight by 3600 AFL-CIO United Steelworkers at Granite City Steel Co. was averted when an agreement for extension of the present contract was reached yesterday afternoon.

A joint statement issued by Lloyd McBride, international representative of the steelworkers, and Lyle F. Gulley, vice president in charge of operations for the firm, said operations would continue at the plant under an indefinite extension of the contract terms.

The extension agreement provides that any wage increase "subsequently granted by the basic steel industry" will be made effective as of today at Granite City Steel.

Other Benefits Also.

The agreement also provides that the Granite City workers shall receive the same fringe benefits in group insurance, pensions and supplementary unemployment benefits as are won by other workers in the basic steel industry. These benefits will be made effective at Granite City on the same date as they are in the basic industry.

McBride and Gulley said the agreement is subject to cancellation by either party on 48 hours notice.

The agreement was reached after it had been approved by 600 union members at a mass meeting yesterday afternoon at the Labor Temple in Granite City.

Negotiators representing the firm and four Steelworkers' locals had been negotiating daily on local issues. Traditionally, the Granite City plant, like other independent steel mills throughout the country, follows the wage pattern set by the "Big Three" steel producers.

Represents New Policy.

McBride told union members yesterday: "This idea of extending the contract is a new policy for the union and it is subject to change depending on developments in other parts of the country.

"We will not let the steel firms play off one part of the union against another."

McBride said the union intends to settle certain outstanding major differences with the Granite City firm.

One of these is the union's belief that the company intends to make Granco, its sales and engineering subsidiary, an operating unit in an effort to terminate jobs here in favor of production elsewhere. The union will oppose any such effort, he said.

The Granite City firm employs 5100 workers. Its current annual rate of production is 1,200,000 tons of steel. The plant has seven open-hearth furnaces, which produce steel, and two blast furnaces producing iron.

A company spokesman said average take-home pay of workers was "somewhat higher" than the average of $2.72 an hour reported for the steel industry in 1955.

An official of Laclede Steel Co., the other major steel mill in this area, said his firm would not be affected immediately by the current industry negotiations because its contract with the United Steelworkers will not expire for two months. Laclede has plants at Alton and Madison, employing 3500 workers.

ALDERMEN GOING INTO GARAGE SITE PROBLEM AGAIN

Condemning Land in Downtown Area to Be Studied Tomorrow by Committee.

Members of the aldermanic committee on zoning will meet tomorrow to continue their studies of bills to provide for condemnation of two sites for construction of city-owned parking garages in the downtown area.

The Board of Aldermen, which had planned to begin its annual summer recess last Friday, has delayed its vacation period for at least two weeks to give the committee more time to study these and related parking measures pending before the board.

Selective Questioning.

Transcripts of a lengthy hearing held a week ago on the condemnation measures have been delivered to the committee. Chairman James W. Noonan said the committee wishes to question more closely some of the witnesses who appeared at the hearing on technical and detailed aspects of their testimony.

Because of the large number of witnesses who appeared at the hearing, it was not possible to inquire into the details of their presentations at the time, he said. The meeting will be at 10 a.m. in the board chamber.

Witnesses who have been invited to attend include representatives of downtown merchants' organizations who favor the measures; private parking lot owners, who oppose them, and engineers for the City Plan Commission and for a consulting firm which made a study of off-street parking needs in the downtown area.

Not all of these will be heard tomorrow, Noonan said, but may be present at the committee meeting, if they desire. The meeting will be open but will not be conducted as a public hearing. Additional meetings will be held, he added.

Hopes to Report July 13.

Noonan stated that he hoped the committee would be able to report on the bills when the board meets again on July 13. At that time the committee will also be assigned a bill introduced last Friday to authorize the issuance of $4,500,000 in revenue bonds for the acquisition of the sites and the construction of the gaarges.

One of the proposed garages would be in the block bounded by Eighth and Ninth streets, Delmar boulevard and Lucas avenue. It would accommodate 642 automobiles. The other would take the block bounded by Broadway and Chestnut, Pine and Sixth streets, and would hold 823 automobiles.

City Should Start Planning New Airport, CAA Man Says

It Is Needed Regardless of Military Traffic, Speaker Asserts — Saturation Point Said to Be Near.

Air traffic in St. Louis has reached the point where the city should start planning a second airport regardless of whether military traffic is removed from Lambert-St. Louis field, D. D. Thomas, deputy director of the Civil Aeronautics Administration Office of Federal Airways, said here yesterday.

Thomas spoke at the Midwest Jet Age Conference at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel, sponsored by the Missouri Wing and St. Louis Squadron of the Air Force Association.

"The CAA has airport control towers at 42 locations in the United States where there are 100,000 or more movements a year," Thomas said. "We feel that at that point it is high time to start planning an additional airport.

"We haven't made a determination of the ultimate capacity of an air field, although some people contend Midway Airport at Chicago, which had about 385,000 movements last year, is bursting at the seams. As a general thing we feel that an airport is starting to reach the saturation point at slightly above 200,000 movements a year, and St. Louis will probably reach that point this year."

194,000 in 1955.

Lambert-St. Louis Field recorded about 194,000 plane movements last year, of which about 62,000 were military. A takeoff or a landing is counted as one movement.

With military flying removed, as has been proposed, Lambert would still have had about 132,000 movements — 32,000 more than the point at which Thomas said the CAA feels a second airport should be planned.

"We in air traffic control work make no distinction as to military or civil traffic," Thomas continued. "It seems to me to be high time to think about a division of the air traffic here.

"Traffic can be split in any of several ways; military-civil, by weight of aircraft, by types of aircraft, by speeds, or any of several other characteristics. Basically that should be a local decision. But if another airport isn't planned here in the near future the city will run into extended delays in its air traffic at increasingly frequent intervals."

Roger Flynn, assistant to the vice president for engineering of the Air Transport Association, predicted that commercial jet airliners will have a low enough noise level to be used at existing airports. Although the saving in time on flights from St. Louis to New York and Los Angeles may not be great in comparison with turboprop planes, the jets undoubtedly will be assigned to schedules here, he said.

Supersonic Flights Barred.

Robert H. Wood, assistant to the president of McDonnell Aircraft Corp. disclosed at the conference that the company's flight department has barred all supersonic flights within a 50-mile radius of St. Louis in a further effort to reduce inconvenience to residents of the area from sonic booms.

As a result "any reports of sonic booms in this area in the future will be attributable to planes other than McDonnell's," he asserted.

He said the aviation industry is "keenly aware" of its obligation to be as "good a neighbor as technology allows," but its paramount responsibility to national security is "to design, develop and produce the world's most advanced aircraft for use in the defense of this country."

Maj. Gen. E. H. Underhill, vice commander of the Air Training Command at Scott Air Force Base, told the approximately 135 persons attending the conference that "it is better to be noisily defended than destroyed by silence."

Pointing out that the jet plane is the most effective instrument of airpower we now have in use, he said we must put up with the noise problem until someone comes up with a noise-muffling device that will not reduce efficiency.

MONDAY LAST DAY FOR REGISTERING VOTERS IN COUNTY

Tomorrow will be the last day when new voters in St. Louis county can register to vote in the Aug. 7 primary election, the county Board of Election Commissioners said yesterday.

The election board office in the courthouse at Clayton will be open tomorrow for new registrants from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. In registrations yesterday, 391 new voters were added to the rolls.

For voters who have moved from one precinct to another, July 17 is the last day for transfer of registration. Transfers may be made in person or by mail. Each member of a family who is of voting age should sign a letter requesting such a transfer, election officials said.

Invisibility for Beer Cans.

MONTPELIER, Vt., June 30 (UP)—A commission studying the problem of highway litter today disclosed a letter which suggested that beer cans be painted tan and green so they will be camouflaged when tossed onto the roadside.

FARMERS 'RILED' OVER REFUSAL OF MARKET PERMIT

Plan to Continue Sales From Sidewalk Pending Showdown With City.

Truck farmers who have been refused permission by the city to operate an outdoor market on a lot at Broadway and St. Louis avenue plan to continue to operate on the sidewalk there "until there is a showdown," Thomas S. Passananti, one of the operators of the market, said yesterday.

"The farmers are pretty riled up over the city's refusal to issue an occupancy permit for this lot," he said. "We don't want anything more than we gave up when our old market at Broadway and O'Fallon was taken as part of the route of the Mark Twain Expressway."

Passananti said he and his brother, Paul, who have leased space on the lot to 30 farmers, installed a lighting system and constructed sidewalks at a cost of $5700. "We're ready to do anything else the city wants in order to get a permit," he added.

C. V. Pregaldin, deputy building commissioner, told the Post-Dispatch the city building code does not allow open-air markets. However, he said, an amendment to the code is being considered to permit operations under sanitary and other regulations.

Richard F. McNulty, Gist road, who was one of 15 farmers to set up produce stands at the lot Friday night, said, "The group doesn't want to defy the city, but we plan to keep on selling until we get some action."

McNulty asserted that a permit never had been required for the previous market where some farmers from Missouri and Illinois had been selling produce for 30 years.

On Friday night, when the group canducted its largest operation, there was no official interference. Police, however, required them to sell only from the sidewalk and not from the lot. The farmers prefer to use the lot in order to sell directly from their trucks.

Passananti said his city permit allowing sidewalk sales expires today. Normally, he said, such permits are renewed automatically, but he expressed concern over whether his renewal would be approved.

BIG GUNS, TANKS APPARENTLY ARE CRUSHING REVOLT

turning to Hannover said the shooting seemed to end after noon.

Travelers Give More Details.

Frightened by what they called the "revolution," a steady stream of Westerners, caught in Poznan where they were attending an industrial fair, continued to come through the Iron curtain today. They brought fresh accounts of the strike and riots which flared Thursday into bloody street fighting and suppression. It seemed doubtful if many of these sources would long be left in Poznan.

There was no indication that the outbreak had spread to other cities or had developed into a major rebellion threatening Red rule, though there were many rumors and reports of unrest at several places.

Communist officials contended everything was "quiet and back to normal" in Poznan today, but admitted there had been fighting yesterday, hours after the Warsaw government claimed the revolt had been crushed.

Sniping Continuing.

Western business men who left the city this morning declared "the rebellion has not yet been fully suppressed."

The unofficial reports indicated bands of rebels still were holed up in various places in the heart of the city with machineguns, rifles and grenades or had been dispersed by tanks and troops to strongholds in the outskirts where they engaged in sniping.

M. Lucien Delsin, a buyer from Muedon, France, one of the few travelers to permit use of his name, said he heard the Red artillery firing sporadically on the center of the city at 9 a.m. when he left Poznan.

"It took an hour and a half for Polish police to escort a group of foreign cars through the military patrols in and around Poznan," he said. "I saw artillery concentrations on the outskirts of Poznan and from time to time I could hear them firing on the center of the city."

He declared the rebellion was "very terrible" and the number of dead and wounded "must be very high."

Widely Supported in City.

Two Portuguese business men said that when their train pulled out of Poznan at 1 a.m. today, the "shooting was still as strong as ever." They said foreigners in Poznan were convinced the outbreak was not mere rioting but a full-fledged "revolution."

They said the taxicab driver who took them to the train station last night mentioned the same figure of 400 to 600 killed that they had heard at their hotel. They said they were "convinced that 99.9 per cent of Poznan's population (of 365,000) supported the revolution."

The Portuguese said they left their hotel for the train at 6:30 last night but had to wait until 1 a.m. for the train to depart.

On their way to the station, they said, they saw "all street corners guarded by machinegun teams. Tanks were stationed at all strategic points. We heard several bangs that sounded like big gunfire from tanks but we saw no tanks actually fire. There was plenty of rifle fire to be heard."

It was the most violent outbreak behind the Iron Curtain since the East Germans revolted on June 17, 1953.

Reports indicated thousands of tank-led troops swarmed through the scarred city streets while tommygunners combed the roof-tops for machinegun nests and weapons hidden by the rebels. Communist troops and police jailed hundreds of defiant workers in the uprising, according to West German businessmen.

Hundreds of women and even children joined men in overalls in storming Communist citadels in the city and fell bravely under army gunfire with the slogan "give us bread and freedom," the Business men said.

Children Reported Involved.

The Germans and two Swiss businessmen said Poznan was electrified by persistent reports that the Red security police had opened fire on one column of marching children and killed 80 of them. The businessmen never obtained conformation of these reports. One eyewitness said: "After the main fighting was over the dead were carried away in trucks. Some foreigners helped carry wounded to the hospitals in their cars."

"Police fired right into one mob that was trying to capture the security police building," one businessman said. "Children were in front of the people. This made the people so angry that many of them charged the building completely uarmed."

The eyewitnesses said workers returned to their jobs yesterday but many staged a sort of sit-down strike. Foods stores reopened but stocks were low.

POLICE ORDER LT. JOSEPH TO DETAIL INCOME

Edward L. Dowd several years ago sent him a letter of praise for his work in vice prevention here.

Lt. Joseph joined the police force in 1931. His early assignment was in the Traffic Division. Transferring to the Secret Service Division, he became a detective sergeant in 1943 and four years later was promoted to lieutenant when he took charge of the Morality Squad. He continued at that job until 1952.

In this assignment, he had many brushes with operators of taverns, night clubs and cheap hotels. He was sued for $30,000 by a woman who alleged false arrest. She dropped the suit after the Police Department stood behind Lt. Joseph and hired lawyers to defend him.

For a time in 1953 he headed one of two "flying squads" formed to combat crime in outlying districts. His 10-man squad operated out of the Page boulevard District.

Answering a call that burglars were in a restaurant in the 3100 block of Easton avenue on July 24, 1953, Joseph shot and wounded a 17-year-old youth who fled when police arrived. Two others were arrested in the restaurant.

Now attached to the Magnolia District as a uniformed officer, Joseph has lately been on frequent sick leaves. He is 47 years old and lives at 7420 Jeanene avenue.

GAS WARKERS GO ON STRIKE WHEN DEADLINE PASSES

ferson 1-2458; FRanklin 1-0277, and FRanklin 1-0278.

Asked about the King-Thompson law, which is designed to prevent or halt strikes in public utilities, Appelbaum said the union had always considered the law unconstitutional.

"We believe it violates our right of collective bargaining and our right of free speech," he said. "We are going to exercise our rights, guaranteed to us by federal law, of withholding our hire if we are unable to get an agreement with the company, and I am very pessimistic over the likelihood of it immediately."

For the last week, Commissioner Arthur R. Hale of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service had been meeting with the parties to the Laclede dispute.

Robert W. Otto, board chairman of the company, said the company had offered to arbitrate the dispute because a strike would result in serious inconvenience and possible danger to the community. He said the union had refused to arbitrate.

Seeks To Maintain Flow.

"In the event of a strike, the company expects to be able to maintain the flow of gas to all customers so long as nothing out of the ordinary occurs," he said.

"It must be understood, however, that we shall have only a handful of people to operate a system requiring more than 2500 employes. We shall not be able to provide anything like regular service to our customers, nor shall we be able to begin to cope with any emergencies."

Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the State Mediation Board, arrived yesterday from Jefferson City. He said he was here as an observer in order to keep Gov. Donnelly fully advised of the situation as it develops.

Rogers is the public member of the five-man State Mediation Board. Other members are two employer representatives, C. Robert Stockhus of Kirkwood, director of labor for Union Electric Co., and Truman Henry of Lee's Summit; and two labor members, Albert Fults, 7042 Jamieson avenue, and John A. White, St. Joseph.

Under the King-Thompson law, the Governor is authorized in the event of a strike in a public utility to seize the property and operate it in the name of the state if he finds the strike threatens the "public interest, health and welfare."

The dispute centers on two policies of the company. One is discontinuance of sale of space heating equipment and the other is to permit installers of heating equipment to make the connection to the fuel line. Previously the company's employes made these "riser" connections.

Because of the dispute over these alleged violations of the current contract, the union negotiators have refused to discuss the terms of a new contract to take its place after tonight, Otto said.

Otto said the company had proposed a wage increase of 4½ per cent "or an average increase of 10 cents per hour."

Three union locals are involved in the negotiations. They are No. 6, production workers; No. 109, foremen and supervisors, and No. 194, office workers.

STEELWORKERS GO ON STRIKE, 650,000 ARE IDLE

ing contracts expiring at later dates or not affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

It was estimated that the production loss each week of the strike would be 2,100,000 tons —worth $273,000,000 at current prices.

Committee Meeting.

McDonald said the union's 170-member wage policy committee would meet in New York at 11 a.m. tomorrow after which he would leave for Pittsburgh, "unless something happens to keep me here."

The negotiating teams had been at work a month, struggling to thresh out terms for a new contract replacing the one which expires at midnight tonight.

The strike prospect arose at a time when many steel companies were at work expanding facilities to boost their production, now nearly 130,000,000 tons annually but still short of the demand.

For all practical purposes, this kingpin of American industrial life was already at a standstill.

The sprawling mills throughout the country two days ago began cooling their furnace fires and easing off operations. This was necessary to prevent cracking of the mammoth crucibles and other damage to facilities.

The Government has made plain that it isn't going to get into the dispute—unless, possibly, there should be a long strike.

Effect on Economy.

A long strike could stagger the nation's economy. Even a short one would bring great difficulties for some other industries.

Construction, for one, would be hit immediately. It already has been pinched by shortages in structural and heavy plate steel.

Another is the oil industry. It has only a small backlog and would suffer immediately if supplies were cut off. Some companies already have halted the drilling of new wells.

Railroads, which depend on steel and associated industry shipments for much of their revenue, would be hit hard right off.

On the Great Lakes, 8000 to 9000 crewmen on iron ore freighters would be knocked out of work within a few days.

It would take longer to affect other industries, such as automobile production, canning, home appliance manufacturing and farm equipment production. These have enough steel to keep going a few weeks.

Eventually, though, a strike could be felt in almost every home across the land—so dependent is the nation on its steel industry.

The issues in the case were clear.

The union wanted a "substantial" pay boost and numerous other benefits.

The companies wanted a contract lasting at least four years and four months. The companies say they need such a contract to maintain industry stability.

The union is against a long contract, but hasn't said just what it would be willing to agree to.

It asked for such other benefits as double pay for Sunday work, time and a half for Saturdays, a 52-week layoff pay plan, company paid insurance and other items.

Company Offers.

The companies offered a 7.3-cent hourly direct wage increase each year for five years, a 52-week layoff program, 4 per cent premium pay for Sundays and various vacation, holiday, insurance and other benefits.

The union had termed the industry offer "too little and too late."

Children's Home Bazaar.

The annual picnic and bazaar of the Jewish Children's Home will be held next Sunday from noon to midnight on the grounds of the home, 6630 Oakland avenue. Proceeds will be used to cover expenses not met by the United Fund budget appropriation.

Water Glass Fire.

JEWISH GROUP BUYS 108 ACRES IN COUNTY

New Y.M.H.A. Building Planned at Lindbergh, Schuetz Road.

Purchase of a 108-acre tract in St. Louis county, at Lindbergh boulevard and Schuetz road, as the site for a new Y.M.H.A. building, was announced yesterday by Bernard Fischlowitz, president of the Jewish Community Centers Association.

The price paid for the land was not announced, but it was reported that cost of the site and improvements was estimated at $2,000,000.

The tract, at the northwest corner of Lindbergh and Schuetz, fronts 2200 feet on Lindbergh and runs 2500 feet west. Fischlowitz said the association plans to provide facilities for outdoor activities and a parking lot, in addition to the new building.

"The trend for leisure-time programming today is recreation for the family as a unit, not only for the son, daughter or the parent," he said.

Plans are to inaugurate family memberships as well as individual memberships, and provide a number of programs for family participation, he said.

Earlier this year the association sought a permit to erect the new Y.M.H.A. building in Olivette. The permit was denied by the Olivette Board of Trustees on the ground the request failed to comply with building ordinances.

HEART DISEASE BOOKLET

The St. Louis Heart Association announced yesterday it is distributing free copies of a booklet on coronary heart disease by Dr. Paul Dudley White, who treated President Eisenhower.

Anyone wishing this booklet, or other literature on heart disease, is requested to write the association, 2174 Railway Exchange building or telephone it, GArfield 1-3456.

'ISRAEL SECURITY MONTH'

July has been designated "Security Month for Israel" in St. Louis as part of a national program to sell $30,000,000 in State of Israel bonds, Nathan Shever, local bond drive chairman, said.

Shever said the crisis in the Middle East, which affects the people of Israel, must be met by economic action on the part of the St. Louis Jewish community. The bond drive will be concluded at a meeting July 25 at 8:30 p.m. at the Clayton Community Center in Shaw Park.

U.S. AGENCY CASH TOPS REQUESTS BY HALF BILLION

Unusual for Election Year — Virtually All Bills Cleared by Congress.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—Thanks to a generous Congress, federal agencies start the new fiscal year of 1957 tomorrow with $500,000,000 more in appropriations than they had requested.

It is an unusual situation for an election year in which, traditionally, members generally delight in boasting about economy.

It is unusual, also, in that all of the regular annual appropriations bills have cleared Congress before the Government new fiscal year starts. In recent years, many departments have started the new year on emergency funds because their regular appropriations had not been passed.

Only two appropriation bills had not been finally acted on when the old year ended today. They finance the foreign aid program and appropriate supplemental funds for miscellaneous agencies.

For the agencies financed in the regular bills, President Eisenhower requested about $52,400,000,000. Congress appropriated about $52,900,000,000, due largely to the generosity of the Senate.

The House cut $751,200,000 from the President's requests, but the Senate boosted them $694,900,000. Compromises resulted in a net increase of $519,300,000.

While the budgets of many departments were reduced, those of a few others were increased, the biggest boost being more than half a billion dollars in Defense Department funds.

How Congress Met Requests For Department, Agency Funds

ENGINE QUITS, RED SKELTON, 55 OTHERS ON PLANE SAFE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30 (UP)—A four-engined Pan American clipper, with comedian Red Skelton and 55 other passengers aboard, landed without incident at San Francisco today after flying the last 600 miles of the 2000-mile trip from Honolulu on three engines.

As on his first performance two weeks ago, when his plane was forced to return with engine trouble shortly after takeoff for Honolulu, the red-haired comic kept his fellow passengers amused with his antics and remarks. Again today, when the plane's engine went bad, Skelton took center stage and was the life of the party.

When the pilot radioed that he was having trouble. He did not request an escort. However, as a "precaution," the Coast Guard dispatched an amphibian patrol plane which met the clipper 300 miles off the coast and returned with it to San Francisco.

FRENCH CAPTURE 100 TOP REBELS IN ALGIERS BLAST

Six Hurt in Explosion of Gas at Meeting Preceding Roundup by Police.

ALGIERS, June 30 (AP)—French police said tonight they had arrested more than 100 Algerian rebel leaders after escaping gas exploded in their secret headquarters. The police said the rebels were organizing a demonstration and general strike.

The building was the old headquarters of a moderate nationalist party, the Democratic Union of the Algerian Manifest. Its leader, Ferhat Arbas, has gone over to the rebels. He was thrown out of Belgium yesterday for holding a news conference about rebel demands.

Police and firemen rushed to the wrecked building, in the center of Algiers near the Roman Catholic cathedral.

Six of those attending the meeting were reported seriously injured. They were taken to a hospital under guard. The others were jailed.

The police said the meeting was discussing plans for a demonstration and strike scheduled for July 5, the 126th anniversary of the surrender to the French of Hussein ,last day (ruler) of Algiers.

Rebels ambushed a civilian bus on a road of the high Sahara and killed or kidnaped all its passengers and its military escort, reports received here said.

Reports said five members of the military escort and two civilians were killed. Seven members of the escort were said to be missing and presumably prisoners. All were French.

The rebels set fire to the bus before leaving the site, between Geryville and El Abiod, about 190 miles south of Oran.

The attack was the first serious operation by the rebels in this area, which is east of Ain Sefra in the Ksour mountains. It is on the route the rebels have been using to smuggle arms from Libya to their guerillas in the Tlemcen mountains near the Mediterranean.

Elsewhere in the Oran area the French fought an all night engagement with a rebel band near Slissen, a railroad point about 30 miles south of Sidi Bel Abbes, headquarters of the French Foreign Legion. The French said they killed 20 rebels and took 36 weapons.

7791 More U.S. Employes.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—Senator Harry F. Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, reported today the number of civilian employes of federal executive agencies totaled 2,367,409 in May, an increase of 7791 over the preceding month. This was the fifth monthly increase since August of last year, Byrd said in a report as chairman of a Senate-House Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Expenditures.

EXTRA AIR FUNDS NOT EXPECTED TO BE IMPOUNDED

Saltonstall Thinks Cash Will Be Spent—O'Mahoney Opposed to Shelving.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (UP)—A Senate Republican expert on military affairs predicted today that President Eisenhower would not impound the extra $900,000,000 Congress voted the Air Force.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, told reporters he is confident the Air Force will be permitted to use the money. He is the ranking Republican member of the Senate Armed Service Committee and the defense appropriations and air power subcommittees.

Some Democrats fear Mr. Eisenhower may impound the funds as former President Truman once did. Mr. Eisenhower may announce his decision when he signs the $34,600,000 defense appropriation approved by Congress yesterday.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and other top Pentagon officials have contended the Administration's Air Force budget is adequate for national security. However, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Strategic Air Commander, and other air commanders have asserted that more money is needed to keep Russia from gaining air supremacy.

Wilson to Testify Again.

Wilson added to the fears of the Democrats by labeling the extra appropriation a "phony." He will be questioned about whether the money will be spent when he goes back before the air power subcommittee Monday.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, said it would be "a totalitarian act" for Mr. Eisenhower to shelve the funds.

"I don't think they will be impounded," Saltonstall said.

The Air Force is "now on an austere basis" as to its plane procurement program," he added. He was sure it could use more money in the 1957 fiscal year which starts tomorrow.

Of the $900,000,000 total, $800,000,000 would be for new planes, especially jet intercontinental B-52 bombers. It would be impossible to get delivery on all the $800,000,000 worth of new planes within the 12 months but an appropriation is required before orders can be placed for later delivery.

Favors More B-52s.

Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem.), Washington, said that talk that the Air Force cannot use the money "is nonsense." He said testimony before the air power subcommittee showed that B-52 production could be stepped up to 46 a month, more than double the Administration's schedule.

Orders placed now, he said, will insure delivery of more B-52s before 1960, the year when LeMay warned that the danger of the Russians gaining air supremacy would be greatest.

Jackson said also more jet tanker planes are needed to refuel the medium-range B-47 bombers which now are the backbone of the strategic air force.

RUSSIA REPORTED OFFERING VATICAN CO-EXISTENCE PLAN

ROME, June 30 (UP)—Roman Catholic sources said tonight that Russia has offered a "coexistence" proposal to the Vatican.

The sources said the riots in Poland were believed to have added urgency to the Kremlin's reported plan for a "religious peace" campaign. They said Russian diplomats believed that better relations with the church could help ease tension in Poland and other predominantly Catholic nations in Eastern Europe.

The Vatican had no comment on the reports.

Intersecting Routes of Airliners

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Black lines indicate routes of two airliners reported overdue yesterday on flights from Los Angeles to Kansas City and New York. The United Air Lines DC-7 was bound for New York via Chicago, and the TWA super-Constellation was en route to Kansas City. Both planes failed to check in before crossing Arizona's barren Painted Desert.

PORTUGAL OFFERS WESTERN ALLIES USE OF 2 BASES

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

LISBON, June 30—Portugal has placed at the disposal of the United States and other western allies two strategically important air bases on its territory.

Col. Fernando Santos Costa, minister of defense, made this announcement in an interview. He said the decision was reached after the United States and other Atlantic Pact members had suggested expanding the airfields at Montijo and Espinho.

"Work on the bases to provide the necessary additional features will begin shortly," Col. Santos added.

He said under the terms of the agreement, Portugal's western allies will be permitted to use those two bases to carry out their obligations as members of the Atlantic Alliance.

"Portugal quickly agreed to enlarge the two bases" in view "of certain recent international developments she felt might have an adverse effect on the system of western defense," Santos said. He did not say what developments he referred to but it was clear he was alluding to the possibility that the United States bases in Iceland and North Africa might not be available in the future.

RUSSIA OFFERS APOLOGIES FOR ARRESTS IN EMBASSY

MOSCOW, June 30 (AP)—The Soviet government apologized today for arresting two persons on the grounds of the West German embassy.

Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily Kuznetzov also told Ambassador Wilhelm Haas the Soviet government would do all in its power to prevent Russian police from interfering with persons trying to reach the embassy to apply for repatriation to West Germany.

Haas went to the Foreign Ministry to protest against what the Germans have called "hindrances" placed in the way of persons claiming German citizenship who seek embassy aid in leaving the Soviet Union. An embassy spokesman said he assumed the two arrested persons had been released.

LIONS ELECT WISCONSIN MAN AS THIRD VICE PRESIDENT

MIAMI, Fla., June 30 (AP)—Clarence L. Sturm of Manawa, Wis., was elected third vice president of Lions International today and is scheduled to become president of the 542,000-member organization in 1959. He defeated Dr. Dan J. V. Martin of Greenville, O.

John L. Stickley of Charlotte, N.C., took over as president, succeeding Humberto Valenzuela of Santiago, Chile.

Edward G. Barry of Little Rock, Ark., is the new first vice president and Dudley L. Simms of Charleston, W. Va., moved up to second vice president. The vice presidents automatically step up one rank at each year's international convention.

DULLES AT ISLAND RETREAT FOR SIX-DAY VACATION

WATERTOWN, N.Y., June 30 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is at his retreat on Duck island in Lake Ontario for a six-day vacation that will include the Fourth of July.

He arrived here last night in a military plane and transferred to a private plane for a short hop to the island.

He said a plane would be kept in readiness here and if necessary he could return to Washington within a few hours.

PLANE CARRYING 70 CRASHES IN GRAND CANYON

not reported to its headquarters several hours later.

The planes entered the desolate area within 50 miles of each other where the Colorado river divides Arizona and California. The terrain ahead ranged from the Grand Canyon—the world's biggest gorge—to the San Francisco Peaks—Arizona's highest mountains at 12,000 feet.

The terrain features sparsely populated ranchlands, Indian reservations and forestlands with few communities, few roads and virtually no communications.

Military and civil authorities wrestled with these problems as they quickly organized search parties.

Hamilton Air Force Base in northern California sent two Albatros planes to take part in the hunt. The air search and rescue service at March Air Force Base, Riverside, Calif., sent a helicopter and two Grumman SA-16 planes to the area. Luke Air Force Base near Phoenix contributed several planes. The Civil Air Patrol was helping out and United Air Lines dispatched a Convair from Denver.

All Arizona law agencies were alerted.

Could Be Worst Disaster.

The total number of persons aboard two planes raised the possibility of the worst commercial air disaster in history in event they may have collided or otherwise been involved in a single accident.

The worst commercial crash in history was that of a Venezuelan airliner off New Jersey's coast June 20 in which 74 persons died. The worst air disaster ever was the crash of a military C124 at Tokyo in 1953, killing 129.

A TWA spokesman said there had never been a fatality on a scheduled Constellation flight in the continental United States since that type of plane was put into service in the early 1940s.

BRITISH MAY CUT TROOP STRENGTH IN WEST GERMANY

LONDON, June 30 (UP)—Britain may reduce its troop strength in West Germany because the Bonn Government will pay only a little more than half the support cost, informed sources said today.

The problem would have to be taken up with other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization first.

Defense Minister Sir Henry Monckton announced to Parliament yesterday that West Germany agreed to pay about $95,000,000 toward the support of British troops stationed in that country.

This figure, Monckton said, meant Britain would have to kick in $84,000,000 to meet the total cost of the troops for 1956-57.

This was a heavy blow to the government's plans to slash spending by $280,000,000 this year.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Harold Macmillan was reported determined to go through with the pledged reduction, however, and cutting troops strength in West Germany would be one way to do it.

MOLLET BLASTS 'MEGALOMANIA OF COL. NASSER'

LILLE, France, June 30 (UP)—French Premier Mollet tonight accused Egyptian Premier Nasser of suffering from "megalomania"—delusions of grandeur.

In some of the strongest language yet aimed by a high French official against Egypt, which many French feel is aiding the Algerian rebels, Mollet said "I denounce the megalomania of Col. Nasser."

"He hopes to line up behind himself not only the Arab world but the entire Moslem world. One would think oneself back in the Middles Ages. Today, pan-Islamism is a threat to peace."

Mollet spoke at a rally of his Socialist party which has been split over his policies against the rebels in Algeria. The party conference will vote tomorrow on separate resolutions approving and condemning Algerian policy.

SOVIET EMBASSY ATTACHE IS TOLD TO LEAVE ARGENTINA

BUENOS AIRES, June 30 (AP)—Argentina declared the Soviet embassy's naval attache persona non grata tonight and ordered him to leave the country within 24 hours.

The Foreign Ministry announced the decision on the attache, Capt. Alexander D. Morosov. It did not say why the action was taken.

JAPANESE THEORIES ON BIKINI AREA TESTS

Say Second H-Bomb and Uranium-Wrapped Plutonium Bomb Were Tried.

TOKYO, June 30 (UP)—Japanese scientists theorized today that the United States has tested a uranium-wrapped plutonium bomb and exploded another hydrogen bomb at a new high altitude in the Bikini area.

A scientific team returning from a 35-day voyage in the Pacific said it obtained Plutonium 239 and Uranium 237 from the atmosphere twice during the voyage.

"The ashes were very fine," the report said. "Probably the explosion was caused by using a plutonium core and natural uranium covering."

The report apparently was another reference to the "super uranium bomb" which the group claimed earlier, in a message from the Pacific, that the United States set off June 13.

A second group of scientists expressed the belief that shock waves recorded on instruments at Kyodo University Tuesday, June 26, came from a hydrogen blast at an altitude of more than 10 kilometers.

This would be slightly more than six miles up—three times as high as the first aerial hydrogen-bomb explosion which was witnessed by American newsmen May 21.

The Kyodo scientists said Tuesday's pattern of shock waves recorded on Japanese instruments was the same as those registered May 21 and 28. United States officials have neither confirmed nor denied the Japanese claim of the hydrogen explosion on May 28.

URGES CITIZENS HELP PUSH ATOM WORK

Lawyer Describes Success of Committee Set Up in Texas.

Citizens committees organized on a state-wide basis can stimulate the interest of industry, universities and the public in the potential value of a strong atomic energy research and development program, Frank Norton, a Dallas (Tex.) attorney said here yesterday.

Norton, who spoke to members of the American Bar Association's atomic energy committee at the Park Plaza Hotel, described the work in Texas of the citizens group he heads, appointed last year as an advisory body by Gov. Allan Shivers.

He said his group was working on an nuofficial basis to change the attitude of Texans toward atomic energy from "bad" to "good."

As an example of the "bad climate," he said that some Texas landowners had fired shots at persons prospecting for uranium.

On the other hand, Norton said, some of the large oil and gas concerns are taking a strong interest in the uses of atomic energy in petroleum research, on the theory that new products may be developed.

He added that some oil executives were evidently convinced that this potential value of atomic energy outweighted the possibility that eventually atomic power might replace oil and other fuels for heating purposes.

The Bar Association committee, headed by Clyde O. Martz, professor of law at the University of Colorado law school, concluded a two-day meeting. The group, in closed session, prepared a report on legal and other aspects of the atomic energy program which will be presented to the association's annual convention at Dallas in August.

New Railways in Red China.

HONG KONG, June 30 (AP) —More than 300 miles of railway have been built in Communist China this year. The Peiping radio reports that since 1953 about 2240 miles have been constructed and only 112 miles remain to be completed to fill the five-year plan quota.

ST. ANN GROUP'S BENEFIT HORSE SHOW IS TODAY

A benefit horse show sponsored by the St. Ann Lions Club will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. today at John Elzea's establishment, Lindbergh boulevard about a mile south of St. Charles road, St. Louis county. More than 200 entries will compete for trophies and prizes in 13 events.

Proceeds from the show, under the direction of the Illmo Club, will be used to help finance the club's youth activity program. The youth program is in operation for children without cost from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays for a nine-week period at St. Ann and Mary Ridge parks.

ST. LOUIS U. DISCUSSION

A panel discussion on "Trends on the Secondary Level" will be held at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the second of three educational conferences offered this summer at St. Louis University. The meeting will be held in DuBourg Hall, 221 North Grand boulevard.

Speakers on the panel will be John J. O'Brien, assistant professor of education; A. G. Conrey, associate professor of education, and Miss Mildred Hiller, lecturer in education.

FIRED COUNTY POLICEMAN SUES FOR REINSTATEMENT

Obren S. Koprivica, 1112 Ralph terrace, Richmond Heights, who was discharged from his job as a patrolman in the St. Louis County Police Department last September following an altercation with former police Lt. Harris R. Haycraft, filed suit in circuit court at Clayton yesterday seeking reinstatement in the police department.

Koprivica, who is working as a deputy under Constable Orien Litzinger, Second District, alleged in the petition that he had been discharged by former Police Superintendent Albert E. DuBois without being told the grounds for dismissal. He further alleged the St. Louis County Board of Police Commissioners later upheld DuBois, although the board's evidence was "unsupported by competent evidence."

Koprivica had tendered his resignation to DuBois after the altercation with Haycraft in which Haycraft drew his revolver and two shots were fired. DuBois, however, refused to accept the resignation and, after investigating the dispute, fired both men.

MATHEWS AID TO FILL COUNTY LEGAL VACANCY

William B. Kline Named Acting County Counselor to Replace H. C. Funke.

William B. Kline, administrative asistant to St. Louis County upervisor Luman F. Matthews for the last five months, is been named Acting County Cunselor to fill a vacancy caued by the resignation of Herbe C. Funke, Matthews announce yesterday.

Funke anounced his resignation, effctive today, in order to campam for the Republican nominatio for Circuit Judge.

Prior t becoming Matthews' administitive assistant, Kline was an asistant county counselor, a pst to which he was named 1 January, 1954. He lives wh his wife and two children at 1718 Liggett avenue, Webster Groves.

Kline 34 years old, is a gradua of St. Louis University Scol of Law. His duties as Mathews' administrative assistan have been to assist the supervsor in all legal matters and i the preparation of plans for arious projects in the $39,72,000 bond issue of 1955.

Assistant county counselor, he hd been active in advising the ounty council on the legal step involved in a parcel-by-parel reassessment of all county al estate. He is a Republican Te position of administrativ assistant to Matthews will be aken by John M. Blayney, 841 Gannon avenue, University Cit, an assistant county counselorfor the last two years, Matthws said.

I announcing his resignatio, Funke wrote Matthews th he intended to make a viprous campaign for the jucial nomination.

e said the office of county conselor was a full-time job an he expressed the belief the campaign would prevent him frm doing justice to the impotant duties of that post.

APPEAL GOING OUT TO BEGIN CLEAN-UP DRIVE DOWNTOWN

Letters urging the speedy refurbishment of the city's downtown area will be mailed tomorrow by the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis to all downtown building owners, managers and first-floor tenants.

Starting the drive to promote a general face lifting of the city's central business district, the chamber urged the recipients to give attention to cleaning buildings, painting, new store fronts, planting boxes, more attention to cleanliness of sidewalks and alleys, attractive window displays and neat, attractive parking lots.

Sam Michelson, chairman of the chamber's Downtown Renovation Committee, wrote: "Downtown can prosper—and property values can be preserved—only to the extent that we attract people into the area, and we can attract people only if we make downtown attractive."

The area to be covered by the campaign extends from Third street to Eighteenth street and from the alley south of Market street to the alley north of Washington avenue, plus the area bounded by Twelfth street, Delmar boulevard, Washington and Broadway.

17TH WARD ROOSEVELT CLUB FOR RIVAL DEMOCRATIC SLATE

The Seventeenth Ward Franklin D. Roosevelt Club, a Democratic factional group, announced yesterday its indorsement of candidates in opposition to the incumbent Democratic ward leaders.

The club, headed by Alderman Joseph Roddy, who has broken with Robert E. Crosby, committeeman, and State Representative Jennie S. Walsh, committeewoman, is supporting J. Lorne Buschman for committeeman and Mrs. Edward J. Bueltmann for committeewoman.

The group also is backing Mrs. Evelyn G. Stone for the Democratic nomination for State Representative. Mrs. Walsh is seeking renomination for the Legislature and re-election as committeewoman at the Aug. 7 primary, and Crosby is seeking re-election as committeeman.

JOHN WAYNE SIGNS FOR $666,666.66 PAY PER PICTURE

HOLLYWOOD, June 30 (UP) —John Wayne, a one-time football player who parlayed his rugged outdoor looks into movie box office success, revealed yesterday that he is now the highest-salaried star in the world—$666,666.66 per picture.

He told the United Press he has signed a history-making contract with 20th Century-Fox studio. It calls for the untalkative hero of the sagebrush and adventure movies to collect $2,000,000 for only three pictures to be made within the next three years.

Figuring an average of eight weeks' shooting schedule per picture, Wayne's gross paycheck will average out to almost $100,000 per week. Many top stars receive that for an entire movie.

Wayne said the salary, apparently for tax reasons, will be paid over a 10-year period at $200,000 a year. Thus the actor, who was 49 last May 26, could practically retire for life after making the three pictures for Fox. But, he said, "I won't. I want to keep on working."

Wayne's salary has not been approached by any other stars. Jimmy Stewart reportedly reaped nearly $500,000 on a percentage-of-the-profits deal with Universal-International Studio, but Wayne's money is strictly salary.

GREECE REBUFFS SHEPILOV, TURNS DOWN INVITATION

Leaders Reaffirm Their Unity With West in Refusing to Visit Moscow.

ATHENS, June 30 (UP)—Greek government leaders handed Soviet Foreign Minister Dmitri T. Shepilov the first rebuff of his maiden diplomatic tour today by refusing his invitation to visit Moscow.

Instead they reaffirmed their unity with the West.

Greek Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff said in a communique that a visit to Russia by himself and Premier Constantine Karamanlis would not be "constructive" at this time.

Averoff pointedly reaffirmed Greek support of the West and its obligations to the Western community as a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It was Shepilov's initial public setback. He flew to Athens from a tour of Egypt, Syria and Lebanon. The heads of the three Middle East governments formally accepted his invitations to travel to Moscow for state visits.

At a news conference, Shepilov said his talks here had been "sincere and fruitful." He added that there were "differences of opinion between the Greek and Soviet governmnts on some international problems but no insuperarbel obstacles to the development of friendly relations."

He said he offered Soviet co-operation in the development of the Greek economy and he denied that Greece is threatened from the Communist north.

He also said he invited Averoff and Karamanlis to Moscow because he placed great faith in personal contacts for development of friendly relations. Nevertheless, they refused.

Averoff said that while Greece wants to "improve" relations with Russia, the time is not yet ripe for state visits.

"An official Soviet invitation should be extended when prerequisites are established to make the visit more constructive," Averoff said.

Shepilov will fly home tomorrow after his "unofficial visit." He was welcomed in Greece with cordial, if extremely formal, protocol. A number of Greek newspapers, mindful of the Communist rebellion of 1948, were openly critical of him.

The visiting Soviet diplomat conferred with Greek officials on his announced intention of promoting "mutual" trust and understanding.

INSURANCE AGENT CONTRACT

NEWARK, N.J., June 30 (AP)—Negotiators for the Prudential Insurance Co. and its 15,000 agents have agreed on a three-year contract calling for an average $5.71 a week salary increase. The agreement, announced by the company yesterday, covers agents in 34 states and Washington, D.C.

Following the company announcement, a spokesman for the insurance agents' international union declared union members would start voting July 9 whether to ratify the contract. It would be a week before results of the vote would be known, the spokesman said.

Here's Why Rock Wool Insulation Is the Best Money Can Buy

Homart Spun Rock Wool is entirely of mineral composition and thus not subject to decay or disintegration. It's vermin proof and fireproof—not just fire resistant—it will greatly reduce the hazards of a roof fire spreading to lower rooms.

4 inches of Spun Rock Wool is the equivalent of 16 inches of solid wood or 70 inches of brick in insulating value and efficiency.

It's Easy to Figure Cost on Installing Rock Wool

Just multiply the length by the width of your house (outside measurements) and then multiply by 12c. If you have any doubts about your particular problems call your nearest Sears store and let a qualified salesman advise you on figuring an estimate.

Be Cooler with Homart

Rock Wool Insulation

Blown In to a Depth of Approximately 4" in Attic Area

FOURTH OF JULY TO BE MARKED BY TRIPS, PICNICS

Stores, Offices to Close Wednesday — Fire-Works Planned — Safety Plea Made.

St. Louis area residents will mark the 180th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence Wednesday with public fireworks displays, picnics, motor trips, sports and loafing or puttering at home.

Somewhat larger than usual attendance at observances here is expected this year, since the holiday falls in mid-week and relatively few persons will be able to stretch it into a week-end out-of-town.

Meteorologist Harry F. Wahlgren's reluctantly given long-range forecast was for a partly cloudy day with likelihood of showers and an afternoon high near 90. "It's just a wild guess," he warned.

City and state offices in the St. Louis area will be closed all day Wednesday. The federal building will be closed to the general public except those having business with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Stores to Be Closed.

Department stores and most other business establishments will be closed, as will banks and stock and grain exchanges. Except for special delivery communications, there will be no mail deliveries. Only one collection of mail will be made.

B. H. Sweeney, president of the Greater St. Louis Safety Council asked chiefs of police in the area to crack down on speeding because of the tendency of some motorists to attempt to drive too far too fast on one-day respites from work.

He said he hoped the Memorial day safety mark in Missouri would be equaled this Independence day. On May 30 there were no traffic fatalities in the state.

St. Louis police will make a determined effort to track down sources of "bootleg" fireworks by interrogating persons setting them off.

Fireworks, except those of the "safe" or non-explosive kind, are prohibited by law in St. Louis. Fines for sale or use of illegal fireworks range up to $500 in the city.

Fines in the county, where most municipalities bar fireworks, range up to $1000. The county has also barred sale or use of fireworks in its unincorporated areas.

Illinois Attorney General Lathem Castle yesterday urged a state-wide crackdown on illegal fireworks. Only sparklers and certain paper caps can be sold in the state. Retail sale or use of all other fireworks without local permits is barred.

Fireworks Displays.

Largest of several public fireworks displays here will be those at Public Schools Stadium, 3001 North Kingshighway, winding up the six-night run of Moolah Temple's fourteenth annual circus, and the Clayton police and fire departments' seventeenth annual celebration at Washington University's Francis Field.

All tickets for the Clayton pension benefit have been sold. Special "daylight" fireworks will be used to entertain smaller children who are put to bed at dusk. In the event of rain, the display will be held on the next clear night.

A 90-minute fireworks display will begin at 9 p.m. at Chain of Rocks Amusement Park, 10783 Lookaway drive, Glasgow Village. Admission to the park and to the display is free.

A holiday schedule will be observed at St. Louis Zoo shows. Elephants will perform at 10:30 a.m., lions at 11 a.m. and chimpanzees at 12 noon. The three shows will be given simultaneously at 2 and 4 p.m.

More than 200 extra men will help regular park police patrol picnic areas in Forest, Carondelet and O'Fallon parks to prevent disturbances. In Forest Park, Municipal Opera will present "Hit the Deck," with music by Vincent Youmans, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

The Cardinals will play a doubleheader at Milwaukee. The telecast of the first game will begin at 1:30 p.m. over station KTVI (channel 36).

RABBI J. H. MILLER HONORED

Rabbi Julian H. Miller of B'Nai El Temple here has been honored by the Central Conference of American rabbis on his fiftieth anniversary in the rabbinate at the annual meeting of the conference in Atlantic City, N.J., it was announced yesterday.

He was made a life member of the conference, and was presented a citation by Rabbi Barnett Brickner of Cleveland, president of the conference.

Quarreling Factions of Union, A. O. Smith Plant Chiefs to Meet

Mayor of Granite City Calls Parley —Boilermakers Ask Strikers to Return to Jobs.

A meeting of quarreling factions of Boilermakers Union Local 575 and representatives of the A. O. Smith Corp. plant at Granite City, where a group of employes and international officers has been living inside picket lines, has been called for tomorrow.

Requests to attend the meeting were issued yesterday by Mayor Leonard Davis of Granite City in an effort "to get the two sides together."

Yesterday the group of boilermakers who have spent the last six days inside the plant issued a statement calling on striking members of the union to return to work through picket lines set up by the machinists union.

Fred George, an international representative who led the back-to-work group, pointed out that the boilermakers' contract with the firm contains no-strike and no-lockout provisions.

"By law we are bound to respect that contract," George said. "No one likes to cross another union's picket line, but we are obligated by law to servict and live up to our contract."

Won't Do Others Work.

Although urging an immediate return to work, George said, boilermakers would not perform any work usually handled by machinists at the plant. The auto body works was struck by machinists last June 16.

When the machinists' picket line was observed by nearly 1500 boilermakers employed at the plant, operations were shut down. The back-to-work movement by a group of about 75 boilermakers came last Monday on orders from the international union.

The international representative said "hundreds" of calls were received at the plant yesterday from striking boilermakers requesting that they be allowed to return to their jobs.

George, whose group was joined by about a dozen boilermakers who returned to their jobs yesterday, predicted "a sizable number" of employes will return to work tomorrow and Tuesday. By mid-week, normal production should be resumed, he said.

No Interference.

He indicated the men inside the plant would not leave despite the fact that pickets yesterday began allowing persons to pass without interference. Only eight pickets were on duty at three plant entrances yesterday.

Edward Groshong, attorney for the striking boilermakers, warned against any effort by the company to hire non-union members to replace strikers. He said he understood the firm planned to call in men from nearby small towns who previously had applied for work.

"If the company does that, I don't know how we're going to keep down violence," he said.

Striking boilermakers, who contend it is traditional in Granite City to respect legal picket lines, have demanded the recall of George.

Plan to Disaffiliate.

They also have under consideration a proposal to disaffiliate from the international and form an independent union, in a second effort to regain control of their local affairs.

Yesterday the company announced it was mailing notices to all employes "we want" that they may apply for re-employment. Approximately 1475 boilermarkers fired last Monday will lose their seniority if rehired, the company said.

A hearing has been set for Tuesday in circuit court at Edwardsville on an order to the union to show cause why it should not be cited for contempt for failure to observe terms of an injunction barring mass picketing. A hearing has been set for the same time on a union motion to vacate the injunction.

RUSSELL BACKS JOHNSON FOR DEMOCRAT NOMINATION

ATLANTA, Ga., June 30 (AP) —Senator Richard Russell of Georgia has indorsed Lyndon Johnson of Texas,, Senate majortiy leader, for the Democratic presidential nomination and also warned those he termed "radical Democrats" not to attempt to drive the South out of the party.

The Georgian, an unsuccessful candidate for the presidential nomination in 1952, said Johnson is the "best hope" the South has for a candidate sympathetic to the Southern viewpoint on civil rights and Jeffersonian principles of democracy.

Mexican Government Bonus.

MEXICO CITY, June 30 (AP)—Most government workers will receive a 10 per cent bonus in July to help offset the rising cost of living. Abelardo de la Torre Grajales, head of the Federal Workers Union, says President Ruiz Cortines has ordered the extra pay for 240,000 of the nation's 300,000 government employes.

TAXES FOR HUGE ROAD PROGRAM TO START TODAY

Gasoline, Tires, Trucks Affected—Work on Projects Predicted Within 60 Days.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—Taxes on gasoline and other items for highway users go up tonight at midnight to help finance an immediate start on the biggest road-building program in the nation's history.

Emphasizing speed in getting the 33-billion-dollar program under way, a Federal Bureau of Public Roads official confidently predicted: "We'll be clearing trees, moving dirt and paying out money within 60 days—and certainly before Oct. 1."

President Eisenhower signed the bill late yesterday.

Rex Whitten, chief engineer for the Missouri State Highway department, said in Kansas City that "Missouri is all ready to go." He said his state began planning two years ago in anticipation of the program.

Other States at Work.

A roads bureau official said other states also have been working on detailed plans and "within two or three weeks we probably will begin getting a bunch of applications."

In the next fiscal year, starting tomorrow, Missouri will be allotted $27,086,494 for interstate highways and $3,479,048 for primary, secondary and urban highways. Illinois will receive $47,148,832 for interstate highways and $5,576,612 for other roads.

The interstate highway federal aid, totaling approximately one billion dollars, will be augmented by approximately $110,000,000 in state funds; on the primary, secondary and urban highways the matching will be on a 50-50 federal-state basis.

The program calls for construction of 41,000 miles of interstate superhighways in the next 13 to 16 years and additional thousands of miles of urban and connecting intrastate roads.

Taxes on Gas, Tires.

For the motorist the first noticeable effect will be the tax increase. He will feel it tomorrow in an increase of 1 cent a gallon in the federal gasoline tax. The same boost applies to diesel fuel for trucks.

The present 5 cents a pound tax on tires goes up to 8 cents; retread rubber will be taxed for the first time at 3 cents a pound; the manufacturer's excise tax on trucks, busses and truck-trailers goes up from 8 to 10 per cent; and truckers must pay $1.50 a year per 1000 pounds for any truck weighing 26,000 pounds or more.

These tax increases, effective until 1972, will yield an estimated $14,800,000,00. They will be added to present motoring taxes amounting to about 23½ billions for that period to make up a highway trust fund of about 38½ billions for the pay-as-you-go road building project.

U.S. TO CARRY OUT BIG AIR DROP IN THE ANTARCTIC

AUCKLAND, N.Z., June 30 (AP)—Eight United States Air Force Globemasters with a maintenance base in New Zealand will conduct the biggest air drop yet attempted in the Antarctic.

The Air Force will set up a maintenance camp for some 250 men at Harewood. The Globemasters will drop about 500 tons of supplies at the South Pole for a United States scientific base which will begin operations there early next year as part of America's participation in the International Geophysical Year program.

The airmen will reload from cargo ships at McMurdo sound and run an air drop shuttle service to and from the Pole. While four planes are thus engaged, the other four will undergo maintenance at Harewood.

The first Globemaster is expected to arrive in Christchurch in September.

AWARDED FELLOWSHIP FOR PHYSICAL THERAPY TEACHING

Miss Lorraine Frances Lake, a medical student at Washington University, has been awarded a fellowship valued at $8022 for physical therapy teaching, it was announced yesterday at Jefferson City by the Missouri headquarters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Miss Lake, who lives at 5475 Cabanne avenue, was one of three medical students in the state who received fellowships. Two others valued at $600 each were awarded to Charles Stephens and Stafford W. Pile Jr. for work at the new University of Missouri medical school at Columbia.

Stephens will engage in a study of public health and preventive medicine and Pile in a study of physical medicine and rehabilitation.

COUNCIL ON CIVIC NEEDS TO HEAR TWO SPEAKERS

Julian C. Spotts, superintendent of the National Park Service, and Alfred Stern, managing director of the Mid-America Jubilee, will speak at the annual meeting of the General Council on Civic Needs in the auditorium of the Automobile Club of Missouri, 3917 Lindell boulevard at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Spotts will discuss plans for the development of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial. Stern will outline plans for the Mid-America Jubilee to be held on the riverfront in September. He will show slides of proposed exhibits and the layout of the grounds.

NAVY ROCKET GOES UP 163 MILES, SETS NEW WORLD MARK

WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUND, N.M., June 30 (AP)—Officials at White Sands Proving Ground yesterday announced a new world's record for a single-stage Aerobee-Hi rocket—163 miles above the earth's surface.

The United States naval ordnance missile test facility said the previous record of 158 miles was set by a Viking II rocket in May, 1954.

The firing of the Aerobee-Hi rocket was made in connection with research and direct scientific measurement of the earth's outer atmosphere for the International Geophysical Year of 1957-58, officials said.

Yesterday's Aerobee-Hi rocket carried special radio devices used to probe the ionosphere, which begins 35 miles above the earth.

Yesterday's successful firing of the Aerobee-Hi rocket followed several failures in the past months to exceed the old record.

New Colombian Destroyer.

MALMO, Sweden, June 30 (AP)—The second of two destroyers ordered by the Colombian government was launched this year. They are 2730-ton vessels of the Swedish Halland class. Officers and cadets from the Colombian navy are being trained here.

Knowledge of Stiff Sentences Deters Juvenile Crime, Dowd Says

Cites Recent Example of Life Term Given to Boy, 15, Which Stalled Similar Vicious Acts.

Potential young criminals are deterred from vicious acts by the knowledge they can be given life sentences even though they are juveniles, Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd said last night in a radio talk.

A marked drop in juvenile crime of a brutal nature here followed the publicizing of a 15-year-old's life sentence to a penitentiary 18 months ago for statutory rape, he said.

Juvenile offenders follow crime news and this is shown by the fact that, for four or five months after the 15-year-old was sent to the penitentiary, there were no similar juvenile crimes in the St. Louis area, he said.

Dowd agreed with the Rev. William G. Poepperling, who took part with him in a panel on delinquency broadcast over radio station KXOK, that the present juvenile officer policy of the St. Louis Police Department needs revision.

Father Poepperling, pastor of Holy Guardian Angels Catholic Church, said it is physically impossible for juvenile officers to become familiar enough with offenders in their large territories, including up to three police districts.

Favor Old System.

He and Dowd both favored the system of one juvenile officer for each district. This was dropped three years ago on recommendation of the Social Planning Council on the ground the juvenile officers were not doing police work but social work, Dowd said.

Unhealthy results followed the re-assignment of officers who had grown to know chronic offenders and could keep them in line by frequent checking, the speakers said.

In another discussion of youth problems here yesterday, Circuit Judge Michael J. Scott declared the "real answer" to growing rowdyism and delinquency is a program of prevention.

At the same time, he declared, authorities and the courts must "hit vigorously and quickly at the leaders of the young groups that are committing these offenses."

Judge Scott, who has presided in St. Louis juvenile court for 10 of his 20 years on the bench, made his recommendations while speaking on the "St. Louis in Action" program on Radio Station WEW.

Discussing the problem of juvenile delinquency with him on the program was Dr. Val B. Satterfield, psychiatrist and St. Louis Police Department consultant, who said that the lack of adequate parental supervision was one of the leading causes of crimes by young offenders.

Dr. Satterfield said some parents could be forced to become more concerned about their children's habits if they are legally responsible for their children's acts, and required to pay damages for their vandalism.

He agreed with Judge Scott, however, that many of the youthful offenders come from "broken homes," and that parental supervision and responsibility is often lacking in such instances.

Senate Committee Hearings.

Meanwhile, three staff members of the Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency were in St. Louis yesterday making arrangements for public hearings here Friday and Saturday on the St. Louis problem.

James H. Bobo, general counsel for the Senate Judiciary subcommittee, said the hearings will be held at the Federal Building, and that interested persons will be invited to appear and present their views.

Those who will be invited to testify, he said, will include Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, clergymen of the three major faiths, police and probation officers. Altogether, about 24 or more will be heard, he said.

"What we have noted in other cities," Bobo said, "is a change in the nature of juvenile offenses—a trend toward motiveless beatings and toward vicious, violent and brutal crimes.

"We will look here for a possible duplication of effort such as we have found elsewhere when central direction was lacking."

The hearings are being held at the suggestion of United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem), of St. Louis, a member of the subcommittee. Bobo said Hennings will attend the hearings, but that he would not know until next week whether other members of the group will be here. They are Senators Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, chairman; Price Daniel (Dem.), Texas; William Langer (Rep.), North Dakota, and Alexander Wiley (Rep.), Wisconsin.

Here with the subcommittee counsel are Carl Perian, research director, and Martin Mayes, chief investigator of the subcommittee.

Study in County.

A study of juvenile delinquency in St. Louis county is being made by Arthur E. Prell, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology at Washington University. The research based on records and current cases in St. Louis county juvenile court, is being conducted in co-operation with Circuit Judge Noah Weinstein, who is presiding in that court.

Assisting Prell are Harry J. Crockett Jr., a member of Prell's department, and Ralph Smith, county probation officer. The work was made possible by contributions from Donald L. Barnes, Joseph Sunnen, Charles H. Yalem and Dr. John S. Young.

Vacation Time Can Promote Juvenile Crime, FBI Head Says.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said today the vacation season is "the most critical period in the campaign of juvenile crime prevention." It offers major opportunities either to curb or promote delinquency, he said.

"The leisure hours of summertime can breed additional criminal recruits or cultivate future leaders of our nation. Co-operative adult attention to channeling the limitless drive of juveniles into character-building activities can well decide this issue in favor of society," Hoover wrote in a signed editorial in the July issue of the FBI's law enforcement bulletin.

Asserting that well-planned youth clubs, summer camps, recreation groups and athletic leagues offer prime opportunity for spending excess energy and spare time, Hoover said:

"Communities which provide the opportunities, facilities, incentive, and supervision for wholesome activities for young citizens reap the benefits of 'youth clubs' rather than the devastation of 'youth gangs.'"

BLAIR-FOR-GOVERNOR UNIT IS ORGANIZED IN COUNTY

Organization of a St. Louis County Blair-for-Governor Committee, with headquarters at 7903 Forsyth boulevard, Clayton, was announced yesterday.

Co-chairmen of the group, supporting Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. of Jefferson City for the Democratic nomination for Governor, are Roberts P. Elam and Carroll J. Donohue, attorneys.

James M. Douglas, former judge of the Missouri Supreme Court, will head the speakers' committee. Mrs. Irvin Dagen and Miss Dorothy Dennis will be co-chairmen of the women's committee.

Advice on Longevity.

MONTREAL, June 30 (AP)—A New York fashion expert says men would live longer if they changed their clothes more often. Jacob Solinger of the Fashion Institute of Technology advises men to take a tip from women who change dresses several times daily. It gives a lift and relieves tensions of modern life, he says.

3,971 Hospital cases prove . . . leading doctors agree

From a World Famous Hospital Comes Startling Medical News! A new, gentle—Far More Effective Form of Iodine! Proved by hospital clinical work on over 3,971 patients, Proved safe Even in Babies' Throats! Yet so effective it has cured cases that even defied antibiotics!

NEW PAINLESS IODINE STOPS INFECTION FAST!

Won't burn or sting the wound! No poison label!
Safe...even if swallowed accidentally!

Revolutionary ISODINE the full-potency antiseptic . . . containing the new "complexed" iodine . . . soothes wounds, promotes healing like no other antiseptic does!

LABORATORY-TESTED AND PROVED UP TO 40 TIMES FASTER THAN TWO LEADING ANTISEPTICS IN KILLING GERMS

ISODINE Antiseptic, the painless, high-potency iodine, is now available to your family! This safe, new "complexed" iodine gives the full antiseptic power of iodine — for the first time in a gentle form. Gone is the burn of iodine — with ISODINE.

Doctors hail ISODINE Antiseptic because:

1. ISODINE does not irritate or blister skin.
2. You can safely bandage over ISODINE.
3. ISODINE retains full potency

The secret of Isodine is the remarkable achievement of "complexing" elemental iodine with a great discovery, polyvinylpyrrolidone.

WORKS CONTINUOUSLY AGAINST INFECTION!

ISODINE forms a brown film over the injury that protects continuously as long as the color remains. When the color fades, that is ISODINE'S built-in signal to apply it again.

WHY YOU SHOULD GET ISODINE TODAY!

Scientific fact! Ordinary iodine loses germ-killing potency — deteriorates on the shelf. Other antiseptics may fail to protect, so infection develops. ISODINE is full-potency when you buy it — gives full protection every time! Throw out old-style antiseptics that fail to stop infection! Get ISODINE® Antiseptic.

SO GENTLE THAT BANDAGING IS RECOMMENDED

AN OPEN LETTER TO PHYSICIANS

Since Davies' first report on iodine in 1839, it has proved a useful antiseptic against bacteria, viruses, fungi, protozoa yeasts and spores.[1] Detoxified and non-irritating[2-4], Isodine Antiseptic is an aqueous solution containing polyvinylpyrrolidone iodine-complex[5] (PVPI) as the active ingredient.

As a topical antiseptic, it has been under clinical observation for over three years and used on more than 3,971 patients in the Outpatient Department and Inpatient Services of a leading New York hospital, as well as in Private Practice. No clinical signs of retardation of healing or iodine burn have been reported — even when bandaged.

It is felt that the non-selective, broad spectrum activity of Isodine makes it a valuable adjunct in both hospital and private practice.*

Stand-Pat Positions Said to Have Led to Breakdown in Steel Talks

Sessions Had Pattern of Encounter of Wills Rather Than Usual Give-and-Take Atmosphere.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 30—Breakdown of the steel negotiations followed a series of bargaining sessions which followed a pattern of an encounter of wills rather than an atmosphere of give and take traditionally conducive to successful collective bargaining.

For the first time in recent years leaders of the nation's steel industry presented a united front, presenting an offer and then sticking to it in all substantial aspects. The union stood equally pat on determination not to sign a five-year contract offered by the industry. Both sides were subjected to internal pressures.

Announcement by David J. McDonald, president of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers of America, that the companies had advanced a "take it or leave it" proposition, modified only by an offer to reduce the contract term by eight months with sorrespondingly lowered benefits was not disputed by either side. McDonald observed that the companies had been more a "adamant" than previously, including last year's settlement.

Steadfast Position.

The companies steadfastly maintained a position that their long-term contract proposals with wage increases and other benefits spread over that period would constitute a brake to inflationary employment costs. Five years of industrial peace, they maintained, would enable them to continue their expansion programs with ascertainable labor costs and maintain a steady supply of steel.

The primary sticking point in the conferences — which were unusually abbreviated since inception May 28—was the length of the contract, although the entire proposal was regarded as a stumbling block by the union.

The union which traditionally insists on a two-year contract, took the position that a five-year contract would mortgage the futures of its membership, that it would not be flexible enough to take into account industrial changes occasioned by automation, economic developments, or changes in the international situation should this nation be forced to go on a war economy.

Intra-Union Policies.

Intra-union policies also affected the situation. McDonald was faced with the fact that unions in two allied industries, automobiles and coal, do not have long-term contracts. His union politieal foe, Walter P. Reuther, head of the AFL-CIO United Automobile Workers, now operates under a three-year agreement with the steel consuming automotive industry, after general membership dissatisfaction was expressed over a previous five-year contract which was hailed at time of its negotiation by Charles E. Wilson, then president of General Motors, now Secretary of Defense, as a stabilizing force in the industry.

John L. Lewis, head of the independent United Mine Workers of America, also operates under a flexible contract arrangement permitting of extensions and modifications of basic agreements with the coal operators. Lewis was one of the organizers of the Steelworkers Union and has maintained close relationships with its leadership.

No U. S. Intervention.

Unlike the practice in some previous years, conferences between the union and management were carried on by representatives of both sides. There was no federal intervention nor were there "fact-finding commissions" of clergymen, educators or others outside of the industry involved in the controversy.

The public, except inasmuch as part of the public is composed of management and part of labor, was not represented, although it foots the bill when settlements are finally reached and prices go up.

The country now is faced with a strike which may be protracted in an election year. It is the first major industry-wide walkout of consequence to take place in the Eisenhower Administration. The Administration did not invoke the 80-day "cooling off period" provided by the Taft-Hartley law nor did it invoke assistance of mediators, although they were available if called on.

Neither side requested their services. In view of the patently stand-pat positions evidenced during the negotiations the current $64 question is—What did they talk about?

PREMIER MUFTI SUBMITS RESIGNATION IN JORDAN

AMMAN, Jordan, June 30 (AP)—Premier Said Mufti submitted his government's resignation to King Hussein today after a three-hour cabinet meeting. It was the seventh to resign in 20 months.

King Hussein has started consultations for formation of a caretaker government which will supervise new elections.

The monarch dissolved Parliament June 26 at Mufti's request. The Premier reported the government had noticed in recent days that some members were grouping together to create difficulties for personal reasons.

Own Your Own Vacation Spot
only 30 MINUTES FROM ST. LOUIS
Lake Lorraine
The Ideal Vacationland You Have Always Wanted
Only 30 minutes away from St. Louis a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence.
Among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County there will soon be a 50-acre lake of clear, sparkling water, with picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do.
The same men who developed Lake Montowese and Fond du Lac are building Lake Lorraine, near Goldman, Missouri, less than 26 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road). One small lake is now stocked and ready for fishing.
Lodge sites vary in size from 50x150 feet and up. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge site prices start at $650, and may be bought on convenient terms.
Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed —and will be maintained—for Lodge Site owners and their guests.

RESERVE BANK CITES HIGH BUSINESS LEVEL

Production Large Despite Cut in Farm Equipment, Tire, Auto Production.

Business activity during June in the Eighth Federal Reserve District held close to the high level of the previous months, despite major cutbacks in farm equipment and tire production and in automobile assembly, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported yesterday.

Industrial production generally was at a fast pace, the bank said, although the fall-off in the automobile, tire and farm equipment industry resulted in increased unemployment in some areas. Expanding construction activity filled this gap, however, and employment in most of the district's major labor markets increased from April to May.

Construction contracts awarded in the district in May gained 28 per cent over May 1955, the report stated. During the first five months this year they totaled $588,000,000, an increase of 6 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

"In general, factories and mines in the Eighth District continued to produce at relatively high levels in June," it was stated. "Steel ingot output in the St. Louis area for the month was 98 per cent of rated capacity. Both southern pine and hardwood production increased seasonally and were running ahead of last spring's output."

It was reported that livestock slaughter in the St. Louis area declined seasonally during the first three weeks of June, but was about one fourth larger than in the comparable period last year.

Growing conditions were generally favorable for farmres in the district, but prices of major products weakened slightly in the four weeks ended June 22. However, average farm prices continued slightly above the year's earlier levels.

With over-all employment and income at high levels, the bank said spending continued at a rapid pace for most goods, except for automobiles and farm equipment.

WOMAN DIES WHEN TRUCK BLAST SETS FIRE TO 10 HOUSES

CINCINNATI, June 30 (UP)—A truck with 7500 gallons of gasoline overturned and exploded on a residential street today, setting fire to 10 houses.

Mrs. May Barnett, 42 years old, her home threatened by flames house-top high, died of a heart attack.

Police said apparently no one was injured in the accident. Firemen, however, dug into the wreckage to make sure that nobody had been killed in the fire.

Police said that the accident occurred when the rear trailer of a double-trailer Sunoco truck overturned and burst into flames. The truck was turning a corner. Five automobiles were destroyed.

Larry Whitaker, the truck driver, was uninjured.

"I think I hit a high sewer lid," he said. "I think it broke a spring on the rear trailer.... I wasn't going fast, not over 20, I guess, but it flipped over."

Fire Chief Barney Houston said the coupling on the second trailer apparently broke but that the chains still holding the double-hitched vehicle helped flip the heavy fuel trailer like the end of a whip.

NIXON SAYS REDS' PEACE MOVES PUT U.S. IN DILEMMA

'If We Accept Uncritically We May Invite War,' He Declares in Miami Speech.

MIAMI, Fla., June 30 (AP)—Vice President Nixon told the convention of Lions International today the free world is faced with a "painful dilemma" in rejecting the "so-called peace moves" by the leaders of Soviet Russia.

"Many nations may consider us as warmongers" when we do this, he said, but "if we accept . . . uncritically, we may weaken our alliances and thus invite the very war we seek to avoid."

Nixon told the Lions the riots in Communist Poland, in which Warsaw radio said 48 persons were killed and 270 wounded, illustrate the "modern type of colonial imperialism the Communists have imposed."

Speaking of the claims of Russian leaders that the Soviets desire peace, he said this country must tell the world "as we have, that we are always ready to listen to words of peace, but that we will act only when these words are followed by deeds."

No Guarantee, He Says.

Much of Nixon's talk dealt with Russia's professed desire for peace, but he said its performances offer "no guarantee that will allow us to relax our defensive preparations."

The Vice President said the dilemma the free world faces can be solved by telling the world "as we have, that we are always ready to listen to words of peace, but that we will act only when these words are followed by deeds.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

The Vice President, fresh from a consultation with President Eisenhower, said the United States should not be "naive" but must keep up its military guard while seeking to inform millions of captive people, including the revolting Poles and other satellite populations, of its peaceful intentions.

Burden of Proof on Russia.

"Some complain," Nixon said, "that the policy of the United States is too firm, too rigid. But a firm policy will not discourage the Kremlin if it really seeks peace. The leaders of Russia are realists. They know that in the light of past history the burden of proof is on them. For nearly 40 years we have had various changes and twists in Soviet policy. But events have always proved that these changes were deceptive. They were aimed to mislead the free world and too often they succeeded.

"Surely we can not be charged with being calloused and indifferent to the cause of peace if we bear these facts in mind. I am sure that the very Communist leaders who proclaim peace and co-existence would despise us as weak-minded if we did not demand the most rigorous proof that conditions had really changed in the Communist world."

The Vice President made it clear he was speaking without partisanship, noting that "no political party has a monopoly on patriotism or on devotion to the basic objectives all Americans share—of keeping our country strong, our people free, and the world at peace."

Consulted Eisenhower.

He conceded that there is "understandable and honest disagreement among equally well-intentioned men as to what our policy should be" during the so-called "New Look" Soviet policy. He did not say he spoke with the blessing of President Eisenhower, but it is known that the contents of his address—Nixon's most important one to date in the foreign policy field as the probable running mate of the President as in 1952—was cleared in advance during a conference yesterday with the President.

Following his speech to the Lions, Nixon left Miami by military plane for a 10-day trip around the world. After a brief stop in Los Angeles for a visit with his father at Whittier, Calif., Nixon and his wife, Pat, will fly to Manila to help celebrate the 10th year of Philippine independence. From there, they will fly to Viet Nam, Saigon, Calcutta, Arabia and Rome.

STATE INCOME TAX RECEIPTS RISE $8,000,000 IN YEAR

JEFFERSON CITY, June 30 (AP)—Missouri collected $35,389,808 in income taxes for the fiscal year ending today—an $8,000,000 jump above last year—M. E. Morris, state director of revenue said yesterday.

The total represents collections from about 750,000 returns, a record number and about 75,000 more than last year.

Morris noted the increase is almost twice as much as is needed to pay the principal and interest on the state's new $75,000,000 bond issue. That amounts to about $4,500,000 a year.

Morris said much of the gain has come from a program, conducted over the last six months, in which state agents have compared federal and state income tax returns.

3 AREA YOUTHS APPOINTED TO ARMED FORCES SCHOOLS

Three St. Louis area youths and a former St. Louisan have been appointed to armed forces service schools, Representative Thomas B. Curtis (Rep.), Webster Groves, who heads a committee to screen applicants, announced yesterday.

They are James Carl Fey, 1363 Greentree lane, Glendale; David Crow Williams, 1302 West Big Bend road, Kirkwood; Joel P. O'Connor, 3500 Genevieve avenue, Brentwood, and Francis William Farrell Jr., former St. Louisan.

Fey, a recent graduate of Kirkwood High School, was appointed to the Air Force Academy near Denver. Williams, a student at the University of Missouri, will go to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. O'Connor, a Christian Brothers College graduate, and Farrell, whose father is an Army officer attached to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have been admitted to West Point.

HANNIBAL DIGS OUT FROM UNDER BLANKET OF INSECTS

HANNIBAL, MO., June 30 (AP)—This Mississippi river town dug out Friday after a black snow—one of the thickest swarms of mayflies seen here in years.

The swarms of mayflies, sometimes known as shad flies, blanketed sidewalks, streets, cars and even, blotted out streetlights in an invasion of the Hannibal area Thursday night.

Parts of the business district Friday were covered several inches deep with the dead insects. The concentration of insects was so heavy that some pavements were slippery after cars crushed the flies.

Crews with three dump trucks spent five hours removing the dead insects from the streets of the downtown section. The streets then were sprayed with deodorant to eliminate a stale, fishy odor.

DEFENSE PLANT MAN FOUND GUILTY IN KICKBACK CASE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 30 (AP)—A United States district court jury yesterday convicted a former buyer for a jet engine plant of taking kickbacks in the award of Government contracts.

James E. Hanis, 26 years old, was found guilty on all five counts of an indictment alleging consipracy to defraud the Government. His maximum penalty could be 13 years in prison and $10,000 fine.

Hanis was a buyer for the Westinghouse plant in Kansas City.

Edward R. McCabe, 35, president of a firm which did business with the plant, was acquitted by the jury.

A third man indicted in the case, Robert Ward Graddy, 30, Tulsa, Okla., pleaded guilty and testified for the Government in the trial of Hanis and McCabe.

No date has been set for sentencing Hanis and Graddy.

GRUENTHER ANNOUNCES JUIN REQUEST TO LEAVE NATO

PARIS, June 30 (AP)—Marshal Alphonse Juin has formally requested that he be relieved of his post as commander of Allied forces in Central Europe effective Oct. 1.

The French Marshal's decision to leave his command was announced today by Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, supreme commander of Allied Forces in Europe.

No reason for Juin's request was given.

FOREIGN STUDENTS BUSY TAKING IN ST. LOUIS SIGHTS

Foreign high school students, here from 21 countries for a three-day visit, were busy today becoming acquainted with sights, manners and customsr in St. Louis. Tonight the 125 visitors will attend the Municipal Opera performance of "The Student Prince."

Playing host to the students are 69 St. Louis area families, each accommodating one or two guests, and the Thomas Jefferson School, Sappington, which is caring for 17 of them. All the visitors are international scholarship winners and are touring America by bus on a "get-acquainted" trip.

Local sponsors of the St. Louis visit are the St. Louis Council on World Affairs and church and women's groups. Nationally, the tour is under auspices of the American Field Service.

The delegation, which was met at Jefferson Memorial on its arrival, will assemble there at 10 p. m. tomorrow for departure in busses.

THE REV. JOSEPH M'HATTIE DIES AT WHEEL OF AUTO

The Rev. Joseph McHattie, a Catholic priest, 3658 West Pine boulevard, died yesterday, apparently of a heart attack, when driving his automobile. The car went out of control and struck a utility pole and an electric traffic signal on the southwest corner of Grand boulevard and Clark avenue, police reported.

Father McHattie, 49 years old, had been semi-retired for about three years and had been serving part time in the Epiphany Parish. The Rev. Lawrence McHattie, 2219 North Grand boulevard, a brother, was a passenger in the car.

Father Lawrence McHattie, said that his brother, who had a heart condition, suddenly slumped over the steering wheel. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Firmin Desloge Hospital. At one time he was a chaplain at Scott Air Force Base.

CANOEISTS FORCED TO HALT VOYAGE AFTER 600 MILES

Frank H. Mason, 7615 Marion court, Maplewood, and his 14-year-old son, Richard, were thwarted by bad weather in their efforts to go by canoe from New Orleans to Jacksonville, Fla. They voyaged only to Clearwater, Fla., a distance of about 600 land miles, and were returning here by train today.

Mason, a clerk for Terminal Railroad Association, said he intends eventually to complete the journey around the tip of Florida and even move up the Atlantic seaboard, then down through the Great Lakes to Chicago.

In 1953 Mason and two sons traveled in the same canoe, which is equipped with a five horsepower motor, from Chicago to St. Louis and the next year went from St. Louis to New Orleans. Intentions are to complete the circuit.

RETIRED INSTRUCTOR GIVEN AIR FORCE CIVILIAN AWARD

Charles W. Richard, who recently retired as a civilian instructor in the Air Training Command at Scott Air Force Base, was given the Air Force's highest award for a civilian, "Decoration for Exceptional Service," in a ceremony last week.

The award, presented by Lt. Gen. Charles T. Myers, commander of the training command, cited the "many technical training improvements sparked by Richard from 1948 to early this year."

Particular attention was given to Richard's guidance of retrenchment of technical training establishments from 201 to five installations after World War II. Richard lives at Sparta.

LENIN'S PAPERS HIT 'RASCALITY' OF RUSSIAN REDS

Documents Released by U.S. Reveal First Leader's Comments on Nationality Issue.

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP) —The State Department published tonight 18 Soviet documents, most of them still secret in the Soviet Union, showing that V. I. Lenin once scathingly denounced the "rascality" of Russian Communists in dealing with non-Russian peoples embraced in the Soviet system.

His criticism hit the late Joseph Stalin, among others, for mishandling the problem of bringing the territory of Georgia under full Moscow control in the early days of Red consolidation of power.

The views of Lenin, the first leader of Soviet Communism, on the nationality issue were described by officials here as having potentially great significance today because of their possible impact on the policies of the present Soviet regime.

In denouncing Stalin, the present Red party boss, Nikita Khrushchev, has gone back to Lenin for historical authority to justify his course. Therefore anything which Lenin wrote on an issue still current may give a lead as to future policies of the present Soviet regime or may be used as criticism when such policies fail to follow Lenin's teachings.

Pertinent Issue.

The nationality issue is pertinent in two respects now. About half of the present population of the Soviet Union is made up of non-Russian peoples. In addition Soviet Russian domination has been extended over the countries of eastern Europe since World War II and exercised in a manner which has led to such riotous protests as that of this week in Poznan, Poland.

The State Department expects to make considerable propaganda use of the Lenin views on the treatment of non-Russian nationalities in criticising present Soviet policies.

The documents released tonight were obtained from a "confidential source", the State Department said. They were published at this time because one set, known as Lenin's will or "testament," in which he proposed Stalin's ouster as secretary general of the Soviet Communist party, was published in Moscow today. The ostensible purpose of its release there was to carry forward the downgrading of Stalin.

Other documents have not been published in Moscow even though they were circulated by Khrushchev at the secret session of the Communist party congress last February. At that session Khrushchev denounced Stalin's long reign of terror and called for "collective leadership" as opposed to one-man dictatorship.

Technical Questions.

Many of the documents in the group of 18 were no more than letters of transmittal or authentication. One large section dealt with technical questions of saping the organization to run the Soviet economy.

Official attention was centered on the papers, running into many hundreds of words, in which Lenin set forth his views on the proper treatment of other nationalities by the Russians.

The Communists, he said, justified their treatment of peoples whom they dominated within the Soviet Union by talking about the "freedom to withdraw from the union."

Under conditions of Great Russian domination, Lenin acidly declared, that "freedom" would prove to be "but a scrap of paper insufficient for the defense of foreign races in Russia against the inroads of that very generically Russian man, the Great Russian, the chauvinist, and actually a villain and a ravager, which is what the typical Russian bureaucrat is."

"It cannot be doubted," he added, "but that the insignificant percentage of Soviet and Sovietized workers will drown in this chauvinistic sea of Great Russian rascality like a fly in the milk."

Stalin in 'Fatal Role'.

To describe the "typical" Russian in his attitude toward other nationalities, Lenin used the word "Derzhimorda," a character in a novel by Gogol who was noted for his brutal arrogance.

Lenin said Stalin had played a "fatal role" by being in too much haste to apply his own ideas in handling the Georgian problem. Stalin himself was a Georgian but Lenin said "it is a common knowledge that Russified members of other nationalities always like to exaggerate when it comes to typically Russian attitudes."

Lenin set forth his views on the nationality issue little more than a year before his death in January 1924. State Department officials said that his advocacy of respect for the rights of other nationalities within the Soviet system was not based on any humanitarian concern for people but on the hard-boiled notion that this was the best way to control them.

He argued in general that the Soviet Union central government should retain control over only military matters and foreign affairs and leave full authority of action in the hands of the "republics," which theoretically govern each of the subordinate Soviet states such as Georgia, the Ukraine, White Russia and the others.

Guilty of Outrages.

The Russian Republic is by far the greatest in the system. Speaking of the Russian people as distinct from their less powerful neighbor nationalities, Lenin said that "We, the nationals of a great nation, show ourselves almost always in historical practice guilty of untold numbers of outrages."

Lenin's testament buttresses Soviet leaders in the criticism of Stalin by describing Stalin—then secretary general of the Communist central committee—as crude and over-ambitious. It urged that he be replaced by "someone more patient, more loyal, and more polite."

The text of this document, printed in the magazine Kommunist, had previously been kept from the Soviet public for 33 years.

The testament, besides calling Stalin rude, rough-mannered and capricious, praised Leon Trotsky, Stalin's archrival, as "the most capable member" of the central committee. These were the first words of praise of Trotsky to be carried in the Soviet press since he was expelled from the party in 1927.

Letter to Congress.

Lenin's will or testament was actually a letter written to the thirteenth party congress dated Dec. 23 and Dec. 24, 1922. He added a postscript—with his most direct attack on Stalin—on Jan. 4, 1923. Lenin died in January 1924. In most of his final year he was incapable of expressing himself because of illness.

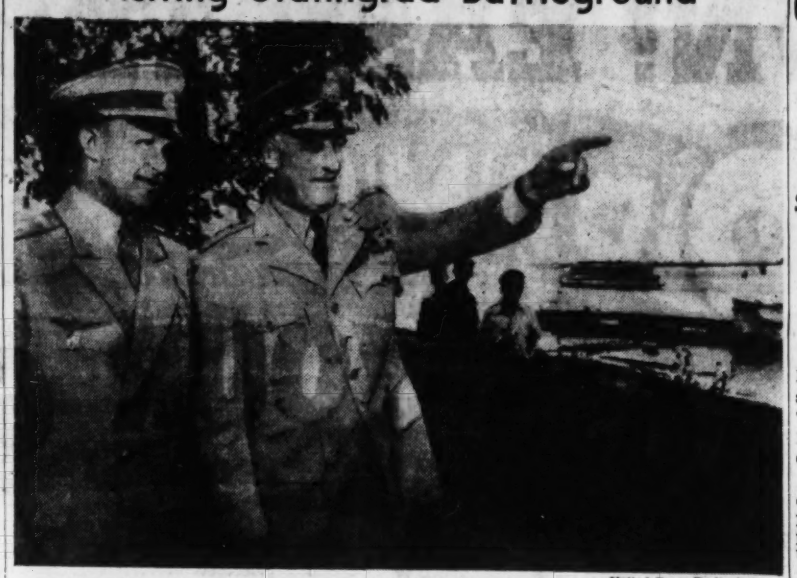

In the letter, Lenin, leader of the Bolshevik revolution and a revered figure in the Communist world, commented frankly on the qualities and defects of Soviet leaders of the time and warned with prophetic words against a party split because of bad blood between Stalin and Trotsky.

Stalin, he wrote, had "concentrated in his hands immense power and I am not sure he will always be able to use sufficient care in using this power." He proposed that the leadership find a way to remove him as general secretary, a post which Stalin used as a springboard to his later supreme authority.

Lenin criticized Trotsky for his self-confidence and praised him for his ability. He said the differences between Stalin and Trotsky could lead to a split in the party "and if our party does not take steps to prevent it the split could happen unexpectedly."

The party leaders of the time received Lenin's communication and discussed it—but did not make it public. A majority of them disregarded Lenin's warning. Later most of these leaders were executed by Stalin in the treason trials of the 1930s. Trotsky himself was exiled from the Soviet Union, and in 1940 was assassinated in Mexico.

Visiting Stalingrad Battleground

Twining Drinks a Toast to Peace Offered by Red China's Air Chief

General Finds Self on Spot at Moscow Banquet—Thanks Hosts for Guiding Visitors, Answering Queries.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

MOSCOW, June 30—The big event of Gen. Nathan F. Twining's last day on his trip to the Soviet Union was not his visit to the Soviet Air Force Academy at Monino but another of the fantastic Soviet banquets.

The highlight of the banquet, at which numerous toasts were drunk, was the toast by the Red Chinese commander of the people's air liberation army—as the Red Chinese call their air force. Lieut. Gen. Liu Yi-Lo, offered a toast to "peace and friendship" to the world. Twining drank to the toast.

The Red Chinese air commander said:

"We all belong to the military and to the air forces. We fully realize what ravages modern atomic war will bring about. Doing away with mistrust between military people will help to lessen distrust between people and nations and will lessen the danger and put off war.

"Allow me to express my profound feeling in a toast. I am fully in accord with the speech made by the French air marshal and agree with the necessity of peace between nations. Here is to peace and friendship, and drink bottoms up."

The nature of the toast was such that Twining could not do otherwise than to join in it.

At a garden party here last Sunday Twining and other Americans refused to respond to a toast to Red China proposed by Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev.

Like Trade Union Meeting.

The principal theme of the speeches made at the banquet was that military people most of all understood the destruction of war and that friendly intercourse between military men was a forward step in eliminating mistrust between nations.

The banquet developed into a sort of interhational air force trade union meeting with the military leading the way to peace and understanding between nations.

The banquet was held, as was the one last Sunday, in the Soviet Soldiers' Club, a misnomer since it is a sort of palace in the old style with gilt furniture and long drapes and oak parquet floors. Marshal Koniev was host in the absence of Marshal Zhukov.

There was caviar, smoked salmon, ham, sturgeon in aspic, and crawfish. This was followed by Borsch, boiled sturgeon garnished with shrimp, and chicken breast. Champagne, red and white wines, Madeira, soft drinks, and vodka and cognac were at every place.

Marshal P. Zhigarev, commander of the Soviet air force, opened the toasting. He said, "Our state is the first to reduce arms without waiting for others. (He apparently did not know that the United States had already reduced its arms 25 per cent.) Our arms are only defensive and to defend our frontiers."

Twining responded by saying that "We have been here a week and it has been a very fast week. It has been very enjoyable." Then he thanked his hosts and the officers who had given so much help guiding the American party and answering their questions.

The French air marshal then made his appeal for understanding and friendship between nations. He was followed by the Chinese air commander, who also said that "The presence of the representatives of the air forces of more than 20 nations here was in itself a sign of international co-operation.

The Turkish air marshal thanked his hosts on behalf of the delegation from Turkey for the opportunity to visit Moscow during which they had had a chance to see the advances of Soviet aviation.

Briton Among the Last.

The British air marshal, who for some reason was rather low on the totem pole at the head table, said he was much impressed by the comradeship among the air forces present. He added that the meeting was very impressive, and toasted his host and the Soviet Air Force.

Marshal Koniev, commander of the Moscow military district and also of the Warsaw pact—the Soviet NATO—closed the speechmaking and toasting. He said: "Your stay made it possible for you to be convinced that the Soviet people are following peaceful pursuits. The Soviet people wish to do away with war. We believe that the air force generals and other officers here will help to do away with mistrust between peoples.

"I believe officers should do their best to remove distrust between states. The air force seems to be first (Koniev is an army marshal) and the army behind. I raise my glass to the development of confidence between states and to more visits between military men."

It is difficult to assess this remarkable exhibition of friendliness. Obviously it is official policy. The Russians seem to be saying: if the diplomats do not understand what war means and the need for peace, at least we military men do.

Some Points Overlooked.

All these protestations of peace and friendship overlook the real sources of tension over the world: the lack of a peace in Korea, divided Germany, the visit of Soviet Foreign Minister D. T. Shepilov to Syria in an obvious effort to ally that nation with the Soviet bloc and supply arms to Egypt and Syria.

Again it is a question between words and deeds. Perhaps the words will be followed by deeds and genuine co-operation without subversion, but that remains to be seen.

The American Press received a late invitation, through the intervention of Air Force Chief of Staff Twining, to attend the banquet and almost took it over. It must have been a new experience for the Soviet dignitaries.

At the center table below the head table members of the American press preempted the seats that had been reserved for the heads of visiting air force delegations. Photographers wandered around taking pictures of parties toasting each other, flashing their lights into the eyes of speakers and generally making free with the banquet hall.

The writer was seated across the table from Air Marshal Vereshinin, deputy commander of the Soviet air force, and between the Polish air marshal and the Syrian air force commanding general. Also opposite was the chief of the Indian air force.

It was possible to carry on an interesting conversation with Vereshinin through the interpreter that had been supplied for the Indian air marshal.

Visit to Lenin's Tomb.

After the banquet the American party went through Lenin's Tomb, going in ahead of the thousands of patient Russians waiting in line, and saw Lenin and Stalin preserved side by side. Lenin looked like a mummy but Stalin looked like life, sardonic, composed and evil.

The air force delegation found a high degree of excellence at the Air Force Academy. This academy is for advanced training of air force officers. The course lasts three years and covers all the tactical and technical specialties that are taught in several one-year courses in the United States.

Officers who graduate, and they are competitively selected to get in, are graduated in the grade of captain and are given a diamond emblem to wear on their uniform.

The school has only 250 pupils and includes pilots, bombardiers and navigators. All get a complete technical and tactical course.

Twining saw half a dozen of the Soviet TU-4 aircraft, the Soviet copy of the United States B-29, and said they were such exact copies he could not have told one from the other. There also were some IL-28 light jet bombers on the field and some MIG 17 fighters.

Twining seems to have been convinced of the sincerity of the Soviet desire for peace and better relations. He leaves at 9 a.m. Sunday for Wiesbaden, Germany, headquarters of the United States Air Force in Europe, where his party will evaluate their findings.

From Wiesbaden he will go to Paris to consult with Generals Gruenther and Norstad at SHAPE headquarters.

SINGAPORE, June 30 (AP)—A gang has kidnaped Ng Quee Gam, a Singapore multimillionaire rubber magnate, and his chauffeur, Singapore police disclosed today. The gang is said to be holding Ng for ransom of $49,000.

8-YEAR-OLD BOY RUNS IN STREET, KILLED BY AUTO

Sister Says He Dashed Against Car—Youth, 17, Loses Life in Highway Crash.

Eight-year-old Thomas Lane Hunt was killed last night when struck by an automobile in the 7100 block of Michigan avenue. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hunt, Arnold, Mo.

The child ran against the side of a machine driven by Earl T. Krehbiel, 5634 Leona street, police were told by aKthleen, the boy's sister, 14.

When the accident occurred, she and another girl were returning with Thomas to the Spanish Social Club, 7107 Michigan, where the Hunt family was attending a wedding reception.

Ray D. Weathers Jr., 17 years old, 225 South Barat avenue, Ferguson, was killed when two automobiles collided yesterday at Lindbergh boulevard and Dorsett road, St. Louis county.

State Patrolmen said Weathers, alone in his car, was driving north and collided with one going east in Dorsett and driven by a man who said he was Richard Black, Negro, 9612 Meeks boulevard, Elmwood Park. Black and a passenger suffered minor injuries.

Six persons were injured, two seriously, when automobiles driven by Elmer Tribout, O'Fallon, Ill., and Samuel Salvo, 5103 South Broadway, collided on Illinois Route 159, about four miles south of Belleville, yesterday.

Most seriously injured were Salvo's brother, Tech. Sgt. Charles Salvo, 3310th Food Service Squadron, Scott Air Force Base, and Tribout's wife, Mildred. Sgt. Salvo, who lives at 1800 North Fifteenth street, Belleville, suffered chest and back injuries, and Mrs. Tribout a chest injury and lacerations.

Tribout; his son, Gregory, 3 years old, and niece, Portia Rist, 7, of Hecker, Ill., and Samuel Salvo were treated at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville, for cuts and lacerations. The others remained at the hospital.

Michael Turnbeaugh, 2-year-old son of Mrs. Muriel Turnbeaugh, 5039 Enright avenue, suffered serious injuries of the head and left arm last night when he was struck by an automobile near his home.

The motorist, Charley Kitley, 3618 Dunnica avenue, told police the child ran into the street from between two parked automobiles and he was unable to stop in time. The boy was taken to City Hospital.

HORSELESS CARRIAGE SHOW

The Horseless Carriage Club of St. Louis, an organization of collectors of antique automobiles, will hold an automobile show and contest at 1:30 o'clock today on the grounds of Continental Can Co., 8401 St. Charles road, St. John.

IOWANS FOLLOW 100 LEADS IN HUNT FOR PERSIAN CAT

DES MOINES, June 30 (AP) —Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Peet may have found their Persian cat, Olaf, who wandered away from them six weeks ago in northern Missouri.

They have followed up more than 100 likely leads after offering a $100 reward for the recovery of the animal.

"Now we've located a Persian which strayed to the home of Mrs. Lee Talley of Paris, Mo., and my wife thinks it's Olaf but I'm not so sure," Peet said.

Peet said the family plans to fly the cat to Des Moines from Paris to a trial at the Peet home. Olaf wandered away from the Peet family at a roadside park.

DR. C. BARBER MUELLER TAKES POST IN SYRACUSE

Dr. C. Barber Mueller has been appointed professor and chairman of the department of surgery of the College of Medicine, State University of New York, at Syracuse, it was announced yesterday. He has been assistant professor of clinical surgery at Washington University School of Medicine.

Mueller was graduated from Washington University school of medicine in 1942 and had been on its school staff since 1951.

BILL IS SIGNED EXTENDING DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP) —President Eisenhower yesterday signed a bill extending the Defense Production Act for two more years until June 30, 1958.

The act continues the Government's authority to fix priorities and allocations for scarce material, guarantee defense contracts, establish metal purchase programs and provide anti-trust law exemptions for certain industry agreements entered into for defense production.

The two-year extension also contains for the first time a provision giving congressional "encouragement" to dispersal of new defense industry to non-target areas throughout the nation. The new section states it to be the policy of Congress to "encourage" geographical dispersion and where practicable to apply it to new industrial plants and in the procurement of goods and services.

Eisenhower also signed yesterday a bill extending the Export Control Act for two more years.

GOLDEN WEDDING DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Roye C. Macherey, 8416 State street, East St. Louis, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary Thursday with a family dinner. They were married at St. Agnes Catholic Church, 1935 Sidney street, and have lived on the East Side for 45 years.

Macherey, 71 years old, is a farmer. His wife is 69. They have a son, Roye C. Macherey Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Anthony Rutz.

COUNTY TEACHERS COMMEND SCHOOL PROGRAMS ON KETC

School programs on educational television Station KETC (Channel 9) were commended in a recent evaluation survey conducted throughout county schools by Lee Campion, chairman of the St. Louis Suburban Teachers Association Television Committee, it was announced yesterday.

The survey included an analysis of each of the 14 school program series. The number of affirmative votes cast on the question, "Did the program make a contribution to your learning situation over and above what you are now doing in the classroom?" for each program was 87 per cent.

Teachers polled in the written questionnaire stated that 13 of the 14 programs were of such value that they would arrange subject matter of a course to coincide with the television program topic. The series, "Learn to Spell," and "The Storyteller," received the greatest teacher support.

RETIRED WORKERS RECEIVE $3,611,688 IN U.S. FUNDS

Retired workers in the St. Louis area were receiving $3,611,688 in monthly Social Security payments as of last December, T. L. Gaukel, Social Security Administration manager, announced yesterday. This figure represents payments to 55,207 persons in St. Louis and in St. Louis, St. Charles, Madison and St. Clair counties.

In addition, dependents of old-age beneficiaries or survivors of workers who died were receiving $1,714,354 a month at the end of 1955, Gaukel said.

Gaukel said in the country as a whole today more than half of the non-working aged people are eligible for monthly benefits under the Social Security program and that in the years ahead the proportion will increase.

COUPLE MARRIED 50 YEARS

RED CHINESE RULERS PROMISE REFORMS

Pay Increases Included—Some Deputies Criticize Regime Sharply.

HONG KONG, June 30 (AP)—Red China's rulers today promised sweeping reforms to better living conditions for China's 600,000,000 people.

Premier Chou En-lai climaxed a two-week session of the National Peoples Congress in Peiping by telling 1000 deputies:

"All departments and areas concerned will examine and correct shortcomings and mistakes."

Peiping radio broadcast part of a speech by Chou, head of the state council—top government body—in which he promised immediate wage boosts and improvements in housing and medical facilities.

The promise of reforms rang down the curtain on the congress, whose deputies had taken the floor one after another to shoot barbs at the government for not improving living conditions as fast as production increased. Most of China's budget the past few years has gone for heavy industry and defense, with little left in the way of benefits for the people.

Sharp criticism by deputies of life under the Red regime apparently stemmed from recent Communist party edicts for freer expressions from lower echelons of government and congress.

During the session, Peiping radio, official voice of the regime, loosened its usually straight propaganda output and carried speeches by deputies who asked for more authority for local governments, less export of food, more and better luxury goods and more homes.

First official hint of unrest on the mainland came when a deputy declared rioting had broken out last year in the heavily populated Szechwan province but had been put down "effectively." Peiping broadcast his statement.

Chou told the closing session wage problems "could not all be solved in one stroke" and added that housing was another matter that won't be settled "in one or two years."

The government said earlier in congress it planned an immediate 14.5 per cent general wage boost, with higher increases to workers whose pay scale has dragged behind the national level.

Chou's promises were seen here as an attempt to head off future grumbling.

AUXILIARY POLICEMAN SUSPENDED IN KIRKWOOD

James Daar, Kirkwood auxiliary policeman, was suspended from duty for giving testimony to the St. Louis county prosecuting attorney's office about alleged police brutality he had failed to report to his superior officer, Kirkwood Chief of Police Kenneth Peek said yesterday.

The incident involving alleged police brutality occurred about a year and a half ago, but Daar did not inform him at the time, Chief Peek said.

Daar said he was not summoned by the Kirkwood City Council or the prosecuting attorney's office to testify in connection with the current investigation of a recent incident, which led to Chief Peek's dismissal of Patrolman Glenn E. McGuire last Thursday.

BUILDING PERMITS DOWN $8,820,000 FROM YEAR AGO

Construction authorized by permits issued in the first six months of this year was valued at $8,820,000 less than that approved in the comparable period last year, it was reported yesterday by William C. Dale, statistician for the building commissioner's office.

The value of construction authorized in the first half of this year was $18,980,000, compared with $27,800,000 in the first six months of 1955. The difference was due almost entirely to the fact that this year's permits included no large housing projects, such as were included in the early part of last year, Dale said.

Value of new construction in the first six months of 1956 was $13,679,000 and the value of alterations and remodeling was $5,301,000. In June, permits were issued for new buildings valued at $2,708,000 and for alterations estimated at $722,000. The total of $3,430,000 compares with $8,641,000 in construction authorized in June of 1955.

DR. R. O. MUETHER HEADS ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL GROUP

Dr. Raymond O. Muether, professor of internal medicine at the St. Louis University School of Medicine, has been elected president of the St. Mary's group of the university's hospitals, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers elected are Dr. Grey Jones, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the School of Medicine, vice president, and Dr. Paul Murphy, professor of clinical medicine, secretary-treasurer.

The St. Mary's group of St. Louis University hospitals, operated by the Sisters of St. Mary, consist of St. Mary's and Firmin Desloge hospitals.

SCHOENBECK INDORSEMENTS

Three more St. Louis ward organizations have indorsed Albert E. Schoenbeck for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, it was announced yesterday. They are the Fifteenth, Twenty-third and Twenty-eighth ward groups.

Schoenbeck will make a campaign trip through northwest Missouri this week, beginning with a dinner for the Buchanan County Republican Committee at St. Joseph tomorrow.

BRITAIN APPEALS FOR NEW EFFORT TO REDUCE ARMS

U.N. Delegate Calls for Agreement Before Bomb Stockpiles Become Too High.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., June 30 (AP)—Anthony Nutting of Britain called today for agreement on a disarmament plan before stockpiles of nuclear bombs reach heights dangerous to humanity.

Nutting, British Minister of State and No. 2 man in its Foreign Office, pledged Britain's full co-operation in working for such an agreement through the United Nations. He will head the British delegation in the next round of U.N. disarmament commission talks beginning Tuesday. The meetings are expected to continue two or three weeks.

"The British government are determined to go on working for a disarmament agreement through the U.N." Nutting said in an interview. "It should be possible to work out such an agreement, satisfactory to all, but not on the take-it-or-leave-it basis which was all the Russians offered in the subcommittee in London."

Stalemate In London.

Nutting was referring to long secret meetings of the disarmament subcommittee, made up of delegates from the United States, Britain, France, Canada and the Soviet Union. East and West put forward various plans and ideas in London but the meeting ended in the customary stalemate. Few delegates here hold much hope of progress, but they are resolved to keep trying.

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet deputy foreign minister, proposed at the London conference that the nations agree to reduce the troop levels of Russia, United States and China to a top of 1,500,000 men by 1958 and a top of 650,000 men each for Britain and France.

Nutting and Western delegates objected that the Russian plan did not go far enough and deal with ending the production of nuclear weapons. Gromyko said later the Russians still favored a prohibition of atomic bombs and would talk about it if the West wanted to do so.

"The latest Russian plan does not have any provisions for ending the production of nuclear weapons," Nutting said. "This is a problem which any sound comprehensive disarmament agreement must face. And if we wait too long, more nuclear stockpiles will go on amassing themselves and the knowledge of this awful secret of human destruction will become dangerously widespread."

Russia Acting on Its Own.

After the subcommittee adjourned in May, the Russians announced they would reduce their armed forces by 1,200,000 men by May 1, 1957. The Russians said this was in addition to the reduction of armed forces of the Soviet Union by 640,000 men in 1955.

"We must be pleased that the Russians are at last reducing their forces unilaterally," Nutting said, "but this is not a substitute for an internationally controlled disarmament agreement."

The United States will be represented on the commission by the permanent delegate, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. The Russians will be represented by their permanent delegate Arkady A. Sobolev; France by Jules Moch, former Minister of Defense, and Canada by Paul Martin, Minister of National Health and Welfare. Other members of the commission are Australia, Belgium, Nationalist China, Cuba, Iran, Peru and Yugoslavia.

INCREASE IN EMPLOYMENT FROM MARCH 15 TO MAY 15

Unemployment in the St. Louis area declined from an estimated 34,500 persons March 15 to 32,700 by May 15, a decrease of 5.2 per cent, Paul P. Connole, manager of the Missouri State Employment Service here, announced yesterday.

Connole said the number of persons unemployed in May were 25.3 per cent below that of May 1955, when 43,800 were out of work. Employment increased from 801,800 persons in March to 804,100 in May, he said.

The gain in employment from March to May, Connole said, was one-tenth of one per cent. The May employment figure was a 1.3 per cent increase over May 1955, he said.

STUDY OPENS ON PERSONNEL IN METAL, ELECTRIC FIELDS

A study of the demand for and supply of skilled personnel in the metal goods and electrical industries of St. Louis is being conducted by faculty members of the School of Business and Public Administration of Washington University.

Chancellor Ethan A. H. Shepley said yesterday the purpose of the study is to determine any areas of shortage of personnel before such shortages become critical. The study is expected to reveal shortages of types of skills for which training facilities should be provided.

The study is financed by the Missouri Division of Employment Security and the United States Department of Labor.

STEVENSON ADDS TO CRITICISM OF DONOVAN CASE

Raps Administration for Giving Writer Access to Minutes of Cabinet Talks.

NEW YORK, June 30 (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson joined other Democrats today in criticizing the Eisenhower Administration for giving a newspaper reporter access to the minutes of top level cabinet meetings so he could write a book about the President.

Stevenson, the unsuccessful Democratic presidential nominee in 1952 and a candidate for the nomination again, said the action was "further evidence of the administration's reliance on advertising and public relations techniques."

He made the remark as he was about to board a plane for Chicago after a series of meetings here with New York State supporters of his candidacy.

Stevenson was referring to the book, "Eisenhower, the Inside Story," by Robert J. Donovan, Washington correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune. The book contains numerous references to what occurred at cabinet sessions and other meetings of presidential advisers.

Wouldn't Make Choice.

Stevenson said he would not make the choice of a running mate if he is nominated for President.

Asked if he would state a preference between Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York and Senator John F. Kennedy (Dem.), Massachusetts, for the second place on the ticket, Stevenson shook his head and said "No I never express any choice."

Stevenson went to the airport after a brief invasion of heavily Republican Westchester county.

He appeared briefly at a picnic at the Bedford village estate of Cass Canfield, chairman of the executive committee of the state Stevenson for President committee. The picnic was sponsored jointly by the State and Westchester County Stevenson for President committees.

The crowd, estimated by a committee member at 800, milled around Stevenson. Eschewing politics, Stevenson told the crowd he was happy to be there, cracked a poke or two and then rushed off to catch his plane.

HARRIMAN IN IOWA, RAPS EISENHOWER

DES MOINES, June 30 (AP)—Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, in a series of vote-hunting sessions with Iowa Democrats, asserted today that President Eisenhower "is not qualified for the presidency."

He said the President does not understand either the farm problem or the critical factors in the cold war.

"He hasn't read a book," the New York Governor said. "He doesn't read the papers. He doesn't read anything except what they put before him. So, he just doesn't know what's going on.

"He was a great soldier, but he is not qualified for the presidency."

Harriman is on a three-day tour of Iowa, North Dakota and Minnesota in search of support from national convention delegates for his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Cities Farm Income.

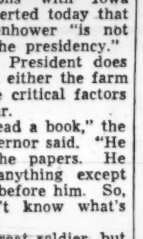

In the course of a series of talks at several Iowa points he said farm income in Iowa has dropped 50 per cent, and that in eastern Iowa it is down 69 per cent. The per capita income of farmers last year, he said, was $860 compared to $1922 for the rest of the country.

He declared that under President Truman "farm prices were at 100 per cent of parity or better every single year," whereas, he continued, under President Eisenhower, "prices have been below parity every single month, and they almost broke 80 last year."

He advocated "a national stockpile of storable foods," a nationwide food stamp plan "to distribute surplus food to the millions of Americans whose diets are insufficient," an extension of the school lunch program, and a proposal that "the United States call a world conference to consider how the world can better mobilize its food resources to help win the fight against the kind of human misery on which Communism breeds."

EDWIN MEISSNER JR. HEAD OF UNITED FUND DIVISION

Edwin B. Meissner Jr., executive vice president of the St. Louis Car Co., has been appointed chairman of the industry and manufacturing division in next fall's United Fund campaign, it was announced yesterday.

Meissner

The division will be responsible for seeking pledges from employes and managements of 740 firms in this area. Meissner worked in special gifts and employes solicitation divisions in several Community Chest campaigns.

He is chairman of the board of the Humane Society of Missouri, a director of the Chamber of Commerce, Jewish Hospital, Temple Shaare Emeth, St. Louis chapter of the American Jewish Committee, St. Louis Country Day School and the division of occupational adjustment of the Social Planning Council.

10TH ANNIVERSARY FOR NAVAL FLYERS

Milestone for Training of Reserves to Be Observed Next Weekend.

The tenth anniversary of post-war training of Navy and Marine reserve airmen will be celebrated next Saturday and Sunday at the Naval Air Station at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

The training was inaugurated nationally July 1, 1946, at the Naval Air Station at Glenview, Ill., with the aim of forming a force of "ready reservists" capable of operating from carriers on short notice. First test of the program came in the Korean conflict, in which 84 Navy and Marine reserve squadrons were activated.

Included was the St. Louis Squadron VA-923, led by Lt. Comdr. Herbert Wiley. The squadron particapated in the air fighting against Communist forces in Korea.

Drills held on weekends and two weeks' active duty annually maintain the efficiency of the reserve forces. Reserve squadrons also are deployed to overseas bases in French Morocco and Hawaii.

At present more than 36,000 reservists participate in the program at 21 Reserve Naval Air Stations. They comprise 300 squadrons and 100 supporting units, augmenting regular forces.

Training at Lambert-St. Louis Field includes operation of a mobile GCA (ground control approach) unit. Regular and reserve operators of the unit have directed 30,000 airplane approaches since 1948. The unit is maintained and operated by the Navy for all aircraft, both civilian and military.

OPPONENT CRITICIZES DALTON FOR NOT CURBING ROWDYISM

Attorney General John M. Dalton was criticized yesterday by Jim Hayes, his opponent for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, for not having taken steps to aid local officials prevent recent incidents by young rowdies in the St. Louis area.

In a talk before the North Central Bar Association of St. Louis county at Clayton, Hayes asserted: "It is the attorney general's duty to aid local officials in enforcement of the law when there is a wave of terrorism and the hoodlum element is running rampant."

COLLEGE AID TO CHILDREN OF WAR DEAD NOW EFFECTIVE

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—President Eisenhower signed a bill yesterday aimed at providing education beyond high school for children of service men who died as a result of World War II or Korean service.

The new law provides $110 a month allowance for full-time students with proportionate reductions for those going only part-time to college, vocational or other schools.

ISRAELIS FIRED ON POST NEAR GAZA, EGYPT SAYS

GAZA, June 30 (AP)—Israeli soldiers fired on an Egyptian outpost in the Khan Yunes area south of Gaza for 15 minutes last Thursday, an Egyptian military spokesman said today.

He said the Israelis abandoned two military cars which approached the Gaza strip demarcation line. No casualties were reported. Egypt has protested to the Mixed Armistice Commission.

SHORTS-CLAD GIRLS JOIN PLEA FOR U.S. LABORATORY

A 10-man committee of the United States Department of Agriculture yesterday ended a four-day hearing at Hotel Statler at which groups fromf various sections of the country sought location of the proposed $19,000,000 animal disease laboratory in their areas.

Cities in Missouri and Illitestimony yesterday, and one group, from Taylorville, Ill., brought along a bevy of shorts-clad high school girls to carry its charts and exhibits. Larry Guinn, spokesman for the delegation, told the committe Taylorville has a $100,000 site it will "turn over to the committee tomorrow, if it is wanted."

Among other cities which sent delegations to urge selection of a site for the laboratory in their areas were Mattoon and Lincoln, Ill.

THE MAN WHO DRIVES THE IMPERIAL

He initiates new concepts

Trends in automobiles come about much as trends in any field.

More often than not, they are initiated by men who have the imagination and self-assurance to do something different. Men whose nature is to lead, not to follow.

It is people like these who are setting today's new trend to Imperial . . . and it's not difficult to guess why they feel that a change is long overdue.

Imperial is the one uncommon fine car today. There is nothing commonplace about it. It has been created for those who require a motor car that is totally distinctive.

If you have not already inspected the Imperial, why not do so at your earliest convenience.

We are certain that you will be pleased with Imperial's craftsmanship and the mastery of its engineering. And we think you'll also find that Imperial feels and performs more like "your kind of car."

Simply go to or telephone your Chrysler and Imperial dealer, who will be happy to arrange for your Imperial demonstration.

GIRL SCOUTS BEGIN CAMPING ACTIVITIES

211 Members From St. Louis Area to Check In at Cedarledge Site.

This year's summer camping season will begin today at Girl Scout Camp Cedarledge near Pevely, Mo. Approximately 211 Girl Scouts from the St. Louis area will arrive at the camp this afternoon.

A staff of 57 trained counselors will help conduct the girls through a two-week program of activities which will continue through July 14.

Campers include 9-year-old Brownies and Girl Scouts 10 to 18 years old, grouped in units of 16 to 24 girls.

Mrs. William D. Paschall has been selected as public relations chairman of the Greater St. Louis Girl Scout Council.

Ten Mariner Girl Scouts from St. Louis have been awarded certificates entitling them to be cadets in the Mystic Seaport Youth Training Program at Mystic, Conn. The girls recently trained aboard a schooner there and developed skills in sailing, life-saving and other nautical activities.

They are Mary Cooper, Kathleen Kurtz, Patty McCall, Mary Miller, Carol Ober, Nancy Willis, Elaine Wolff, Sue Fleschner and Nancy Leary, members of M.S. "Nautilus" Troop 695 and Lynn Woodcock, of M.S. "Piasa" Troop 571.

Silver Springs Day Camp in Forest Park, serving Brownies and Girl Scouts in Mid-City District, will open Tuesday. Sessions will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays through July 26, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The season at Branwood Day Camp of Overland Trails District will close with a parents' night program Thursday. Parents of 325 campers have been invited to visit the 17 units there between 7 and 8 p.m.

The Fly-up unit and younger Intermediate Scouts will attend an overnight camp tomorrow night on the day camp site in Creve Coeur Park.

Sally Hopkins, member of Senior Troop 86, is participating in the Girl Scout Archaeological Mobile Camp at Santa Fe, N.M., which began yesterday and will continue through July 14.

The on-the-trail camp is operated by the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. in conjunction with the Museum of New Mexico. In the two-week session, Sally and 23 other girls will travel 1200 miles through national forests and visit monuments, pueblos and ruins while studying man and nature in the Southwest.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

The annual one-day conference for commissioners of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council will be held next Saturday at the John D. Wright Memorial Lodge at Beaumont Scout Reservation near Eureka.

E. G. Werremeyer, commissioner of Council Grove District, will be chairman of the conference committee.

Plans for the council to participate in two parts of the Mid-America Jubilee next September are under way.

Approximately 2000 Boy Scouts and Explorers will march in the Jubilee parade to be held Aug. 31, the night before the event begins. The council also will present a circus-type show on the stage in front of the Old Cathedral Sept. 18. Scouts from councils at Belleville, East St. Louis, Alton and Granite City also will participate.

Seven new Scouts units joined the council last week. Neighborhood Cub Den 401, sponsored by parents and friends of the new Cubs, will meet Friday afternoons with Cubmaster Henry Butts of Centerville, Mo.

Cub Pack 466 will meet at 2 p.m. Wednesday with Cubmaster George W. Brown Jr. at Leslie, Mo. The unit is sponsored by a group of residents of Sullivan, Mo.

Cub Pack 674, sponsored by the Leslie School Parent-Teachers' Association, will meet with Cubmaster John W. Pohlman, Leslie. Scout Patrol 680 will meet Mondays at the home of Cubmaster O. W. Appel, Annapolis, Mo.

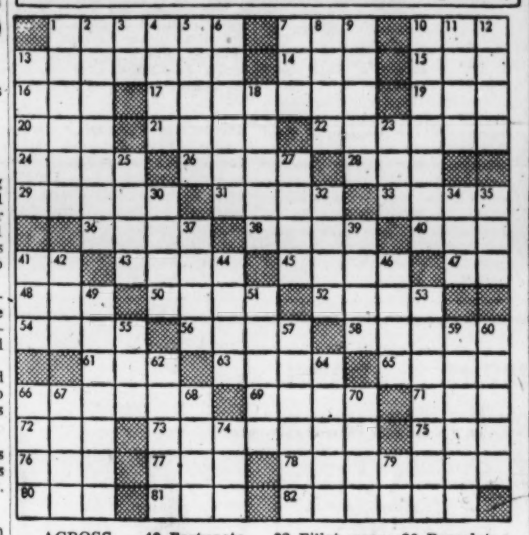

Scout Troop 466, sponsored by a group of residents of Sullivan, will meet with Scoutmaster Joseph Krygiel at Sullivan. Explorer Post 547 is sponsored by the Hillsboro Community Civic Club. The Post will meet with Explorer Adviser Robert N. Benwell. Explorer Squadron 444 is sponsored by the Grace Methodist Church at Sullivan and will meet with W. H. Scott.

Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be given to Explorer Adviser R. D. Clayton of St. Clair, Mo., in a ceremony to be held by Explorer Squadron 449 next Saturday at American Legion Post 347, St. Clair.

Families of Scouts in Troop 306, Suburban District, attended a picnic last Sunday at Shrewsbury Park. A Court of Honor was held following the picnic.

120 BEGIN 6 MONTHS' SERVICE NEXT SUNDAY

St. Louisans, 17 to 18½, to Train Under New Reserve Forces Act.

About 120 St. Louis youths, 17 to 18½ years old, will leave here next Sunday for Fort Leonard Wood to begin six months of active duty under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

They are among a group of 180 Missourians leaving from here to begin basic training. The group is the largest in the state to start training at the same time under this program.

A total of 2200 men from the 13-state Fifth Army area, which includes Missouri, are scheduled to report to Fort Leonard Wood for training under the Reserve Act this month.

A plaque for reserve recruiting in the Fifth Army area has been given to the military districts of Missouri and Iowa for May. Both districts recruited 249 men into reserve training under the 1955 act.

Company K of the 407th Infantry Regiment of St. Louis now meets for training at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Meetings are held in the reserve training center, 4350 South Kingshighway.

Andrew Sgroi, a St. Louis bugler, has received a letter of appreciation from Lt. Gen W. H. Arnold, commanding general of the fifth Army, for sounding taps at more than 1000 military funerals in this area.

ARGENTINE POLICE REPORT ARREST OF 200 AS PLOTTERS

BUENOS AIRES, June 30 (AP)—Argentina's federal police chief said today 200 persons had been seized in the last 24 hours as members of bands plotting the assassination of public officials.

He called most of them Communists and diehard supporters of ex-dictator Juan D. Peron.

Jose Dellepiane, the police official, told a news conference authorities had uncovered plots to "assassinate officials of the revolutionary government and other personalities." He did not name any persons as specific targets.

A revolt crushed on June 10 had as its goal the killing of Provisional President Pedro Aramburu, Vice President Adm. Isaac Rojas, members of their families, and key officials in the Aramburu regime.

Dellepiane said those seized had plans to create disorders and disturbances by sabotage and bomb explosions, but that the country is quiet and there is no reason for concern.

47 CHEST DISORDERS FOUND IN 1038 AT NURSING HOMES

X-rays showed shadows of tuberculosis or other chest disorders in 47 out of 1038 cases recently examined in a survey of residents and staff members of St. Louis county nursing homes by the Christmas Seal mobile X-ray unit of the Tuberculosis and Health Society.

A total of 28 films showed indications of tuberculosis while 19 were suspicious of other chest pathology. The survey covered 32 homes. Authorities in the field say that the disease is becoming a greater problem among the aged, partly because it is more difficult to reach them with the surveys.

More than 66,000 free X-rays were taken at 22 locations during the survey which ended June 15. Operations will be resumed in August after the unit is painted and overhauled in July.

BRUSSELS, June 30 (AP)—The Belgian Senate has decided to send parliamentary delegations to both Red China and Nationalist China. Members disputed which invitation to accept, then accepted both. The Belgian House also has accepted both invitations.

PETER H. HUSCH ELECTED TO CLAYTON CHARTER BOARD

Peter H. Husch, an attorney, has been elected to the Clayton Charter Commission to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Edward T. Jones, it was announced yesterday.

Husch, 44 years old, is a former president of the Social Planning Council of St. Louis and is active in many civic organizations. He lives at 518 East Polo drive, Clayton, with his wife and five children. Jones resigned for business reasons.

The Eisenhower Record

G.O.P. Points With Pride, Democrats View With Alarm

Accomplishments, Failures of Administration Will Be Election Issues, Whoever Nominees May Be.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 30.

FROM a political viewpoint, the legislative and administrative record of the Republican party since President Eisenhower was inaugurated in January 1953, is virtually completed for submission to the voters in the November elections although the Democratic controlled Congress will continue its work for two or three weeks.

Already the two national headquarters are compiling data for the 1956 party platforms and the campaign handbooks. The Republicans, as the party in residence at the White House, will point with pride to the Eisenhower tenure during the past three and a half years. The Democrats, as the majority party in Congress, will view with alarm the alleged sins of commission and omission by the executive branch and claim credit for the legislation passed during the past two years.

The Republican and Democratic records will not be the sole issue in the campaign. If, as now appears likely, President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon are again nominated by the Republicans at the San Francisco National Convention, an equal, and perhaps even greater, issue will be Mr. Eisenhower's prospective health after a heart attack and a major operation for ileitis, and Nixon's fitness to succeed him.

Should Mr. Eisenhower decide his health would not permit him to fulfill the duties of presidency and Nixon or someone else is nominated the Republican standard bearer, the Eisenhower record would be a major issue. Whoever the nominee, the President, the Vice President or anyone else, will have to defend that record and promise to continue the programs the President has started and the recommendations he has made.

A review of preconvention campaign literature issued by the Republican headquarters discloses how National Chairman Leonard W. Hall and the Senate and House campaign committees plan to retain the presidency and regain control of the Senate and House. The main points to be emphasized, with accompanying details, are the personal popularity of President Eisenhower and the claim that Republicans are responsible for the present peace and prosperity.

Whoever is the Democratic presidential nominee, voters will have the unusual opportunity of comparing what the two major parties have done in their respective positions of responsibility. For the first two years of the Eisenhower Administration the Republicans controlled Congress even though the Senate margin was razor-thin. Since January, 1955, the Democrats have controlled Congress, with a similar narrow Senate majority. The Democratic nominee will have to defend and explain the party's congressional record, particularly that of the present eighty-fourth Congress.

ALTHOUGH REPUBLICANS controlled the eighty-third Congress, President Eisenhower was denied the traditional "honeymoon" co-operation with the legislators. For this there were several reasons. Gen. Eisenhower had no experience in civilian government and apparently believed then that aggressive personal leadership would violate the theoretical co-equality of the executive and legislative branches; his party had been out of office for 20 years and was divided into unmanageable factions of conservatives, liberals, middle-of-the-roaders, isolationists and international co-operationists; he and his party had no ready made programs and he relied on special commissions to make recommendations on such subjects as foreign trade, social security extension, aid to education and farm legislation.

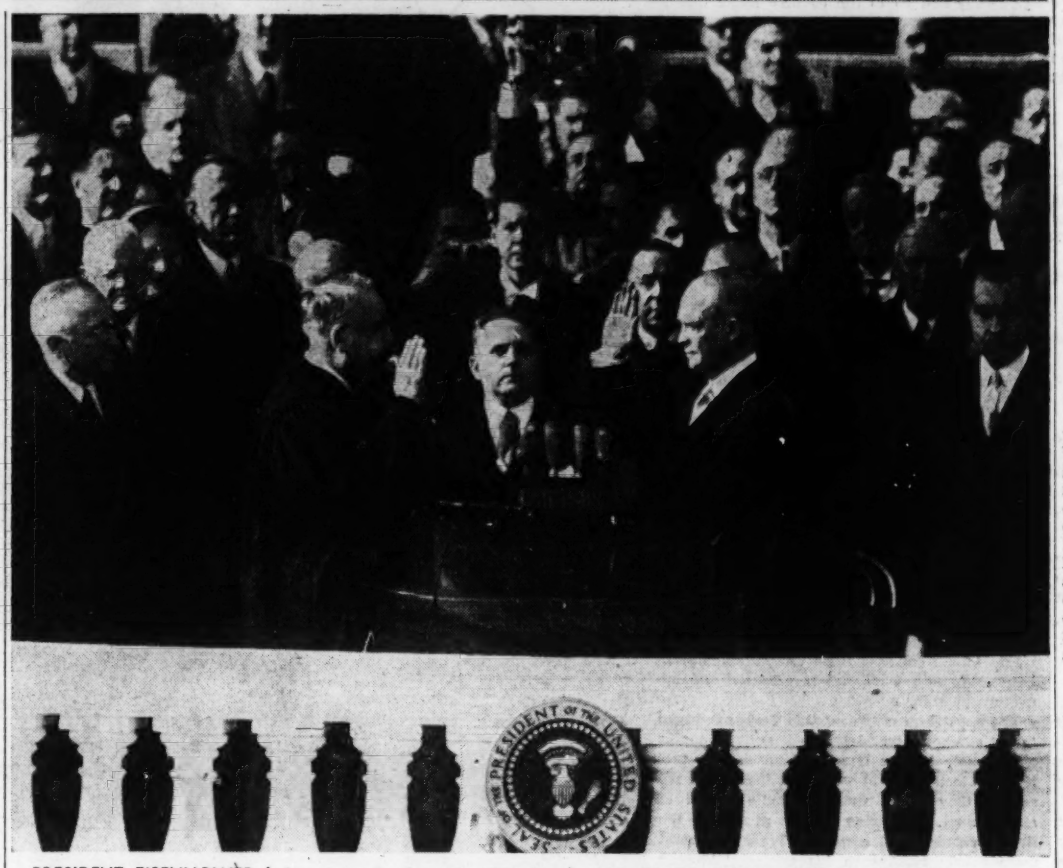

Much of what was accomplished during the first two years was done within the executive departments without the benefit of new legislation. In his first state of the union message, Mr. Eisenhower announced that the Seventh Fleet would no longer "shield" Communist China from invasion from Formosa by Chiang Kai-shek. He emphasized that this implied no aggressive intent on our part. Nevertheless, this order was quickly described as the "unleashing" of Chiang Kai-shek and caused some of our European allies great concern.

Robert J. Donovan, in his recent book, "Eisenhower, the Inside Story," which was written from official papers, says Secretary of State John Foster Dulles wrote this part of the speech after conferences with the President.

"They acted," Donovan reports, "with little or no recourse to military advisers because they regarded it primarily as a political matter."

Later Dulles and Adm. Arthur W. Radford, who had been named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, evolved the "massive retaliation" concept for defending the United States and its allies from Soviet aggression. This also caused concern among some of our European allies.

The greatest event in foreign affairs during the first year was the signing of the truce on July 26, 1953, to end the stalemate that existed in Korea since June, 1951. Candidate Eisenhower had promised during the 1952 campaign to end hostilities and made a trip there shortly after the election. In the meantime, Stalin had died and the Chinese Reds indicated they were willing to sign a truce dividing the country on roughly the same boundaries as when the Communist invasion started. This truce, plus the President's refusal to engage American troops in the Indochina war are the basis for the Republicans asserting that no American soldier is being shot at today in any part of the world.

The "prosperity" part of the campaign slogan stems from the executive order of Feb. 6, 1953, ending wage and price controls. This was in fulfillment of campaign pledges which promised or seemed to promise a balanced budget, reduced taxes, increased farm income, stabilized prices and expanded civil rights, especially for Negroes.

IN HIS EXECUTIVE CAPACITY, President Eisenhower was able to improve the lot of Negroes, mainly in the government agencies and the District of Columbia, without new legislation. This betterment, which has the support of northern Democrats, was vastly extended by the Supreme Court decisions in the school and other desegregation cases. It was not until this year that the Department of Justice recommended specific legislation, much of which has been reported to the House. It is likely, however, to be pigeonholed for the remainder of this session in the Senate.

Taxes were reduced seven and a half billion dollars annually by the revenue act of 1954 and a budget surplus of around two billion dollars is predicted for the fiscal year that ends tonight. Republican boasts of these accomplishments are countered by Democratic arguments that the tax reductions favored the higher income groups over the lower and that the reduction and the budget surplus were made at the expense of national defense outlays and desirable public projects.

One of the campaign promises quickly fulfilled by the first session of the Republican Congress was the passage of the so-called tidelands bill by which the Federal Government relinquished its authority over the mineral rich marginal land beyond the low tide mark. President Truman had vetoed this legislation and the Eisenhower promise was at least partly responsible for his carrying Texas and Florida.

Much of the legislation approved by the first session of the Eighty-third Congress had substantial Democratic support. The major enactments were:

Excess profits tax extension.
Cuts in foreign aid and military appropriations.
Reciprocal trade extension.
Establishment of the health, education and welfare department.
Liquidation of the RFC.
Disposal of rubber plants.
Foreign famine relief.
Admission of refugees.

Action on many of the Republican campaign promises was postponed. Some of the items are still unfinished business. Among those left after the so-called honeymoon period were:

General revenue revision.
Postal rate increases.
Social security expansion.
Taft-Hartley revision.
Atomic power development.
St. Lawrence seaway.
Statehood for Hawaii.

After the Cabinet appointments were announced, the Democrats claimed that the Eisenhower Administration would be government of, for and by big business. The Cabinet members were described as "nine millionaires and a plumber," the last named being the late Martin P. Durkin, a trade union official, who was appointed Secretary of Labor. He resigned within the year over a disagreement about Taft-Hartley law revision.

THE PRESIDENT is said to resent the "big business" label the Democrats have tried to attach to his Administration but is proud that it is "businesslike." To this end, he has followed his military training in establishing a definite chain-of-command under which appointees are responsible for the work under their jurisdiction. The co-ordinator or chief of staff is former Gov. Sherman Adams of New Hampshire, an original Eisenhower booster.

This arrangement has relieved Mr. Eisenhower from many of the details of government about which Presidents Roosevelt and Truman were informed and for which they usually were blamed and took responsibility if anything went wrong. Although it may have isolated Mr. Eisenhower from direct contact with some important problems it has enabled his administration to function smoothly on routine matters during his two illnesses.

One of his major campaign promises was to "clean up the mess in Washington," as the Republicans described the situation created by some of the Truman appointees.

The Republicans had their own trouble with appointees who used or had used their official positions for the betterment of their own or their friends' fortunes. In several instances, Mr. Eisenhower praised them after they had submitted their resignations.

The first to go was Wesley Roberts of Kansas, who resigned as Republican National Chairman after it became known he had previously collected a 10 per cent fee for selling a building to the Kansas State Government. Before his departure, he was presented with a silver tray by the President and Vice President and members of the Cabinet.

Others who resigned under fire included:

Harold E. Talbott, Secretary of the Air Force, when it became known he had used his office telephone and Air Force stationery to promote the business of Mulligan & Co., an efficiency firm, in which he owned 50 per cent of the stock and from which he had collected $132,932 in profits while in Government service. After his resignation he was awarded the Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian award.

Hugh Cross, Republican member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after he testified he had interceded with railroad companies for luggage and transportation facilities in Chicago.

Peter Strobel, Public Buildings Administrator, who recommended that a Government contract be awarded to an active client of his engineering firm.

Edward F. Mansure, General Services Administrator, after a witness testified Mansure had recommended that a Republican leader in Chicago be awarded an insurance contract on the GSA-operated Nicaro in Cuba.

Robert B. McLeaish, Agriculture Department Farm Home Administrator, after witnesses testified recently that he was a heavy drinker during office hours. He said Agriculture Secretary Benson had "strongly suggested" his resignation.

The "conflict of interest" statute has been invoked in the case of Adolphe Wenzell and the Dixon-Yates electric power combine still pending before the Federal Court of Appeals here. Wenzell acted in the dual capacity of a vice president of the First Boston Corporation and consultant to the budget when Atomic Energy Commission under presidential orders, was negotiating a contract with Dixon-Yates to build an electric power plant at West Memphis, Ark., to supply power to the TVA grid. His company later arranged a $100,000,000 financing for the private power companies.

President Eisenhower had described TVA as an example of "creeping socialism," and the AEC-Dixon-Yates contract, later canceled, was a device to halt TVA expansion. When Democrats and other protested the contract, Mr. Eisenhower promised to make full disclosure of all the details and defended Wenzell's role as "proper." Despite this White House promise, the Budget Bureau and the AEC deleted references to Wenzell's part in the negotiations from their published chronology of events. The Administration has reversed its opinion about Wenzell and is claiming that the conflict of interest statute was violated.

A more political case was the recent dropping of Murray Chotiner, Vice President Nixon's compaign adviser in 1952, by the Republican National Committee as a consultant. Chotiner, a California public relations expert as well as a lawyer, was called before the Senate Lobby Investigating Subcommittee to explain his calls on White House officials in behalf of his clients who were doing business with the Government. He was also questioned about clients with underworld connections. At first he declined to turn over his office records to committee investigators, but this week he said he would turn over some of the subpenaed papers.

ON THE CAMPAIGN TRAIN coming into St. Louis in October 1952, Gen. Eisenhower said his appointees would have to be "as clean as hound's tooth." That night at Kiel Auditorium he said:

"From the beginning we will bring into government men and women to whom low public morals are unthinkable. We will make sure that they (wrongdoers) do not get in government in the first place."

The recent record shows that this promise could not be carried out. It is to the credit of the Administration, however, that once wrong-doing was established, usually by congressional committees, the criticized officials were forced to resign—although their past services were often praised by the President.

Democratic defenders of the Truman Administration have argued that the scandals of that period were negligible compared with the "giveaways" of the Republicans. They say that the mink coats, top coats, deep freezes and free hotel accom-

Industry Still Benefits From Tax Write-Off Plan Dating From Korean War

Private Utilities Get What Is Called Equivalent of Interest-Free Loans—Fast Tax Write-Offs Go to Union Electric Co. of Missouri and to a Pittsburgh Firm Building Atomic Energy Plant.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 30.

THREE years after the end of the Korean war and in the midst of the greatest peacetime boom the country has ever seen the Office of Defense Mobilization is still issuing certificates for fast tax write-offs to industry that are in effect interest-free loans.

The policy of the five-year tax write-off was initiated after the start of the Korean War under the Truman Administration to give indirect help to firms building facilities for defense production that might otherwise not have been built. But it has continued down to the present with the latest report of the Office of Defense Mobilization showing the total of tax amortization certificates at $36,271,546,000 of which $22,001,691,000 can be written off in five years. In the period from May 31 to June 13 of this year tax certificates amounting to $148,056,189 were granted.

NEW DEAL DEMOCRATS sputter indignantly over what they say is a bonanza by a business administration to big business. As one of them put it:

"They screamed about mink coats under Truman. But this is hundreds of millions and even billions for a favored few. I guess the trouble is you can understand about mink coats but the quick tax write-off doesn't get across."

Actually, although like many of the controversies in the Eisenhower Administration it never showed above the surface, there was a sharp dispute over whether the fast tax write-off should be continued. Opponents in the Administration argued that the privilege was being granted to construct facilities which would have been built in the course of the peacetime boom in any event; that the "defense" justification was in most instances no longer valid. As a result the practice was in part suspended for re-evaluation.

During the suspension, Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey, who has shown that he does not tailor his convictions to political expediency, spoke out strongly, calling the accelerated tax write-off "an artificial stimulus of a dangerous type." Testifying before a House committee he said:

"Our defense capacity cannot soundly be separated from the broad base of productive capacity in general on which our nation relies for its economic strength. Artificial stimulants may well become artificial controls. Because this one is not of universal application but is bestowed only upon some who especially qualify as against others who do not, it could become a hindrance to sound, balanced, vigorous growth of our whole free economy. It is not the American way."

In other words, if private enterprise is to continue to be private it must remain free—free not only of controls but of subsidies which are often followed by control. He pointed out that the Government's tax loss as a result of the policy would be $880,000,000 in the current fiscal year and he added that this might well stand in the way of "more general tax reductions for all taxpayers which would be of important assistance to all business and to our continued economic growth."

It is on the tax write-offs granted to private utilities that the dispute is sharpest with public power advocates throwing back at private utilities the charge of "subsidy" which they have long raised against public power. A compilation of the American Public Power Association shows $2,846,475,340 in private utility development eligible for the five-year write-off. The Association claims that this interest-free loan, as it has been called by the Federal Power commission, invested at 6 per cent for the accounting period of thirty-three and one-third years would realize a subsidy of $4,276,811,362. The utilities say this is nonsense since what is saved in five years goes to pay later taxes.

The same argument touches the claim of Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, that private utilities must be allowed with private capital to develop atomic power. The Duquesne Light Company at Pittsburgh has under construction the only large atomic power development. Of the total investment of roughly $107,000,000 the Commission is supplying $92,000,000 and Duquesne under the contract $15,000,000. But after the contract was signed Duquesne applied for a five-year tax write-off which was granted on $10,500,000. It is charged that over a 33-year period that will be equivalent to nearly the amount the utility supplied to the project.

All this is so complicated that it hardly comes within the scope of ordinary politics. But if the economic climate should change it is not hard to imagine how these tax privileges, and the search now going on for newly opened loopholes, could be exploited in a sensational congressional investigation. That kind of reaction has in the past brought the restraints that business and industry have most bitterly resented.

On Sept. 29, 1955, which was in effect the end of the period of re-evaluation, the Office of Defense Mobilization announced that there would be a cut-off date of December 31 for applications for tax write-offs on electric power and power equipment expansion. A similar cut-off date was fixed for other industries including freight cars, where some of the most potent pressures had come, and mineral development.

Applications filed prior to that date are still being processed. Among them are two from the Idaho Power Company to cover the low dams projected by that private utility for the Hell's Canyon site. The controversy over Hell's Canyon, with public power advocates arguing for a federally-built high dam, is a major issue in many western states.

Figures released by ODM show that the Union Electric Company of Missouri has received approval for $40,893,871 in fast tax write-offs. Of this total $25,709,000 was granted prior to 1954. The latest approval was for $409,710 on June 25 of this year. This is the equivalent of an interest-free loan of $18,075,909, or, taking the computation of the public power advocates on the basis of 6 per cent for thirty-three and one-third years, to a total subsidy over that period of $61,445,976. It should be added that the same accounting method —6 per cent on the amount of what constitutes an interest-free loan—was used in one instance documented in a congressional hearing by Ebasco Services, Inc., perhaps the largest firm serving the private utilities.

The question of electric power supply —whether adequate or inadequate for an expanding economy—has long been argued in the public versus private power debate. The private utilities have opposed too rapid expansion which would endanger the investment of their stockholders. Public power champions have repeatedly charged that if it had not been for the pressures they applied, with competition in the public sector, there would have been disastrous power shortages seriously handicapping production in World War II.

This argument developed first in the long dispute over the Tennessee Valley Authority. In a series of lectures given under the auspices of the Walgreen Foundation at the University of Chicago shortly before his term as chairman of the TVA expired, Gordon R. Clapp talked about power supply, the tax write-offs and the contention of the utilities that they must be protected against an excess power capacity.

"As of June, 1953, according to the Defense Electric Power Administration," Clapp said, "636 electric power projects have received certificates for rapid tax amortization. These projects are increasing United States electric power capacity by some 22 million kilowatts over about a three-year period. Twenty-two million kilowatts of new capacity is about equal to the 1950-53 expansion of all utilities; if we are to assume that this expansion, consistent with the purpose of the tax amortization scheme, would not have been undertaken by the utilities without federal assistance, it would follow that the lack of enterprise and the fear of surplus power capacity among utilities is even more serious."

According to Clapp, the power capacity being built under the tax write-off program was going almost entirely into non-defense outlets, leaving little margin for a defense emergency and thereby defeating the real goal of the tax grant. As an alternative to protect the investor against excess supply and idle plants, he proposed that the Government guarantee the companies "against losses from surpluses which actually occur." If this were operated in line with insurance principles, he pointed out, it would cost the Government nothing if no surplus actually developed.

PART OF THE DISPUTE over the write-offs for the power companies has centered on who is to get the ultimate benefits—the company and the stockholders or the consumer of electric power. Arguments were heard before the Federal Power Commission on the right of utility customers to benefit in lower rates from what the Commission found "had the precise effect of a grant by our government to a certificate holder of an interest-free loan."

The Commission, by a vote of four to one, held that the utilities were under no necessity to change their rate structure because of benefits resulting from the tax write-offs. The sole dissenter, Dale Doty, who was not reappointed when his term on the Commission expired, said "In my opinion the decision will require rate payers to pay far more than a fair return for utility services, contrary to a long line of precedents established by this Commission which have been upheld by the courts."

The fact that the public power issue is politically a hot one has put special emphasis on the tax privileges granted to utilities. Actually they constitute only about 10 per cent of the total. When the ODM announced after the re-evaluation that tax write-offs would be resumed 32 "expansion goals" were declared open, 20 relating to production facilities, seven for material, four for transportation and one for research facilities. This takes in a wide range of the American economy.

From Two Lawyers

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have read your editorial captioned, "'No' to a House Committee," in which you state that your newspaper had declined to send a representative to appear before the House Appropriations Committee to be interrogated relative to your editorial, published last Sunday, "Losing the Peaceful Atom."

Your position is well taken. I heartily agree with you when you state that your appearance as requested by the committee would be rendering "a profound disservice to freedom of the press as guaranteed by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution."

The instant situation is disturbing, to say the least. I wonder how far this sort of thing will go unless sincere adherents to the principles of a free press and free speech become vocal? ALVIN C. BOHM.

Edwardsville.

The Post-Dispatch no doubt will be accused of hiding behind the First Amendment to the Constitution. I should like to say that the Post-Dispatch was absolutely correct in asserting the First Amendment because the amendments to the Constitution are much like the muscles of our body. They only gain strength through use.

I do think, however, that there is very little difference between using the First Amendment and the Fifth Amendment, and I sincerely hope that newspapers which may assert the First Amendment, will not be over-critical of individuals who may assert any of the other amendments to our Constitution.

I detest Communism and everything associated with it. Nevertheless, I believe it behooves the newspapers not to criticize the use of one of the amendments to the Constitution, but rather to criticize the known facts about a person who did assert the Fifth Amendment.

Again I say that the Post-Dispatch was correct in asserting the First Amendment which protects the freedom of the press. HALE W. BROWN.

Peddling Garbage

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The denunciation of the Supreme Court and especially of Chief Justice Warren by Senators Eastland and McCarthy is appalling. Their accusations of Communistic infiltrations into our highest tribunal is just the kind of political and demogogic garbage expected of them.

Instead of compiling a worthwhile voting record while in the Senate, these men choose to spend their time doing just the opposite—headline hunting with their filth and trash. Their careful phrasing that perhaps Warren himself is not a Communist, but the Chief Justice has Communistic leanings in his court, paraphrases Anthony's words when he says the slayers of Caesar are "honest men."

Any Idioms, Please?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am attempting to illustrate the colorful differences between our 48 states by citing picturesque local phrases and homely idioms which are as characteristic of each state, verbally, as its flag or its flower, visually.

In Virginia, for example, my Charlottesville hostess, a descendant of Thomas Jefferson, instead of saying "It's a long time since you dined with us," greeted me with the more vivid, more memorable phrase, "My, George, but it's a long time since you chewed with us."

In Texas, where my family comes from and where I've spent an occasional summer vacation on a ranch wrangling horses, I've heard Will Clayton remark "he came around making a poor mouth," meaning he came complaining.

I wish readers of the Post-Dispatch would be kind enough to jot down a few such expressions which would enable a blindfolded stranger, dropped by parachute, to say, soon after landing, "I must be in Missouri." If so I will be exceedingly grateful. Eventually, I hope to chart these key-phrases, state by state, in a chapter tentatively titled "Atlas of American Folk Talk," in a book on colorful speech around the world.

A Hound's Tooth Boy

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I see where another of the Eisenhower high-powered, hound's tooth boys, chock full of integrity (in this case whisky), has been forced out by congressional investigation.

Robert McLeaish should have, and no doubt will get, a nice letter from Sherman Adams, praising him for doing a wonderful job as Ike will not likely be told at this time, and as usual he won't read the newspapers!

What an improvement this Administration is over the Truman crowd! J. W. MORGAN.

Debt: the American Way?

If Americans took the advice of Polonius, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," the probability is that our economic system would collapse.

We have become a nation of borrowers and lenders—mostly borrowers—on a staggering scale. Most Americans are in debt, to each other of course. They go in debt for automobiles, refrigerators, houses, clothes, television sets, garbage disposal units, and more automobiles.

Records are being set one way or another in nearly every postwar year. The statistics are staggering.

Automobile loans now add up to 14.7 billion dollars, according to The Wall Street Journal. This is 28 per cent more than last year and 132 per cent above the figure for 1950.

Personal installment loans total 5.8 billion, up 15 per cent in a year and 105 per cent above 1950. Single-payment loans—the kind offered mostly by banks and pawnbrokers—total 2.9 billions, a gain of 15 per cent in a year and 58 per cent more than in 1950. Life insurance loans total 3.4 billions, up 6 per cent in a year and 39 per cent above 1950.

This year, it is true, consumer credit generally has not risen as sharply as it did during the fantastic buying spree of 1955, which sent the total to six billions, but still it stands at an all-time high.

The main consumer credit record being set this year involves repayments. In June alone, it is estimated, Americans repaid nearly three billions on their debts. This is half as much as they repaid during the whole year of 1939.

Hence the American people are a borrowing people, borrowing for a rising standard of living. The danger, of course, is that debt might rise beyond the possibility of repayment. This would be particularly true in case of depression, and recession or even "rolling readjustments" would dampen the credit ardor.

What are the restrictions on this perpetual motion machine of credit? First there are the Federal Reserve Board regulations, which make it harder to borrow when borrowing grows too inflationary. Second, there is the repayment compulsion itself. Americans are repaying debts, and their intent to do so limits the amount they will borrow in the future.

Finally there is the close inspection of borrowers by the lenders. Banks and stores and even small loan agencies may resort to standard credit ratings as well as to individual experience. Insurance companies do not need such assurances since their borrowers are taking money out of insurance payments.

What is a good credit risk? The Wall Street Journal quotes an officer of a big loan agency as saying, "A man with a job is generally a good credit risk." This certainly shows confidence in the American people. It also reflects the remarkable optimism which underlies the credit prosperity which supports so much of all prosperity.

Borrowing and lending has, of course, been an important business activity for centuries—in fact, since the days of ancient Sumeria, when records were kept on clay tablets. But in no nation at no time has credit come close to the importance which it now holds in the American scheme of things. Perhaps 80 per cent of the middle-income group in this country is in debt for installment purchases—and that is only part of the picture.

If a penny saved is a penny earned, Poor Richard would have a hard time today. The idea of thrift seems to have been closeted with old copies of his Almanac, and in its place is a concept of borrowing and spending which supports the jobs and machines that grind out the things that people borrow for—and make borrowing and spending even easier.

A penny borrowed today is a penny invested in anticipation of a good tomorrow. But can all America be so sure of what tomorrow will bring?

A Subcommittee's Opportunity

Senator Hennings's subcommittee on juvenile delinquency will enjoy an opportunity to perform an urgent public service at its hearings in St. Louis beginning next Friday.

The subcommittee can play a very real part in helping to bring light to bear on what is admittedly a hard, complex and frequently heart-wrenching problem. That part is to attempt to elicit the facts, especially as they pertain to juvenile activities in the St. Louis area.

Is delinquency on the rise in St. Louis? Is the current impression of wholesale teen-age violence accurate? Or is it out of perspective?

Are the incidents spreading of their own momentum, as Senator Hennings has noted with alarm?

By and large St. Louis is a clean, law-abiding community. Parents have been shocked at some of the things they have read. They also want the full facts. The Senate subcommittee can help and everyone ought to be glad it is taking the time to come to St. Louis.

Yankee Doodle, Esq.

Yankee Doodle, celebrated in the poetry column in anticipation of Independence day, probably began life as a stereotype of American bumpkinism. But like the horseless carriage, the flying jenny and so many other new things laughed at in their salad days, Yankee Doodle has grown in maturity to a position of substance and respect. He has ceased to be an object of ridicule and become a source of entertainment—to himself as much as anyone else.

Both the words and the music are of unknown-to-debatable origin. Edward Everett Hale, who wrote still another American classic, The Man Without a Country, said the words were written by Edward Bangs, a judge in Worcester county, Mass., so Burton E. Stevenson, the anthologist, reports in his The Home Book of Verse. A booklet on Houses of History in New York State, just published by the New York State Chamber of Commerce, holds otherwise. It says a British army surgeon, Dr. Richard Shuckburgh, wrote the verses while seated on the well curb at the rear of a brick house in Rensselaer, N.Y., known as Fort Crailo and now a museum.

The Dictionary of American History says the words probably were written by many persons at many times, and the tune is most like an old one, possibly Dutch. The original ballad according to this source seems to have been The Yankee's Return From Camp, a satire, and at an educated guess it was a Tory or Briton who combined all the subsequent variations into the present form. The air, reports the Dictionary of American History, was said to have been originally called "Nancy Dawson," "Lucy Locket" or "Kitty Fisher," and is supposed to have been introduced into the colonies by an English fife major of the Grenadier Guards about 1750.

The youngster who, in some versions, stuck a feather in his hat and called it macaroni, has long since run the gamut from bumpkin to patriot. The flag-waving song-and-dance man who gave his regards to Broadway, George M. Cohan, took the name proudly as his own, becoming perhaps the first exponent of 100 per cent Yankee Doodleism. "I'm a Yankee Doodle dandy," sang he, with his star-spangled strut, "Born on the Fourth of July."

As July Begins

President Eisenhower is at his Gettysburg farm and the country along with him is resting easier. Just three weeks ago today he was a post-operation patient following an attack of ileitis so serious that he was given almost immediate abdominal surgery. Happily he has progressed well enough that his doctors felt he could safely leave Walter Reed Hospital yesterday and go to the country home that he and Mrs. Eisenhower enjoy so much.

As after his heart attack nine months ago in Denver, the President has gradually taken on some of the duties of his high office. These duties have included signing bills and commissions, receiving distinguished visitors and holding conferences with leading Cabinet officers and White House staff members. The prospect is that there will be still more work at Gettysburg, as indeed there needs to be for the President to catch up on the accumulated tasks that await his serious attention.

Inevitably the question of a second candidacy has been revived. Gratifying as is the President's progress toward recovery, his convalescence obviously is not far enough along for him to be sure whether he will have the renewed health and strength which the presidency requires. As we have said before, Mr. Eisenhower is entitled to think through this serious problem without undue pressure either way.

Meantime Congress has been very busy. It has passed the biggest highway construction program in all history and the law for the pay-as-you-ride taxes is now in force. It has passed a defense appropriation bill, upgraded so as to provide, wisely we think, more funds than the budget-guided Administration asked for. It has passed authorization bills for foreign aid, a necessary preliminary to the consideration of foreign aid appropriations. It has seen action in the House that has pried school aid and civil rights bills from the Rules Committee pigeonhole. It is getting on with presidential appointments and other business.

When partisan critics of this Congress began to put a "do-nothing" label on it several months ago, Senate Leader Lyndon Johnson said that if the objectors would wait until the end of the session they would find an ample record of achievement. It begins to look as though the final reckoning will show the Texas Democrat more nearly right than his critics. Already there are accomplishments that stand to the credit of members of both parties.

The Moderate Way to Peace

The State Department is to be complimented on the restraint of its official comment on the bloody outbreak in Poland. The department avoided inflammatory propaganda and loose assurances which might have led to a further vain sacrifice of human life. Yet the statement was in no way subservient to the Communist powers. It recognized the hunger for freedom, sympathized with the families of the victims, and urged the Soviet Union to take the lead in enabling the people of Eastern Europe to determine their own future.

The sane tone of the statement is attributed to the influence of career diplomats in a series of conferences with Secretary of State Dulles. This shows the value of experience and training in a delicate situation—especially since the moderate statement is in line with the new appeal of President Eisenhower and the National Security Council for a broader exchange of people and ideas between East and West.

Uninhibited travel, the free circulation of publications and films, an end of radio jamming, professional collaboration and the like—always with due prudence—have ever been the best means for breaking down barriers between nations. Familiarity breeds not contempt, but understanding. If in the spirit of Geneva the present Russian regime is willing to meet the West half-way, much may come of the exchanges.

There is no guarantee of success. But it is heartening that the President, instead of being rigid, is eager to try this process of conciliation. After all, what is there to lose? And the prize is genuine peace.

Time Is Passing

What advice, we wonder, has United States Attorney Clifford Raemer at East St. Louis had from Attorney General Brownell concerning legal action in the case of the New Harmony Bridge and its commissioners, including former Congressman Roy Clippinger of Carmi?

It is more than two months since the select committee of the House of Representatives, consisting of Congressmen Denton of Indiana and Simpson and Price of Illinois, reported on the financial flim-flam of Clippinger & Co. which has kept tolls on the St. Louis-Evansville route bridge even though it might have been declared free of tolls years ago.

The committee unanimously recommended that the United States attorneys concerned look into the record and see what appropriate legal action might be indicated. It also recommended that Mr. Clippinger and all his pals on the commission be fired and a new management be set up. And it recommended that either Illinois or Indiana take over the bridge and that if neither state did, the United States Bureau of Roads assume control of it.

That was Mr. Raemer's cue to go into action. His first move was to ask the Department of Justice for instructions. If he has received any instructions he has failed to make them public. What if anything did Attorney General Brownell advise? What if anything is United States Attorney Raemer going to do?

Secretary Wilson to Senator Lehman

Secretary of Defense Wilson has done the straightforward thing of apologizing to Senator Lehman for the so-called "debugging" episode at the New York Senator's office. What happened was that two security officers from the Defense Department and a member of the Capitol police force made an "inspection" of Senator Lehman's office in the Senate office building without notice or consultation with the Senator or his administrative assistant.

This was a wholly uncalled for invasion of the premises of the Legislative Branch by agents of the Executive Branch. Secretary Wilson recognized it as such when the trespass became known. Mansfield D. Sprague, general counsel of the Defense Department, paid a personal visit to Senator Lehman to extend apologies. That is the way to handle such breaches and were they acknowledged more promptly a lot of trouble could be minimized.

AND THE PEDESTAL TOO?

The Decline of Radicalism

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Gone are the days of Young Communist campus dances; despite its history, nation now frowns on extremists; though poverty remains, people hear everything is getting better and better; few want to express dissatisfaction, but it may show up indirectly.

John Stanley in The Commonweal

When one no longer saw on the student bulletin boards of a big New York university a group of notices reading, say, "Young Marxist Study Group will meet tonight at 8:30, Room 305," or, "Young Communists' League Dance—stag or drag," he could know that this was the end of an era. The presence of "young radicals" was considered a normal part of the student picture.

But one would feel a bit guilty today to name the universities which felt it their duty to permit this activity. The charitable thing to do in these very different days is not to embarrass these institutions and their administrations by adverting to such ancient facts of life.

It is all the more tragic that this nation, which has such a rich heritage, seems to have become frightened by it. It is forced to acknowledge, much against the current grain, that liberty and rebellion are part of its traditions.

Of course, even in the "old days" these basic notions didn't have universal acceptance; but the ethos of the open society of 15 years ago was much more receptive to the energetic reception of radical doctrine.

With Nobody Out of Step

At least in the upper levels of conscious desire the nation has achieved—or is in sight of achieving—quite desirable goals; and it doesn't want this process disturbed. It is in no temper to tolerate interference with what it considers to be a steady forward march.

Not all of the voices loosely termed "radical" have gone dumb. It is rather that most people cannot seem to hear what they are saying. There seems to be a general feeling, for one thing, that the economic situation of most people is getting better and better, and that whatever defects remain will be remedied one by one through what are now considered "normal" channels: federal, state or local government agencies, or through one of the philanthropic foundations, or through the unions.

This is not to deny that in this country there are millions of human beings who are enduring varying degrees of real poverty. But probably most of our 165,000,000 inhabitants are persuaded, both by their own experience and the constant propaganda of our mass-media, that all is basically well.

Confusion and Fatigue

In such a world the young man with radical leanings begins to feel doubts as to the legitimacy of his case against a system which provides such abundance. The "victims" of the system wonder a little if there isn't something wrong with them that they're not getting on in it, or adjusting to it.

There are slums, true, but on all sides they are tearing them down, and the great red towers of housing projects are going up. (Many of these housing projects have a population density greater than that of the slums they replace and there is apt to be a bit of regimentation in them, but. . . .)

The streets of towns and cities are crowded with cars, fat and shiny, and with gigantic trailer-trucks, noisy and smelly; but few beside Lewis Mumford have any complaint with our urban-industrial physiognomy.

It is said that the base of much of our prosperity is war preparation, but even the paupered minority feel that this is necessary. For most Americans the Soviet Union is a constant and mortal threat to the national existence, and they are prepared to agree to just about anything in order to maintain intact what we have here, including "massive retaliation."

Some would blame the decline of radicalism on a general corruption brought about through a widespread acceptance of business morality, including the advertising agencies' uses and abuses of truth and talent. Connected with this is the growing conception that matter and people are not valuable in themselves but exist for the purpose of being exploited. Some blame it on the two wars; some on bureaucracy. One thing is certain: There's great confusion and fatigue.

It seems valid to say that the present ethos, whether it is considered good or bad, is created by the almost total mechanization and urbanization of our culture. One cannot help but feel that somehow the organization of production and distribution and recreation and politics and religion and education and all the rest of it have become so massive and complex that the individual feels overwhelmed by it. He feels that it is utterly beyond him to do anything about it except make cynical remarks.

Into a Different Age

Thus, at a certain point quantitative differences become qualitative. H-bomb warfare is not simply bigger than the wars, say, between Italian city-states during the Middle Ages; it is a different thing altogether. A factory in which they have installed automation is not simply bigger than the village smithy; it is different.

It is this great remove from source that has made so many feel ineffectual and empty—tired radicals. So many compromises have to be made just to exist that many feel they are constantly betraying themselves. The head swims in confusion and the heart sinks.

The New York Herald Tribune ran a series of articles last year on juvenile delinquency, and one of the theories advanced was that parents of the offending youth unconsciously support their attitudes and consequent activities because they themselves would like to rebel against this society.

No Leader, No Following

Many times it is difficult not to get the impression during labor-management negotiations that the workers cannot wait to go out on strike and are reluctant to go back to work. It has been pointed out that men strike not so much for better wages, hours and conditions, but simply to express their deep hatred for their employers, their work and their way of life.

But today there seems to be no leader who either has the desire or the ability to catalyze dissatisfaction into a radical movement.

There is a constant leakage of the best in the working class to the management class, leaving labor short of leadership; "Son of factory hand becomes corporation counsel" is, after all, a great American dream.

Altruism is suspect. There will never be a radical movement to flourish and bear fruit with that kind of a breeze blowing across the land. It will not develop when the average man feels himself unimportant and impotent, with the situation no longer in his hands, no sense of mission or the grandeur of an inheritance, nor when he is kept a spectator while the professionals run everything for him, and make sure that he is kept busy, reasonably comfortable, and never bored.

THE PREACHER-FISHERMAN.

From the Fort Myers (Fla.) Free Press.

The preacher at the wedding ceremony was an ardent fisherman. He asked the groom: "Do you promise to love, honor and cherish this woman?" "I do," said the groom, meekly. "O.K.," said the preacher, turning to the bride. "Reel him in."

Yankee Doodle

Father and I went down to camp,
Along with Captain Gooding,
And there we see the men and boys,
As thick as hasty pudding.

Chorus—Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle, dandy,
Mind the music and the step,
And with the girls be handy.

And there we see a thousand men,
As rich as 'Squire David;
And what they wasted every day
I wish it could be saved.

The 'lasses they eat every day
Would keep our house a winter;
They have so much that, I'll be bound,
They eat whene'er they're a mind to.

And there we see a swamping gun,
As big as a log of maple,
Upon a deuced little cart,
A load for father's cattle.

And every time they shoot it off,
It takes a horn of powder,
And makes a noise like father's gun,
Only a nation louder.

I went as nigh to one myself
As Siah's underpinning;
And father went as nigh again,
I thought the deuce was in him.

Cousin Simon grew so bold,
I thought he would have cocked it;
It scared me so, I shrinked it off,
And hung by father's pocket.

And Captain Davis had a gun,
He kind of clapped his hand on't,
And stuck a crooked stabbing-iron
Upon the little end on't.

And there I see a pumpkin shell
As big as mother's basin;
And every time they touched it off,
They scampered like the nation.

I see a little barrel, too,
The heads were made of leather,
They knocked upon 't with little clubs
To call the folks together.

And there was Captain Washington,
And gentlefolks about him,
They say he's grown so tarnal proud
He will not ride without 'em.

He had got on his meeting clothes,
And rode a strapping stallion,
And gave his orders to the men,—
I guess there was a million.

The flaming ribbons in his hat,
They looked so tearing fine ah,
I wanted peskily to get,
To give to my Jemima.

And then I see a snarl of men
A digging graves, they told me.
So tarnal long, so tarnal deep,
They 'tended they should hold me.

It scared me so, I hooked it off,
Nor stopped, as I remember,
Nor turned about, till I got home,
Locked up in mother's chamber.

Heaping Attention on Twining New Sign That Russia May Be Seeking 'Peaceful Competition'

Khrushchev Insulted All but U.S. Delegation — America Warned to Meet Problem of Flexible Soviet Diplomacy or Find Itself Isolated.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

MOSCOW, June 30.

PRAVDA, the official Soviet newspaper, gave four and one-half lines to the reception given to the visiting air delegations from 28 countries at the Soviet Army Club last Sunday. At this party, Communist party Secretary Nikita Khrushchev, Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Marshal of the Soviet Union Georgi Zhukov showered the American delegation with attention and protestations of friendship for President Eisenhower and the United States.

Krushchev may be said to have insulted every delegation, including its great ally Red China, except the United States. Speaking of the various delegations Khrushchev said, "Have I mentioned Albania? Have I mentioned Poland?" and so on for other Communist small allies.

France's amour propre was wounded by the implication that France did not have enough money to build atomic weapons.

All the Communist delegations were seated away from the places of honor, the Americans, British and French being closest to the senior officials.

Twining Had Choice Seat.

Early in the evening in the grand ballroom at a long table with the senior officials seated on one side facing the rest of the gathering, Air Force Chief of Staff Nathan F. Twining was seated between Marshal of the Soviet Union Koniev and Party Secretary Khrushchev. British Air Secretary Sir Nigel Birch was seated between Khrushchev and Bulganin.

Later in the evening outdoors Twining was seated directly opposite Khrushchev and Bulganin and next to Zuhkov and Sokolovsky. Only the British and French were asked to join the Americans here.

At this table Khrushchev toasted President Eisenhower in the warmest words. He said, "We hold him high in our esteem. Why do we esteem him highly? His honesty. When he was Commander in Chief he always kept his word. This makes him great. We believe he has the best intentions. To the health of President Eisenhower!"

Bulganin Toasts Eden.

The diplomatic Bulganin then stepped into the breach to toast British Prime Minister Anthony Eden: "Another great man." Then French Prime Minister Mollet was toasted, but neither in such glowing terms as were reserved for Mr. Eisenhower.

The toast to China came as afterthought at this time and the head of the Chinese delegation was called over by first Deputy Prime Minister Anastas Mikoyan to take his seat directly across the table from American Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen. Soviet officers brought up a chair and placed it behind Mikoyan. The Chinese air marshal took it and then Khrushchev stood up and proposed his long toast to China.

The problem that now concerns diplomats is just what does all this friendliness to the Western powers, most particularly to the United States, mean? That it was not a carefully planned and staged expression of feeling, one diplomat said, organized deliberately by the Foreign Ministry, is indicated by the fact that the Russian people know nothing about it. It may not be settled policy.

Khrushchev remarked once that it takes a long time for bureaucrats to learn new ways.

Assessment Made.

Informed speculation is that when the new leaders came to power in the Soviet Union, they made a long and careful assessment of the situation of the U.S.S.R. and the policies to be followed. Any such assessment would indicate that the rigidity of the pressure tactics of the Stalin-Molotov era had been a complete failure.

Unleasing the Korean aggression had only served to arm the West and to force the Western powers into its present great system of military alliances in self-defense.

Such an assessment would indicate that anywhere the use of force was attempted to expand Communist domination it would be met with force. This is a tribute to the system of regional defensive alliances started in the Truman Administration and extended by the Eisenhower Administration.

Necessarily, such an assessment included a re-examination of the place of the Soviet armed forces in the political and economic new line. Stalin had pretentions to being a military expert and he had embodied his ideas in writings that had the force of law.

Stalin held to the last that air forces were of value principally to support ground forces and had no independent role. In the early days after their accession to power, Khrushchev and company proceeded slowly. Internal conditions in the Soviet Union were ameliorated and the improvement has continued.

Tried to Correct Errors.

As the new leaders gained confidence they set out to correct some of the Stalin errors. The first major effort to overcome Stalin's mistakes was the pilgrimage to Yugoslavia. Here the Soviet leaders admitted that Stalin was wrong and Tito right. He was welcomed back into the Communist world as an equal and not as a representative of a colony. The operation was completed with Tito's visit to Moscow this month. In the joint communique issued June 20, Tito associated himself with the current international policies of the Soviet Union.

The move toward Tito was followed by good-will trips by Khrushchev and Bulganin to a number of Asian countries and to Great Britain. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru made a return visit to the Soviet Union and Prime Minister Guy Mollet of France visited Moscow. Zhukov started his personal correspondence with President Eisenhower, probably as long as two years ago, and this seems to have been the basis of the President's intuition that war in the immediate future was unlikely and that it was safe to cut back American armed forces.

U. S. Reversed Position.

At the several disarmament conferences of the subcommittee of the United Nations Disarmament Committee, the Soviets successively revised their proposals for disarmament to meet Western objections only to find that as soon as the Western proposals had been accepted the West reversed its position. It must have been confusing to the Russians.

At the conference of the heads of state at Geneva a year ago, the Soviet leaders did their best to convince the Western chiefs of state of their good intentions. The conference of Foreign Ministers that followed, however, found Molotov sticking to his old line and giving nothing.

With the replacement of Molotov as Foreign Minister there may be some change, in the opinion of diplomats here.

The invitation to Twining and the marked attention heaped upon him in comparison with Communist allies of the Soviet Union is another sign that the Soviet leaders may honestly be trying to achieve what they called "peaceful competition" with the United States.

Speak from Confidence.

About one thing foreign diplomats in Moscow are in agreement. The Soviet leaders are speaking from confidence and strength and not from weakness.

The following conversation took place at the reception last Sunday: Khrushchev — "The principal question is agreement between the two great powers, United States and the Soviet Union. We must agree with each other, you and us. If you don't want to reduce arms, we have patience."

Bohlen—"We have a little patience."

Khrushchev—"We have also. We can have a competition in patience."

Moscow diplomats and newsmen do not have any doubt that the Soviet Union has already reduced its armed forces 650,000 men and intends to go through with the new reduction of 1,200,000 that has been announced to take place during the next year. Although Western authorities have no way of checking this, it has been announced to the Soviet people who will know whether or not it is taking place.

Borders Protected.

There are good reasons why the Soviets can make these reductions if they are willing to maintain, as the United States does, a deterrent and defensive military establishment. The Soviet Union is surrounded either with border states subject to it or with relatively weak south Asian powers. The border states—North Korea, China, North Vietnam and the Eastern European satellites—have substantial armed forces that now are considered reliable and protect the Soviet Union from conventional invasion.

The only excuse to maintain a great army and other military forces under these conditions would be for offensive purposes. Defensively the border states give the Soviets time to mobilize their reserves.

Equally important in the reduction is the new Soviet military policy to place the greatest emphasis on air atomic power. The Russians can now see the time when they will be a match for the United States in this field. But an air force costs about twice as much per man in the Soviet Union just as it does in the United States.

Navy Belittled.

Khrushchev, and unquestionably this is the official policy, seems to have been converted to the theory of the primacy of the air nuclear weapon. He said at the reception: "I can't understand why a navy man, Admiral Radford, is Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In any future war the big problem of the navy will be to preserve its fleet. All forms of armed forces have moved ahead but the navy has fallen behind. It's like a turtle. It is the same with you as it is with us."

The Russians have announced that they will lay up 375 naval vessels and reduce the army by one-third. When this is done the Soviet armed forces will be smaller than the American.

The United States military position is quite different and Khrushchev's ideas are not applicable. Any military action would have to take place across a great ocean and the ocean lanes must be kept open by a navy, at least today.

It is necessary to maintain two supporting establishments, one in the United States and another abroad, and long lines of communication. It is necessary also for the United States to be prepared for small wars without atomic weapons as well as for great wars.

Couldn't Follow Lead.

Consequently it would be a disaster for the United States to follow the Soviet lead and make any substantial reduction in its armed forces unless, as Twining told his Russian hosts, "We are sure of world wide arms control."

Furthermore, what does peaceful competition mean? If it is merely in the economic and political fields the United States has nothing to fear. But if the relaxation of tension, the increase in trade and visits between the Soviet Union and the United States is only for the purpose of making subversive activities by national Communist parties easier, then the United States does not want peaceful competition.

Some diplomats in Moscow believe that the Soviet Union now feels so strong that it does not need Communist parties abroad. It probably is willing to write them off, but also to use them if they can be helpful.

Syria a Case in Point.

The Soviets feel now that they can win nations by economic and political means instead of subverting them. Syria, where the new Soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs D. T. Shepilov has been on a mission of good will, is one such place where the nation may be won to the Communist side without being communized.

The new policy and the new flexibility in foreign relations of the U.S.S.R. poses a serious diplomatic problem to the United States, if the United States sticks to the posture that was adopted to combat the Stalin direction of foreign policy. If the United States is unable to maneuver to meet the new situation, the United States is very apt to find itself isolated in a world that has accepted the new Soviet line.

Power is concentrated here and heavily armed. It can be exercised in any direction. What to do in response, how to meet it, and especially how to beat it to the punch, with slow responses of a democratic government, is one of the first problems facing the United States today.

Gen. Marshall Reveals Democrats Asked Him to Run for President in '48

But He Did Not Believe Military Man Should Be Chief Executive.

Following is an interview with Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff during World War II, Secretary of State under President Truman and author of the Marshall Plan for the economic revival of Europe, now in semi-retirement.

By ROGER D. GREENE
LEESBURG, Va., June 30 (AP).

THE Democrats wanted Gen. George Catlett Marshall to run for President in 1948. He wanted to command the Normandy invasion armies in World War II. Why didn't he?

Now, for the first time, the 75-year-old soldier statesman brings into the open matters that have long been subjects of speculation.

Interviewed at his rambling eighteenth century home here, Marshall spoke with gruff finality.

"I would never have accepted the Presidency. I saw too much of it from the inside."

With a twinkle, he turned to his wife. "Besides," he said, "Mrs. Marshall wouldn't let me."

Mrs. Marshall explained:

"The Democrats wanted him to run for President. They wrote me in China asking me to urge the general to accept. I told them I would never consent to intercede with him on the subject."

Mrs. Marshall did not say what year it was, but presumably the incident occurred during Marshall's ill-fated mission to China to halt the conflict between Communists and Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalists.

Political 'Rough Stuff.'

Elaborating, Marshall spoke fleetingly of political "rough stuff" and "some things I just wouldn't stand for."

He added:

"I felt I had certain qualities, as a soldier, that shouldn't go with the Presidency. I have never thought a military man should be President."

Biographers have long puzzled whether Marshall ever regretted the decision that kept him tied to a Pentagon desk in Washington while the appointment to command the Normandy invasion armies went to his subordinate, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Touching on this, President Eisenhower said at a White House news conference Aug. 4, 1954:

"I am quite certain that he did not want to sit in Washington and be Chief of Staff. I am sure he wanted a field command. But he wouldn't even allow his chief (President Roosevelt) to know what he wanted, because he said, 'I am here to serve, and not to satisfy personal ambition.'"

The British cabinet reportedly wanted Marshall as supreme Allied commander, and at one point arrangements are said to have been made to fly him to London to take command of the cross-channel invasion forces. Roosevelt scotched the plan.

"I feel I could not sleep at night with you out of the country," F.D.R. told Marshall.

Had No Choice.

I asked if those were the facts. The general nodded.

"Of course I wanted to get out of Washington," he said, with a touch of asperity. "I'm a soldier. I wanted a combat command. But I had no choice. President Roosevelt wanted me to stay in Washington."

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL chatting with PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, then president of Columbia University, as they waited to testify before Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee in July 1950.

A sparkling raconteur, Marshall reminisced about unpublished bits of history for nearly two hours as he showed the way, with Mrs. Marshall at his side, through the historic 20-room house and gardens on the four-acre estate.

The house, shaded by giant oaks and maple trees, was begun in 1768 by George Washington Ball, a nephew of George Washington.

Marshall paused in the dining room to relate how the floor was hurriedly completed so it would be ready for a dance in honor of the French Marquis de Lafayette.

Outside, Marshall pointed to a patch of garden and told how Gen. Walter Bedell (Beetle) Smith, then Gen. Eisenhower's Chief of Staff, found him there one rainy wartime evening hoeing "a billion weeds."

"I was all muddy and his business was urgent. I wasn't going to track all that mud into the house, so he had to stand there in the rain with me.

"It must have been a strange sight. Beetle was dressed in a magnificent uniform, and I looked like some old farmer. He had come to tell me about plans for the Normandy invasion."

In Semi-retirement.

Living here in semi-retirement on his $18,761-a-year salary as a five-star general, Marshall is a familiar figure to the local townsfolk in his stubby jeep-style station wagon.

When I noted that his Negro butler-chauffeur drives a more expensive car than Marshall does, the general growled good-naturedly:

"I should think he would, the salary he gets."

Marshall's mode of living is simple, almost Spartan, compared with the luxury he might enjoy if he had accepted fabulous offers to write his memoirs. He is one of the few great wartime leaders who has persistently refused to write his own story.

"There are too many people still alive who could be hurt," he says, explaining why he rejected offers ranging up to a million dollars for "The Marshall Story." Aides say he never will write it.

Marshall indicated, however, that biographers are now at work on his private papers which eventually will go to the George C. Marshall Research Foundation on the campus at Virginia Military Institute, in Lexington, Va. Marshall is a V.M.I. graduate, class of 1901.

Available to Historians.

The papers will be available to scholars and historians, but with the stipulation that any controversial material will not be made public without his consent or until after his death.

Today his life in quiet Leesburg, 40 miles from Washington, is a far cry from the tempestuous years when he guided the destinies of millions of American fighting men as World War II Chief of Staff. After the war, he served first as Secretary of State and then as secretary of Defense during the early days of the "cold war" with Russia.

Nowadays the architect of the multi-billion dollar Marshall plan for European recovery likes to putter around the garden, raising lettuce, onions, asparagus and tomatoes.

The general and his wife, who has written a book about their life entitled "Together," have been living here since 1942. Recently they put the house up for sale (for $75,000) with the thought of spending future summers in the cool woods-and-lakes country in the Allegheny mountains at Eagle's Mere, Pa. They spend winters, from November to May, in Pinehurst, N.C.

Recalled Three Times.

Although he finally retired in 1951, after being three times recalled to public service by former President Truman, Marshall is still listed as "on active duty." By law, five-star generals never retire officially, although they may resign.

Aside from a brief return to the spotlight in 1953, when he won the Nobel peace prize, Marshall has appeared little in the news during the last five years.

His health, according to an aide, is generally good.

A tall, bulldog-handsome man with startling blue eyes, Marshall spends much of his time reading a variegated diet of history, current events and gun-smoke westerns.

With a chuckle, Marshall remarked that it was hard to tell one western from another from the outside "because they all have the same cover—featuring an inordinately developed female who seldom appears elsewhere in the book."

The general, once described by Truman as "the greatest living American," was asked to name his biggest thrill in 50 years of service to his country.

The old soldier replied:

"When I was promoted to first lieutenant. I waited five years to get that."

President Eisenhower's Record Will Be a Major Campaign Issue

modations accepted by Truman appointees were peanuts compared to the millions of dollars involved in the Dixon-Yates recommendation, the Al Serena "mining" concession, the "tidelands" legislation, the Hell's Canyon license to private power interests, defense contracts to big corporations and the general "business" approach to government which, they say, has favored special over the national interests. More of this debate will be heard during the campaign, probably with emphasis on the Democratic claim that President Eisenhower talks on a high plane about serving all the people and appoints men to office who favor business groups.

The Democrats will also argue over who can claim credit for stabilizing prices. Republicans are making the most of the inflation that started with the Korean hostilities in 1950. By late 1952, however, prices had become stabilized and this stabilization continued until May this year when the consumer's price index equaled its highest point since October 1953 at 115.4 per cent of the 1947-49 base. Most of the stabilization during the Eisenhower Administration has been the result of lower food prices while rents and the cost of clothing, medical services and household items have risen. Depressed farm prices after removal of rigid price support of basic crops made the lower food prices possible. With food costs rising as a result of higher Government support benefits, economists are wondering whether consumer and other costs can be kept from a further rise.

The current session of Congress, now in its last weeks, has focused attention on many of the major questions that have arisen during the Eisenhower Administration. These include the continuing plight of the farmer, civil rights, school aid, appropriations, medical research, the federal highway program, Social Security extension, public housing, natural gas regulation, Hell's Canyon dam and the upper Colorado river projects, liberalization of immigration laws, national defense, foreign aid, membership in the Organization of Trade Cooperation and international relations throughout the world, particularly with Soviet Russia and the Communist satellites since the death of Stalin.

Farm Vote.

When President Eisenhower vetoed in April the Democratic-sponsored farm bill which reinstated rigid price supports, many political observers thought this would cut deeply into the Republican vote in November for the Presidency and the Congress. His signature on the revised bill with its soil bank payments has caused revision of this prophecy so far as the President is concerned. Most of the Republican members of the House and Senate from the farm belt voted for the rigid price supports and the predicted farm revolt has not materialized.

The multi-billion dollar highway bill, supported by both parties, became law after the Democrats killed the President's proposal for bond issues which would have been profitable to the big bankers. The new program has a modified pay-as-you-go arrangement with increased taxes on gasoline and tires. The expenditures of so many billions over the next few years will stabilize employment but the increased excise taxes may raise the living costs. Both parties can take credit and blame for this legislation.

The school aid program may further split the Democratic party if Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Negro Democrat from New York, insists on his amendment to withhold federal funds from states which do not integrate their schools. Democrats hope for a compromise on this issue and as a maneuver against the Republicans they will probably recall that President Eisenhower's original school program called for a bond underwriting that would have increased its cost. They will also point out that the President did not recommend a program for two years while awaiting a study by a commission.

Change in Kremlin.

With the change in the Kremlin from Stalin's one-man dictatorship to the more flexible collective dictatorship of Khrushchev, Bulganin et al, the Democrats have charged and will continue to charge that President Eisenhower, Secretary of State Dulles and Defense Secretary Wilson have not come up with adequate foreign and military policies to meet the changed conditions of today behind the Iron Curtain and in the neutral nations.

Led by Senators Symington of Missouri, Johnson of Texas and Russell of Georgia, the Democratic Congress increased the defense appropriation for the coming fiscal year by about a half billion dollars more than the President requested. Most of the addition will go for the production of more B-52 bombers and more research, if the Administration decides to spend the money.

On the other hand, these same Democratic leaders are trying to cut down the President's foreign aid appropriations for the coming years although the Truman Administration originated this program as a part of our own national defense and received bipartisan support for it.

As happens every four years, each party will try to take the credit for whatever it considers good and blame the other for what it considers bad. The platform writers of each can go back to the 1952 platforms of their rivals for current arguments. In 1952, the Republican foreign relations plank, as written by Dulles, then a consultant to the Democratic State Department, charged:

"Those in control of the party in power have, in reality, no foreign policy. They swing erratically from timid appeasement to reckless bluster."

This same thought undoubtedly will be expressed by the Democratic platform writers this year. In reply, the Republicans can, with profit, paraphrase some of the Democratic boasts of 1952 of the great improvements that party made during the 20 years it was in power. The Republicans have a four-year record to boast about—and defend—and as the party in control of the executive branch they, particularly the President, are in a position to demand credit for their achievements.

Peiping Woos Chinese Who Live Abroad

Financial, Political Bait Offered—Polygamy Bar Flouted.

By KEYES BEECH
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1956.

HONG KONG, June 30.

RED CHINA has let out all stops in its wooing of Asia's estimated 14,000,000 overseas Chinese.

In its drive to capture the allegiance, financial as well as political, of the overseas Chinese, Peiping is offering the follpwing bait:

Rich Chinese with three or four wives and concubines have "nothing to fear" if they return to China with their whole families. This is an invitation to flout the Red regime's bar on polygamy.

Kuomintang (Nationalist) Chinese who have done "bad things," even murder, will be forgiven if they will only "join the people of the motherland in a happy life."

Chinese who return to the mainland will be permitted to do so as they please with money remitted from overseas. Those who want to invest in joint state-private enterprises will be guaranteed an annual return of 8 per cent. The fact they receive money from overseas will be no cause for discrimination.

Tenants of buildings owned by overseas Chinese will be compelled to pay rent under penalty of prison terms of from six months to a year.

Those who return will be given a "priority supply" of oil, grain, clothing and other necessities that are strictly rationed to ordinary Chinese. They will also be given what they need for weddings, funerals and other celebrations.

Returning overseas Chinese are given customs exemption at the border. Once on the mainland they are often given VIP treatment.

By persuading overseas Chinese to invest their money in China or to send more money to their relatives, the Reds acquire sorely needed foreign exchange for purchase of vital goods abroad. Their own currency is not negotiable abroad.

Peiping is also in desperate ned of skilled technicians, engneers, doctors and others trained in traditionally western fields.

ENGINEERS...PHYSICISTS...

How do you check out here?

Here are brief descriptions of the important work performed in the five separate divisions of the Hughes Field Engineering Department. Each of the engineers engaged in these activities holds a degree in electrical engineering or physics. All divisions form a highly trained organization to support the armed services and others using Hughes fire control systems and guided missiles.

Check one or more divisions for which you qualify by education and experience . . .

☐ ENGINEERING WRITING—Engineers in this division work with research and development engineers during formation stages of new equipment to produce clear, concise technical manuals, for use in maintenance and training, as well as specialized handbooks for USAF aircrews.

☐ TECHNICAL TRAINING—A completely equipped and staffed school is operated to train qualified military and company personnel in classroom and laboratory programs on advanced systems work in the fields of radar fire control, electronic computers, guided missiles. Instructors are graduate engineers or physicists with backgrounds in development work or university instruction.

☐ FIELD ENGINEERS—Hughes technical advisors are required in the field wherever operational bases are located. They serve military agencies employing Hughes highly complex radar fire control systems for all-weather interceptor aircraft, at home and abroad.

☐ AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURER LIAISON—Engineers are assigned to all-weather interceptor manufacturers whose aircraft employ Hughes fire control systems, and are responsible for pre-installation testing of the systems. They work with airframe designers in cases where their operational knowledge bears on equipment installation problems.

☐ FIELD MODIFICATION—Hughes policy is not only to get reliable equipment into the field promptly and in sufficient amount, but to modify and develop this as soon as field information and test data become available. Engineers correlate information from the field and indicate changes to the Research and Development Divisions. Write . . .

Mr. Grady Sharp of our Technical Staff will conduct personal interviews in St. Louis on July 5 and 6. Telephone CHestnut 1-4385, day or night, for appointment—or write

An American Talent for The American Language

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

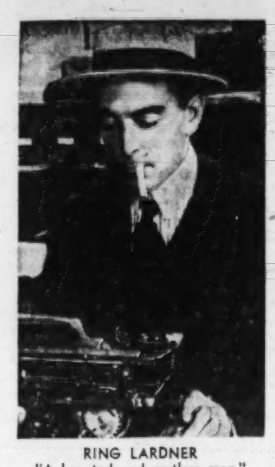

RING LARDNER started his career as a baseball reporter and reached his largest audience with his incomparable short stories about a witless pitcher named Jack Keefe. Later on he widened his range to include many other American types, but their personality traits interested him more than their occupations.

It was singularly imperceptive, then, for Scott Fitzgerald to suggest that Lardner had wasted a fruitful period of his life by concerning himself with a "child's game." Professional baseball is not a child's game any way you look at it and even if it were it would still be a profitable field of operations for the creative writer. Certainly it was for Lardner who used the exactions and rewards of the game as a means of bringing into high relief certain enduring features of human behavior.

Lardner was a satirist from first to last. As such he quite naturally selected the kind of material that called for derision, deflation and comic exposure. Even beyond the needs of satire, however, his writing was affected by a kind of bitterness that denoted a profound disillusionment with the human species. "Ring Lardner," an excellent biography and a thorough one by Donald Elder takes note of Lardner's pessimism but does not account for it; and what he tells us about the outward circumstances of Lardner's personal and professional life suggest the very reverse of an unfavorable or traumatic environment.

LARDNER was born into a prosperous family in Niles, Mich., and his home life was at all times comfortable, cheerful, relaxed, "permissive" and active. In gaining a footing as a newspaper writer and later as a writer of fiction Lardner met with only the usual number of obstacles. He married the girl of his choice, was a fond and respected parent and had a large circle of friends and acquaintances with whom he enjoyed an apparently symbiotic relationship.

RING LARDNER
"A haunted and restless man."

RING LARDNER, by Donald Elder. (Doubleday, 409 pgs. with index, $4.75.)

Yet the human qualities he chose to memorialize in his stories were self-delusion, vanity, meanness, insensitivity and empty-headed yahooism. Moreover in his later years he was obviously a haunted and restless man dosing himself with alcohol and dissipating his strength in two or three day vigils at a club or a hotel. What was eating him? Why was the taste of life so bitter? None of the information provided by Mr. Elder is really explanatory.

If what Ring Lardner brought into focus were the unlovely aspects of human life he nevertheless did it with complete mastery. The sharpness of his portraits, in any case, have made them unforgettable; and it is no exaggeration to say he belongs with first rank of American writers in the use of the vernacular. He was unfailingly precise in reproducing the peculiarities of American speech. A review of a story by John V. A. Weaver illustrates the accuracy of his ear.

AMERICANS, as he pointed out, never say "anythin' and everythin' " as Weaver had them doing. They say "somethin' and nothin' " but oddly enough they also say "everything and anything" omitting the G in one case and sounding it in another. And we never say "feller"; it's always "fella."

Lardner's fidelity to the rhythm and enunciation of the vernacular brought the glow of reality to his dialogue but his stories were realistic only in the sense that what he reported was indeed true. It was not the whole truth, to be sure, but that was not his affair; and it is never the affair of an artist whose gift is to select and intensify.

Books for Young People

THE PEDDLER'S CART, by Elizabeth Coatsworth. Illustrated by Zhenya Gay. (Macmillan, $2.75.)

THIS is the story of George Messenger's unforgettable summer when his father took him peddling in New York State, joggling along behind that ugly but well-matched team Pro, the amiable, and Con, the ornery. The movement of the story is as slow as the peddler's cart must be, but the reader's interest never lags. Each chapter is a vignette of the rural America in which they traveled. And each day brought something new and wonderful for George to tell to his mother and brothers during the long evenings at the farm.

THE SWORD IN THE TREE, by Clyde Robert Bulla. Illustrated by Paul Galdone. (Crowell, $2.50.)

THERE is genuine atmosphere in this story of Arthurian England. When a wicked knight disposed of Shan's father and took the castle for his own, Shan journeyed to Camelot to seek aid from the King.

The story is written simply enough for many eight-year-olds to read for themselves, but it is told convincingly and with dignity and may serve to encourage an earlier than usual interest in medieval times. The line drawings are in keeping with the story, and type and format are inviting to the youngest reader.

Negro Slave's Impressions Of Jefferson

MEMOIRS OF A MONTICELLO SLAVE. (University of Virginia, 86 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
HARNETT T. KANE

A SOCIAL document occupying a special niche of its own is this unpretentious, fascinatmg little book. Long ago, in the 1840s, one of the Negro bondsmen of Thomas Jefferson sat down to tell the things he remembered, to a man with the good sense and perception to record precisely, or almost precisely, what he heard. Reprinted today, the memoirs constitute a kind of historical ten-strike.

Isaac was a Negro workman who kept eyes and ears open during his earlier years and spoke honestly and with clarity of Jefferson, his friends, his personal habits. The work may be considered a kind of "primitive." Isaac's view of Jefferson and his surroundings has a unique aspect, a rare appeal. The slave made no attempt to comment on matters such as suggest themselves to us with the name of the great Virginian; he noted exactly what came before his view, and he described it all as he saw it.

Jefferson comes out well in this report, it may be pointed out. To Isaac the Virginian was a man of character, a man of honesty, of simplicity and integrity, although the slave uses words rather different from these. "He wa'nt rich himself — only his larnin," Isaac says in a telling passage. We find Jefferson "bowing to everybody he meet," singing as he rode and walked, avoiding heavy drinking, winding the clock every time he went into the kitchen.

Unlearned as he was, Isaac was an intelligent man, one with a human eye and an integrity of his own. The result is an engrossing series of sidelights on great men and great affairs, a rare bit of Americana. We meet Patrick Henry, Martha Jefferson Randolph, and many others in these closely packed impressions.

A Nice Girl From Missouri

SOUVENIR by Margaret Truman, with Margaret Cousins. (McGraw-Hill, Inc., 365 pgs., $3.95.)

CLARISSA START

BEARING in mind the fate that has befallen other critics of Margaret Truman's artistic efforts, one might hesitate to review the autobiography of the former President's daughter. Happily, even the most violent Trumanphobe could find nothing unkind to say about Margaret Truman's personal reminiscences. With no pretentions to literary greatness, it is far more genuine and entertaining than are most autobiographies, possibly because its author herself is like that. Written, according to the credit line, with some professional assistance, it nevertheless reflects the qualities associated in the public mind with Margaret Truman. One gets the impression of a young woman with personal ambition and family pride but also modesty, sound balance, and innate good taste.

She has sense of humor enough, too, to quote Tallulah Bankhead who once said of her, "She's a nice girl, darling, a terribly nice girl. When you've said that, what else can you say?"

Margaret Truman finds a great deal more to say about the private life of a public family. Like her father, an inveterate souvenir saver, she goes through her memory boxes and comes up with many recollections.

HER earliest memory: falling into the hot-air register in the hallway of her grandmother's home. ("It was the consensus of opinion that it was nobody's fault but my own.") Election year 1928 when she was 4 and an uncle prompted her to run around the house shouting, "Hoover was elected. Hooray." The Christmas when she was 8 and her father gave her, not the electric train she wanted, but a grand piano and she ungratefully burst into tears. Her equal lack of enthusiasm at age 10 when her father was elected to the Senate and the family moved to Washington.

She presents a disarmingly candid self-portrait of herself

MARGARET TRUMAN
"I was a scrawny, gawky kid."

at this time: "I was a scrawny, gawky kid, running to long arms and legs and knobby knees—my straight bob was just turning from tow to blonde. If I lost sleep I got dark blue circles under my eyes and Dad was calling me Skinny that year."

She recalls how it felt to be a split personality, the little Truman girl in Washington from January to June, and Mary Margaret in Independence from June to January. The latter was vastly preferable, and even after the Trumans moved into the White House, Independence was still "home." Nor did they let the formality of their new address overawe them. Margaret recalls one night when her mother flipped a watermelon seed at her father in the White House dining room and when the butler came in to remove the plates he was somewhat startled to enter a rain of watermelon seeds.

THE White House did change her way of life. She became a belle, a status, she admits, "accrued to me as a symbol of something." Underneath it all, she insists, "I do not think this unwarranted adulation or attention changed my basic nature. I remained mulish, pigheaded, curious, romantic, hero-worshiping, loyal, affectionate, procrastinating, slangy, amiable, wistful, high-tempered, frank, loquacious, and nonstudious. I would also have remained lackadaisical and lazy but I didn't have time." She had fun, dates, normal good times, and a disapointment in love.

But while she is modest about her achievements as a social belle, Margaret Truman breathes fire if anyone insinuates that she took "opportunistic advantage" of her father's position professionally and "launched myself on a career to make money while the iron was hot." A stage-struck child who always spent her allowance on her movies, she points out that she "would have pursued both music and the stage" no matter what her father's status in life, and that while she was able to obtain important engagements early in her musical career, she was also "exposed to the first-string critics and to demanding audiences."

SHE is equally forthright in her treatment of her father's political career, stanchly loyal concerning his speeches—"sometimes almost poetry and sometimes nearly slang but always honest and vigorous and his own idea," frankly thrilled with their triumphal return in 1948, frankly saddened as she wrote in her diary on Nov. 4, 1952, "We got clobbered."

Margaret Truman sees her father as a man who "cares about everything" and was "born kind," her mother as a woman with qualities "which may seem old-fashioned in a period which tends toward blowzy informality, but which have stood the test of time." Her parents are not plaster saints, she adds, but two people of contrasting personalities who have had a happy marriage. She concludes her story with the hope that her wedding to Clifton Daniel (at that time, in the future), may be "spared the hurly-burly of a news event," and that her marriage will be as sound.

All of her readers will wish her well.

BEST DETECTIVE STORIES OF THE YEAR 1956, edited by David C. Cooke. (Dutton, 252 pgs., $2.95.)

THIS eleventh annual collection edited by David G. Cooke, should be warmly received by readers of short detective and mystery stories. The stories, selected with discrimination, offer a choice of cleverly conceived plots, fine character studies and various types of detectives. However, they all have one trait in common, a high quality of writing. A dozen stories are presented by a group of experienced authors. The opening one, "The Conscience of the Cop," is by a great writer, William Fay. "Broker's Special," by Stanley Ellin, is brim-full of suspense, while Craig Rice contributes "Beyond the Shadow of a Dream," which features a lawyer-detective's investigation. The remaining stories are equally as exciting and entertaining.

THREE WITNESSES, by Rex Stout. (Viking Press, 185 pgs., $2.75.)

THIS latest threesome of Nero Wolfe's adventures contains all the suspense, humor and entertainment usually found in three full-length novels. Just as Wolfe is about to be called to testify in "The Next Witness," he walks out of the courtroom. While the police search for him he is getting the low-down on a telephone answering service. "When a Man Murders," concerns an Enoch Arden marriage with Wolfe's dashing assistant, Archie Goodwin, cast as a witness. In "Die Like a Dog," Archie is followed home by a dog whose leash has been used as the murder instrument. One of the stories is said to be Rex Stout's favorite of all the novelettes he has written. As they are all excellent, we will let Mr. Stout's choice remain his secret.

Next: West Germany and NATO

This week, Brig. Gen. Thomas R. Phillips, U.S.A. (Ret.), Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch, begins the second leg of a foreign assignment that already has taken him to Russia where he covered Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Nathan Twining's tour of Soviet air installations.

Gen. Phillips' next stop is Bonn, Germany. Then he plans to interview NATO Commander Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther and the man who will succeed him, Gen. Lauris Norstad. In the light of recent withdrawals of French troops and the complacency created by the Soviet propaganda "peace offensive," keeping the defense of Western Europe at top strength and efficiency is a much tougher problem . . . but one for which Gen. Gruenther and his successor must find a workable solution.

Later, Gen. Phillips plans to visit Algeria to investigate how American bases there are being affected by political disturbances between Algeria and France.

For a better understanding of important international issues, be sure to read Gen. Phillips' informing dispatches

Unusual plan to curb delinquency

ANGELO PATRI

In spite of compulsory school attendance laws and the efforts of teachers to make school interesting as well as educational, many youths are loose on the town. With time on their hands, they often turn to crime and violence.

In Monday's Post-Dispatch, columnist Angelo Patri offers a plan that might provide a solution to this serious problem. He suggests that officials keep track of every young person to see that he's either in school, at work or doing something constructiva.

For details of this suggested plan to curb juvenile delinquency, read psychologist Angelo Patri's column

Buz Sawyer off on new adventure

BUZ SAWYER

Taking a brief vacation from his duties as a Navy pilot, trouble-shooter and counterspy, Buz Sawyer and his wife, Christy, have been enjoying a leisurely cross-country motor trip.

Suddenly, in the Colorado mountains, their car is wrecked in an accident. A charming couple in the other car involved offers to take Buz and Christy where they're going and buy them a new car. Their suspicious actions coupled with radio reports and Buz' intelligence training all indicate that the smooth-talking pair are escaping, desperate bank robbers.

You'll want to continue this newest action- and suspense-filled episode of Buz Sawyer in the comic pages

Director of Industrial Relations

If you are a thoroughly experienced industrial relations executive, we invite your confidential inquiry.

This is the top Industrial Relations and Personnel position in our company. We are a highly decentralized multi-plant manufacturing company with annual sales exceeding $100,000,000. For many years we have been recognized as a leader in our industry and our growth is continuing through product development and diversification. We are located in one of this country's most desirable residential areas.

The executive we are seeking should now be directing all aspects of personnel and labor relations at the policy level in a multi-plant company. He should preferably be in age range of 38 to 50 years. Compensation will consist of a base salary of approximately $30,000 together with an incentive bonus and a liberal stock option plan.

Your reply will be handled in strict confidence and should include age, present position and home telephone number.

POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC UNCERTAINTIES PLAGUE STOCKS DURING HALF-YEAR

Market Largely an Eisenhower Affair as Widest Price Swings Mark Political Intentions and Health Changes.

By ED MORSE
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, June 30 (AP).

POLITICAL and economic uncertainties plagued the stock market during the first half of 1956 but it remained a bull market and recorded a new all-time high. And it was still an "Eisenhower market," according to Wall Streeters. At times, the thermometers of White House physicians were just about as good as the market averages, and vice versa.

It was also an election year market, subject to the normal doubts prevailing, regardless of the present occupancy of the executive mansion.

Period's Biggest Day.

Typical of the period was that the biggest turnover—3,900,000 shares—occurred on Feb. 29, the day President Eisenhower announced he was available to run again. Also typical was that when the president became ill on June 8 the stock market suffered its greatest decline since last Oct. 10—the latter being the third "blue Monday" break following his heart attack in September. The June 11 medical report that the President's condition was "excellent" drove the market upward again. A two-day rebound more than erased the sell-off due to the president's ileitis.

But it was by no means a medical market altogether. The year began after a slow, three-months readjustment from the shock of the heart attack news. But even before the year ended there was more of cutbacks in automobile production.

Market Backs Away.

After regaining its previous all-time high in December, the market backed away on uncertain economic news including Washington reports of a balaced budget and unwillingness to recommend tax cuts. The offering of Ford Motor stock to the public for the first time, the biggest offering of its kind in history, was a stock market milestone in January.

Reports of record corporate earnings and other bright business news combined with increasing optimism regarding Eisenhower's political intentions sent the market upward again. The advance was so generous that by the time the President made his announcement the market declined on that day's session because of profit-taking. But the decision started an upward drive that did not end until the Associated Press average of 60 stocks reached a new all-time high of $191.50 on April 6.

Raise Discount Rates.

A raise in the discount rate by the Federal Reserve Board and other bearish news items caused hesitation. But the signal for a real downturn came May 10 when General Motors announced it would close all its assembly plants for one day. Then came a Russian announcement that it would cut armed forces, taken by many as an indication the United States would follow suit. Technical market conditions also had a big part in the decline. A recovery movement was halted only momentarily by news of the President's illness.

During the past week the market has continued a period of sluggishness which deepened as the strike deadline in the steel industry grew nearer. The recent market movements have been narrow. During the past week, however, the AP average scored its third straight weekly advance, rising 80 cents to $182.80.

U.S. BONDS MIDYEAR PRICES BELOW START

NEW YORK, June 30 (AP)—Prices of both corporate and United States Government bonds drifted downward during the first half of 1956 as the Administration continued to clamp down on credit as a brake against possible inflation.

While trading volume in stocks on the New York Stock Exchange is lower than a year ago, trading in corporate bonds is up. Experts say that is another indication of investor caution.

The six months total of bond sales on the big board amounted to $534,603,900 par value, compared with $519,160,400 a year ago.

The United States Treasury's 30-year 3¼ per cent bond is down from 105 14-32 bid at the start of the year to 104 16-32 bid, a loss of 30-32. The 40-year 3s dropped from 100 10-32 to 99 26-32 bid, a loss of 16-32.

The intermediates did slightly better. The 2½s of 1963 gave up only 3-32 in retreating from 97-3-32 to 97 bid, while the Victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, were off 7-32 from 94 31-32 bid on Jan. 1, to 94 24-32 bid.

WHEAT PRICES SLIDE IN WEEK TRADE ON BOARD

CHICAGO, June 30 (AP) — Wheat prices slid downward on the board of trade this week as grainmen lost hope of any immediate change in Government export policy. Losses ran to several cents in wheat. Rye suffered a smaller decline. Soybeans and corn were under pressure but oats displayed independent resistance to selling, reflecting the force of the new soil bank program.

Wheat closed the week 5@5¾c lower, corn 5/8@1¼c lower, oats 7/8@1¾c higher, rye 1½@2½c lower, soybeans 4@19¼c lower and lard 67@87c a hundred pounds lower.

Some of the speculative support in wheat over recent weeks has come from traders who felt the Government would change its export policy.

The terrific liquidation in July soybeans picked up speed during the week. This contract dropped 19¼ cents. Compared with its seasonal high set April 2 it was down 62¾ cents—a plunge which must have caused some hurt to those on the long side.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS SALE RATE 25 PCT. ABOVE 1955

The total number of beef cattle, hogs, calves and sheep received for sale during the last six months at National Stockyards on the East Side was 25 per cent greater than that during a similar period last year, the Producers Livestock Marketing Association reported yesterday.

The 2,295,000 animals brought to market represents the largest volume for the first six months of any year since 1944.

The cattle supply has increased 11 per cent and hog receipts are up 37 per cent over the corresponding period in 1955. The local increase is a much higher percentage of gain than for the nation as a whole, the association said.

LIVESTOCK PRICES HIGHER

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., June 30—Smaller receipts, coupled with good buying orders, sent livestock prices in a sharp recovery during the week, according to the Producers Live Stock Marketing Association.

Butcher hogs advanced 75c to $1.25 to a closing top of $17.60 cwt. Most 180 to 240-lb. averages Friday cashed at $16.85@17.25. Sows at $11.75@14.75 late were up 50@75c for the week.

Choice steers bulked at $20@21.50; good and low choice $18.25@19.75. High choice and prime steers and mixed steers and heifers topped at $21.75. Veal calves sold downward from $20, most choice kinds at $17@19.

Spring lambs made a spectacular rise of $2 to $3 from the low level of the previous week. Good to prime offerings Friday brought $21@23.50, with about 30 head of choice and prime going to a small killer at $24, compared with a top of $21 at the close of the previous week. Slaughter ewes held unchanged.

WASHINGTON PARK MAN STABBED AT FIGHT SCENE

Harold Storer, 5189 Audubon avenue, Washington Park, was in serious condition at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, from a stab wound in the right side suffered early yesterday.

Storer, 50 years old, a shoe worker, lost consciousness at the hospital after telling police he had entered a building near Fifteenth street and Broadway, East St. Louis, where he found a man and a woman fighting. Officers were investigating the case.

Raymond Stanfield, 16 West Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, also was at the hospital for treatment of a stab wound suffered Friday night near First street and Missouri. Police were told that a drinking acquaintance accompanied him out of a nearby tavern, stabbed him, robbed him of $100 and fled.

Japan Would Export Miners.

TOKYO, June 30 (AP) — Japan's Foreign Office is sounding out the Belgian government on a possibility of sending Japanese coal miners to Belgium to relieve a labor shortage, the newspaper Asahi reported today. It said 500 would be sent to West Germany in the next three years under a recent agreement.

EUGENE M. FRANK ELECTED BISHOP BY METHODISTS

NEW ORLEANS, June 3[0] (AP)—The South Central jurisdiction of the Methodist Church today elected the Rev. Eugene M. Frank of Topeka, Kan., to its seven-man college of bishops.

His election came on the eighth ballot. He fills a vacancy caused by the retirement of Bishop Ivan Lee Holt of St Louis tomorrow.

The Rev. Mr. Frank will be consecrated a bishop tomorrow night. At present he is pastor of the First Methodist Church in Topeka.

On the eighth ballot, the Rev Mr. Frank received 255 votes. The votes of the other ministers and the total vote were not announced.

His election had been assured after the seventh ballot when the Rev. Aubrey G. Walton, Little Rock, Ark., and the Rev. Eugene Slater, Amarillo, Tex., next in the voting during the first seven ballots, withdrew.

The MID-AMERICA JUBILEE

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT

June 14, 1956

Mr. Fred F. Rowden, Advertising Manager
St. Louis Post-Dispatch
12th and Olive Streets
St. Louis, Missouri

Dear Mr. Rowden:

The purpose of this letter is to avoid any misunderstanding that any one newspaper, publication or media of any kind has been designated as the official publication or media of Mid-America Jubilee.

As a civic project we are dependent on the full support of all publications and other media to make this exposition a success.

We are happy to know that the Post-Dispatch will publish a special section, with the first page in color, devoted to the Mid-America Jubilee on Sunday, August 26th. We understand that this section will contain the complete and last-minute official program of the exposition and extra copies will be available to the general public, without cost, in the Post-Dispatch building on the exposition grounds through the month of September.

This letter, therefore, will serve as your official authorization to develop this special Mid-America Jubilee souvenir section and to solicit advertising in this publication.

Those of us associated with the Mid-America Jubilee are extremely grateful to the Post-Dispatch for the extraordinary support it has given the exposition. We are particularly grateful for the full-page advertisements you purchased in The New Yorker and Newsweek magazines, which gave us some fine national publicity. In addition to this, the Post-Dispatch has given us excellent and much needed support in its news columns, plus the fact that your newspaper is a major exhibitor in the exposition.

We wish your organization every success and again we thank you for the wholehearted support you have given the Mid-America Jubilee.

Sincerely

Alfred Stern, AMJA

AStern:b

SEPTEMBER 1956 will be a gala month, when hundreds of thousands of St. Louisans and visitors focus attention on the St. Louis riverfront and the MID-AMERICA JUBILEE.

This will be the first major exposition to be staged in St. Louis since the World's Fair of 1904.

As the events unfold they will reveal to the people a community's contribution to the future; a story of industrial and agricultural development; the progress of a great Mid-American city and the great expectations of the next fifty years.

Industry will have a story to tell; and business in general will find it good business to advertise to the many regular customers and out-of-town families who will be here to enjoy the festivities of this great event.

The audience will be expanded—receptive—in a holiday mood . . . in a buying mood.

This Mid-America Special Supplement, to be distributed with the Sunday Post-Dispatch and at the exposition will afford advertisers an opportunity to sell their product or organization.

Dramatize your enterprise—spotlight your role in Progressive St. Louis. Be represented in the Big Mid-America Jubilee Special Supplement of the ST. LOUIS INTERVIEWS for ENGINEERING WRITERS for positions with HUGHES in Southern California

Here is an ideal opportunity for the Engineer with E.E. or Physics degree, and an aptitude for writing, to combine Southern California living with invaluable experience and training in advanced electronics at Hughes, the west's leading center for advanced electronics.

Mr. Grady Sharp will be in St. Louis to conduct interviews. Arrange for an appointment by telephoning CH 1-4385 now, day or night.

As a Hughes Engineer-Writer you will gain rich experience and insight into the workings of many of the nation's most advanced electronics systems as you produce the important operational and maintenance handbooks and technical literature.

You will receive additional training in the Hughes Research & Development Laboratories at full pay, so that you become familiar with the advanced, modern Hughes equipment.

Hughes also offers you the opportunity to take advantage of Hughes-sponsored evening classes at nearby UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, and LOYOLA UNIVERSITY.

You'll also share the benefits of a company-paid insurance program, 7 holidays a year, paid vacations, and a retirement plan. And you'll enjoy the way Hughes combines the advantages of a large firm with the atmosphere of a small one.

Think how you and your family will enjoy living in Southern California. And of course we'll help with your moving expenses, and see that you get settled. Act now. Telephone the number given above and make an interview appointment.

ENGINEERS SCIENTISTS

YOU CAN CHOOSE FROM 58 ENGINEERING & SCIENTIFIC SPECIALTIES

at the

Aircraft Gas Turbine Division of General Electric

It's a fact—it takes as many as 58 professional specialties to design, develop, test and establish manufacturing processes for just one major jet engine project at this G-E Division.

. . . . and expansion is creating new openings all along the line.

So inquire—and you'll probably find an assignment in just the area you prefer.

At General Electric we figure that a man does his best work where his chief interest lies. And that's what we want—his engineering best. And when he produces, he can count on recognition, financially and professionally.

SALESMEN

EXECUTIVE SALESMEN

Here's a seldom available sales opportunity with a dynamic international firm with an outstanding record of growth during past 20 years. We will thoroughly train a limited number of top salesmen to represent us in St. Louis area.

The research institute serves over 30,000 of America's most successful business firms helping them reduce sales and operating costs, effect tax savings, increase sales and net profits. Men selected will have an exclusive territory and handle new sales and present accounts. Renewal rate is high. Compensation is open—salary or commission. Guaranteed salary ranges from $6000 to $15,000.

To qualify you should be 28-50 years old, must have a minimum of 5 years creative sales experience, have records to prove you have been one of the top producers in your company, and know how to sell to top executives.

For personal interview send resume giving all facts about yourself and your sales accomplishments.

MR. AND MRS. HOMEBUYER—You are entitled to a beautiful, efficient kitchen in your home. Be sure when you're looking for a new home that you give the kitchen an extra-close inspection.

Compare quality in the kitchen. Look for and insist on these kitchen advantages...

1. Lasting beauty—Will the kitchen stay beautiful for the life of your home? And is it easy to keep clean?

2. Color—The trend is to color! Will the color of the kitchen blend with any decorating scheme, or any of the new appliances?

3. Quality—Be sure to check for doors that won't sag; drawers that will open easily and quietly, won't bind and stick. Is the finish of long-lasting baked-on enamel?

4. Dishwashers and Disposers—Does the kitchen have a dishwasher that does all your dishes in one load? And does it have a food waste disposer that operates quietly and is service-free?

5. Built-ins—Does the kitchen have a new built-in oven and cooking top with solid built-together construction and safety from the wrapped-in-steel design?

Chances are you won't buy the first new home you see. So look for the home with the kitchen that gives you all the above advantages. You can get them all in a Youngstown Kitchen!

There is one sure way to recognize a Youngstown Kitchen:

Look for the Easy-V handles

Soccer Outlook Bleak Unless Angel Appears.

ST. LOUIS long has been a great soccer center. Long before the Cardinals won the city's first baseball championship, St. Louis soccer teams were among the best in the country. Teams like the St. Leos, Innisfails and Ben Millers competed against the best professional organizations in the country and won their share of titles. Strong clubs from Jersey and Pennsylvania cities were brought to St. Louis for exhibition and cup games.

Professional soccer virtually has passed out of the picture. It no longer exists here. But amateurs have carried on and at the moment St. Louis has two national championships, the United States Amateur and the United States Junior.

However, as Dent McSkimming pointed out in commenting on the recent death of John (King) Finnegan, the outlook is bleak for the sport. Oakland Stadium, soon to fall a casualty to an industrial development, was about the last place where the soccer teams could play to a paid gate. And cash customers are necessary to the soccer picture, to raise enough money to bring outstanding teams to the city for championship or exhibition games.

Forty years ago there were enclosed parks available for soccer or baseball in many parts of the city. There was Kulage Park in North St. Louis, Athletic Park at Garrison-North Market, a park in the Compton-Laclede area, Brock or Alpen Brau Park on South Broadway, Handlan's at Grand and Laclede and many others. Robison Field, the old Cardinal grounds, and later Sportsman's Park were made available for the soccer league, but with the rising costs of everything, the big parks long ago were priced out of the reach of the soccer league.

County Site Probably The Only Answer Now.

PERHAPS one of these days some philanthropist will give the city an enclosed park. It would be a fine memorial. It wouldn't have to be large or ornate. It should be large enough to accommodate a baseball diamond and a soccer field, with seating capacity of perhaps 5000 persons.

With suitable land so scarce and so costly, it might be necessary to pick a site in the county. That would be all right. St. Louis teams already have journeyed to county towns, like Ballwin, because there were lighting facilities there, whereas St. Louis playing fields were dark.

Certainly it should be of concern to civic-minded persons, that despite the steady growth in population and the demand for recreational facilities, there has been a steady decrease in available playing fields.

It is to be hoped that in future slum clearance programs, funds will be made available for half a dozen or more such neighborhood playing fields, to serve outdoor sports enthusiasts as Kiel Auditorium serves those interested in basketball, boxing, wrestling and other indoor productions.

We've lost a major league ball club, a hockey franchise, and we were without a basketball franchise for a time. Let's not lose our fine soccer teams. They're strictly amateurs and play for the fun of it. But they need a place to play.

Baseball Stands Out In Documentation Field.

TAYLOR SPINK'S Baseball Register, 1956 edition, reached the desk recently and as we glanced through it a thought materialized that baseball is the best documented of all the sports. Complete and complicated records are kept about everything the ball player does. And the documentation is so excellent you have to wonder why there are so many telephone calls, asking what Joe Doke hit in 1926, or if a guy named Emil Pilsenmeyer ever played with the Cardinals.

A few years back two ambitious baseball writers compiled what was published as the Official Encyclopedia of Baseball. Anybody who ever played a fraction of an inning in a major league game is in the book, with his record. For instance the book lists Walter (Smokey) Alston, manager of the Dodgers, as having been in one game with the Cardinals in 1936. It shows no position, so obviously all he did was bat—just once, it so happens.

A feature that pleased us in this year's Baseball Register, was a section devoted to "Former Stars of Game." Included are some old friends. There is Flint Rhem's record. Remember Old Shad? He won 20 games to help the Cardinals win their first pennant in 1926. Flint, the Register tells us, is now farming at Greer, S.C.

Another old friend among the former stars is Elam Vangilder, one of the pitchers on the Brownie team that almost won a pennant in 1922. That was the first major league team we ever traveled with, and in those days the writer was virtually a member of the team, too. Old Elam won 19 games that year. He, too, has turned to agriculture, or gone back to it. Elam is farming near Cape Girardeau, Mo., where he was born in 1896.

Boudreau Given 2 More Years As K.C. Pilot

KANSAS CITY, June 30 (AP)—President Arnold Johnson of the Kansas City Athletics gave Manager Lou Boudreau a vote of confidence by announcing today the club had extended the manager's contract for two years through the 1958 season.

The announcement was made at a press conference called by Johnson.

"I am most happy to announce the Kansas City Athletics have reached an agreement to extend Boudreau's contract as manager," Johnson said. "This action reflects our confidence in our manager.

"We are disappointed in the performance of the club this season but still believe we have made progress throughout the organization and that the Athletics will win more games this year than in the 1955 season."

The announcement was timely in view of the Athletics' last place standing in the American League. There had been a murmur among the baseball faithful that much of the Athletics' poor showing was due to the manager.

Lou Jones Sensation; Sowell Is Surprised

LOS ANGELES, June 30 (AP)—Jet-running Lou Jones, 24, of New Rochelle, N. Y., cracked his own world record in the 400-meter dash and metric half-miler Tom Courtney upset Arnie Sowell in record time as the 1956 Olympic tryouts came to a stirring end today before 37,127 track and field enthusiasts.

Jones reeled off the 400 in 45.2, two-tenths of a second better than his mighty run last year, and the performance brought to three the number of world standards smashed in the two-day program.

Out of this event emerged the winners and second and third place finishers who made the United States Olympic team which will compete against the world in Australia in November and December.

America's reigning king of the dash men, Texan Bobby Morrow of Abilene Christian, added another medal to his growing collection with a record time victory in the 200 meters. It made 20-year-old Bobby the lone double winner of the meet and it was his seventh straight major triumph in the past month.

On the sentimental and disappointing side, two veteran stars for the nation in the Olympic games were counted out—two-time gold medal winners Mal Whitfield in the 800 meters and Harrison (Old Bones) Dillard in the high hurdles.

America's finest lowered the world record twice last evening, young Charley Dumas with the first high jump ove r 7-foot high jump—7-½ inch, to be exact; and Glenn Davis in the 400-meter hurdles.

Morrow, O'Brien Star.

Two other world marks were equalled—Morrow in the 100 meters and Parry O'Brien in the shot put.

Jones swept in like the wind to beat Jim Lea in the brilliant 400, slightly less than three yards short of 440 yards with Lea clocked at 45.8, and Charlie Jenkins third in 46.1.

Powerful Courtney squashed Pitt's Sowell in the same convincing fashion.

Courtney ran to a new American record of 1:46.4 in handing the favored Sowell a whacking defeat. Sowell was timed in 1:46.9.

Lon Spurrier of the Air Force was third to complete the trio to make the Olympic team for the United States.

Phil Coleman, Chicago Track Club, won the 3000-meter steeplechase in 9:00.3, a new meet record. Charles Jones, Iowa City, was second, and third to make the team was veteran Horace Ashenfelter of the New York Athletic Club, the 1952 Olympic champion. Ashenfelter apparently ran just well enough to make the team.

Morrow equalled the American record for the 200 meter dash around one turn in winning the event in 20.6.

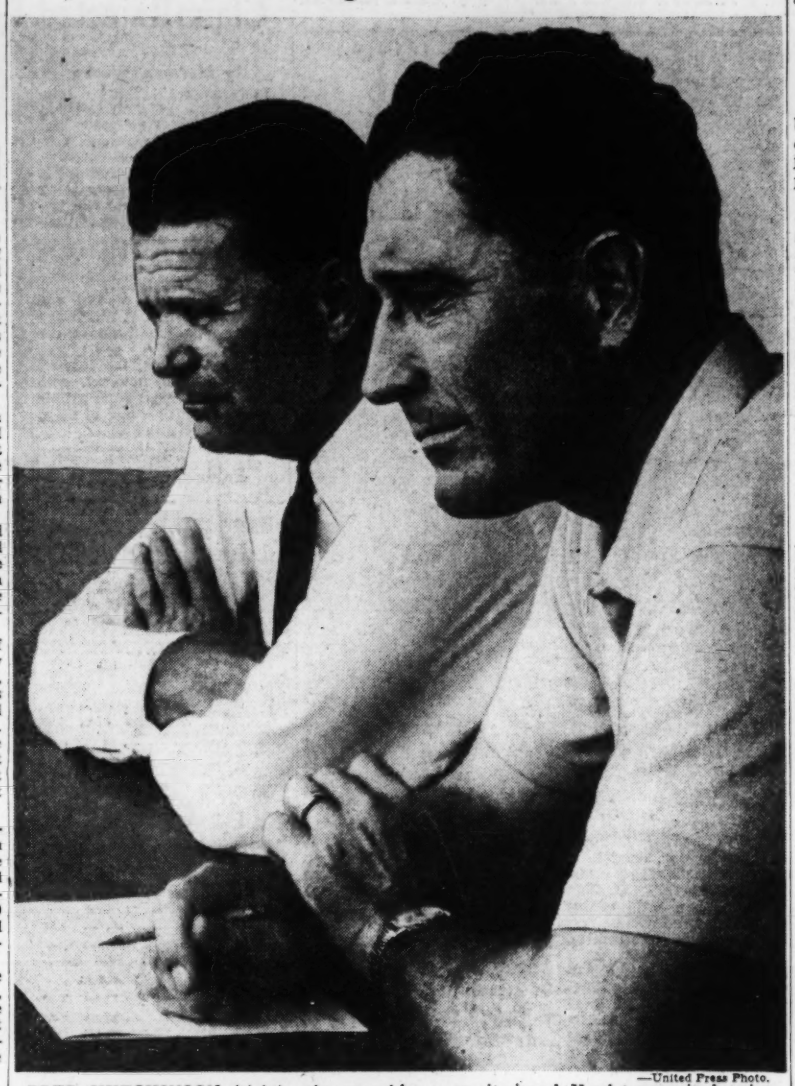

Thane Baker, Air Force, and Andy Stanfield, New York Pioneer Club, chased him in to round out the three-man 200-meter team.

Dave Sime, Duke, who re-injured himself last night, was scratched from the event and completely out of Olympic team contention.

Morrow thus made a grand sweep of every event he en-

Manager in Exile

—United Press Photo.

FRED HUTCHINSON (right), who resembles a granite-jawed Hamlet even in happier times, portrays Shakespeare's Melancholy Dane as he gives a brooding appearance while watching yesterday's Cardinal-Cincinnati game from the Busch Stadium pressbox. With him, and not happy about his manager's suspension, either, is General Manager FRANK LANE. Yes, Hutch actually is keeping score, and no doubt he and Lane smiled after a 5-2 Redbird victory. The manager's three-day suspension is for alleged "intentional body contact" with Umpire Babe Pinelli during an argument Friday night.

Hutchinson Fined $150, Suspended For Three Days

MANAGER FRED HUTCHINSON of the Cardinals yesterday began serving a three-day suspension slapped on him by National League President Warren Giles for "intentional bodily contact" with Umpire Babe Pinelli during a Friday night argument at Busch Stadium.

Hutchinson, also fined $150, originally drew a four-day levy, but Giles reduced the suspension when both the Redbird manager and General Manager Frank Lane appealed.

Hutch insisted the contact occurred when "Pinelli tried to walk through me."

The argument developed when Pinelli ruled a hit by Bobby Del Greco a ground rule double because a fan reached out of the bleachers and touched the ball. The Cards won, 4 to 1.

Coach Johnny Hopp will be in charge of the club through Monday's game at Chicago. Hutchinson was a pressbox spectator yesterday.

Heavy-Weighted Nashua Is Seventh in Carter, Red Hannigan Winner

NEW YORK, June 30 (UP)—Woodley Lane Farm's Red Hannigan, going to the front in the stretch, won the 56th running of the $58,500 Carter Handicap at Belmont Park today as Nashua struggled home seventh under high weight of 130 pounds.

With Jockey Paul Bailey in the saddle, Red Hannigan, carrying only 114 pounds, took the lead a sixteenth of a mile from the finish and pulled away to a length and one-half victory as Nashua finished out of the money for the third time in his 26-race career.

The field of 10 handicap stars had raced through half of the backstretch when Red Hannigan challenged Nashua. He made his bid for victory stand up in a thrilling finish to pay $29.80, $12.80 and $8.40 across the board. It was his first stakes victory since he scored in the Bay Shore Handicap last September.

Red Hannigan swept past Nashua to take over third place behind the front running Duc De Fer and Royal Game II, the Argentine-bred colt flown here from Rio De Janeiro by Owner Mauricio Krumholz of Brazil.

When Royal Game II ran out of speed shortly after entering the stretch, Nashua was second but a surge of horses charging up in desperate challenges for the winner's purse of $40,000, shuffled Nashua back.

Then, with only about 100 yards to go, Red Hannigan broke free from the charging wall of horseflesh to grab the rich purse with Nashua, failing for the second time under 130 pounds, struggling to stay up with the field.

The colt who cost $1,251,200 and has earned $1,102,865 failed in the attempt. Switch On went past him to be second, with Artismo third, Duc De Fer fourth, Impasse fifth and First Aid sixth. Then came Nashua, followed by Find, Royal Game II, and Park Dandy.

Time for the seven furlongs Carter was 1:23 1-5, one and one-fifth seconds off the track record.

Switch On returned $5.90 and $4.70 while Artismo paid $9.50.

Mickey Wright Takes Lead in Western Golf

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 30 (UP) — Hard-hitting Mickey Wright of San Diego, Calif., bolted into the lead at the 54-hole mark in the women's Western Open golf tournament today with a 2-under-par 74, for a 227 total.

Another Californian, Beverly Hanson of Apple Valley, came out of the pack with a 4-under-par 72 to take over the runner-up spot, one stroke back with a 228.

Still in the running at 229 was early leader Louise Suggs, Sea Island, Ga., who blew a three-stroke lead she held going into today's action. Miss Suggs fell victim of the well-trapped Wakonda Country Club course and finished with a 79.

Miss Wright, 21, former Stanford University student, whose ambition is to become "the best woman golfer in America," took over the lead on the front nine when Miss Suggs scored three over par.

Mrs. Marlene Bauer Hagge, Ashville, N.C., who has won three straight major titles, added a 77 to earlier rounds of 76 and 79 for a 232 and fourth place.

Defending champion Patty Berg, Chicago, only five-time winner of the Western, was tied at 235 with Amateur Ruth Jessen of Seattle, Wash.

REPULSKI BATS IN THREE TALLIES; KONSTANTY TO DICKSON'S RESCUE IN 9TH

By Jack Rice

Two members of the Cardinal pitching staff's rocking chair brigade, a select gathering of age and wisdom, combined to defeat the Cincinnati Redlegs, 5 to 2, yesterday afternoon at Busch Stadium. It was another of those things that keeps the National League race a close order drill.

The aging wonders active for the Cardinals were Murry Dickson and Jim Konstanty. Dickson started the game. Konstanty finished it, in the ninth inning.

The Cardinals made what they needed in the fifth inning, with four runs. Hal Jeffcoat started for the Redlegs, and some of the line drives hit against him would have driven him back to the outfield, where his career began, if one had hit him. A line single to left by Rip Repulski scored the final two Cardinal runs in the fifth, and the Reds excused Jeffcoat for the day.

Shockingly Pleasant.

Repulski is wearing tape, to bind his sore wrist against the shock of bat on ball. He shocked himself pleasantly enough with three runs batted in. He singled home Ken Boyer in the second inning; after the third baseman led off with a double.

The sight of a lead-off man on base was more familiar to Cincinnati than it was to the Cardinals. It was one of Dickson's charms that he could live so dangerously; and get hurt so little, for the first man at bat against him got on base in five innings.

The fifth time it happened was the ninth inning. Roy McMillan opened it with a single, and scored as Bob Thurman hit a pinch triple off the wall in right center. High above the 12,515 persons who paid to get in and second-guess the management of events, exiled Manager Fred Hutchinson sat in the press box. He maintained a character-building silence while manager-pro-tem John Hopp came out to talk to Dickson.

Hopp had done that before, and went away, leaving Dickson on the mound. This time he waved for Konstanty.

All the managers seemed just as happy it went that way this time. Konstanty got Johnny Temple on a pop fly to center, struck out Wally Post, and got Gus Bell to ground out. That is not a bad inning's work, so help the National League All-Star team.

No Runs in 13 Innings.

Konstanty hasn't been scored upon in 13 innings of Cardinal relief pitching, or a matter of seven games. The victory he protected yesterday was Dickson's fifth, and Konstanty couldn't have found a more deserving case on the staff.

Dickson had first-man trouble, but he also was a seven-hit pitcher through eight innings, and the Redlegs never did get more than one hit an inning, until the ninth. With pitches that gave Cincinnati's power no extra power at all, Dickson, had their bats all in a flutter. "Can't hit that stuff, don't deserve to win," muttered a man who had reached the press box by way of Cincinnati.

That stuff was pitched by the dirtiest hand in baseball. Dickson's hands, particularly the right one, look like those of a kid who has been loose in the blackberry jam, after even one inning's work. This is good pitching, not poor hygiene, he said when asked about it.

"I perspire so much," said the Knight of the Knuckler. "The sweat even runs down between my fingers, and onto them, and if it gets on the ball, there's no telling where it's going." Such sweat glands could have saved Preacher Roe a lot of trouble. But Dickson likes it dry, and he keeps two fingers heavy with resin and the others caked with dirt, to absorb the sweat and make his grip on the knuckler secure.

Triple for Dark.

The Cardinals got hold of the Redlegs in the fifth when Don Blasingame beat out an infield hit. He was off and running, as hit-and-run artist Alvin Dark lofted a triple into the corner of right field, for a run and a 2-0 lead. Musial walked, and Boyer singled through the hole into left field to score Dark. Repulski then did his bit again.

Cincinnati's run against Dickson was a charitable outpouring, in the sixth. Temple led off with a single, and was safe at second when Boyer dropped Post's grounder, for an error. Dickson retired the next two men, then lapsed and walked the subsequent two, forcing in a run. He was left to cure it himself against Ray Jablonski—and did. Jabbo flied to center, and dirty-fingered Murry was out of the jam.

The next time he got in it, there was Konstanty. It's a nice thing about those gaffers. The Reds mustn't look like big boys to them.

Cards to Face Lawrence in Twin Bill Today

The Cardinals will bat against Brooks Lawrence, a former teammate, in this afternoon's 1:30 doubleheader at Busch stadium. Lawrence, whose record is 10-0, and Don Gross, recently recalled from Havana, will pitch for Cincinnati against Don Liddle (1-3), late of the Giants, and Willard Schmidt (4) for the Cardinals.

Baseball is a game of many refinements. Wally Moon entered the trainer's room yesterday, to prepare for the adventure of a day game. He stretched out on the rubbing table. Trainer Bob Bauman reached into a fitted case, and took forth a small pair of scissors. "Ether," said Bauman. Moon closed his eyes. Bauman began to snip short Moon's eyelashes.

"I can see them when I squint against the sun," said Moon. "You should see our permanents," said Bauman.

Cincinnati baseball writer Tom Swope added up the strike-out efforts of the Reds, in their pursuit of the long ball. Before yesterday's game the team strikeout total was 336. That's for 64 games, an average of 5.25 per game; or, a rate of 808 for a season. The records are 806 strikeouts by the Cubs last year, and a grand championship strikeout total by the 1914 Browns of 863.

Stan Musial's one hit in two times at bat (he walked twice) was one for Wally Post to remember in the seventh. Post charged Musial's hard-hit ball to right and it took a low and vicious hop. The ball hit Post's shin and caromed handsomely and far, into center. It was away from Bell in center field, too, and Musial made a triple of it. One out later, Musial was out in a run-down as Moon hit to Temple, and Moon was doubled up, trying to make second base during the pursuit of Musial.

Another Height Conquered

CHARLIE DUMAS of Compton (Calif.) College cleared 7 feet ⅓ inch to become the first athlete in history to high jump over 7 feet. Actually he jumped 7 feet ⅝ inch, but the rules require that the mark drop to the nearest quarter-inch level. Dumas, who is 19 years old and a college freshman, achieved the feat in the Olympic tryouts at Los Angeles, Calif. He went over the bar on his second attempt.

Victory by Gerry Staley Puts White Sox Within Two of Yankees

Milwaukee Wins, Now One Ahead

NEW YORK, June 30 (AP)—Milwaukee opened up a one-game lead in the National League and Chicago sliced the New York Yankees' first place margin to two games in the American Saturday on another victory by Gerry Staley, a Yankee castoff.

Wes Covington's three-run homer and Gene Conley's steady pitching enabled Midwaukee to snap a three-game losing streak with a 4-3 verdict over the Chicago Cubs.

Brooklyn moved into a second-place tie with Cincinnati by knocking off Philadelphia, 10-7, with Junior Gilliam getting four hits and Gil Hodges smashing a three-run homer. Robin Roberts, starting his 300th major league game for the Phils, hit his first home run of the year but it wasn't enough.

Jim Konstanty choked off a ninth-inning Cincinnati spurt for a 5-2 Cardinal victory that left St. Louis three games behind Milwaukee in fourth place.

Giants Break Jinx.

The New York Giants finally won their first Saturday game of the season 6-4 at Pittsburgh, dropping the Pirates back to the .500 mark, 5½ games off the pace.

Staley went all the way for the White Sox in their 8-3 victory over Cleveland, his third straight against no defeats since Chicago bought him from the Yanks. Homers by Al Rosen and George Strickland accounted for the only Cleveland runs.

Washington scored four in the first and went on to trim the Yankees, 5-1, their first victory at Yankee Stadium this year. Chuck Stobbs pitched steady eight-hit ball while Jim Lemon and Clint Courtney hit home runs. Lemon's blow came off Johnny Kucks with two on in the first.

Many Milwaukee fans came down to Chicago for a sneak preview of the new pilot of the Braves, Fred Haney, who hasn't been home since he took over the job two weeks ago. They saw Conley best Sam Jones who failed to hold an early 2-0 lead. Conley allowed seven hits, including Ernie Banks' 18th homer.

That Labine!

The Dodgers had to fight off several threats by the Phils who had the bases loaded when reliefer Clem Labine finally retired Richie Ashburn. Hodges hit his 16th homer with two on in the third when the Dodgers scored five runs off Roberts. Gilliam's fourth hit and Pee Wee Reese's third single drove in the three runs in the eighth that assured Brooklyn of victory.

The Giants put the Pirates back on the losing track with Ruben Gomez and Hoyt Wilhelm doing the pitching. Pittsburgh got three in the first but the Giants came back with four on three hits off Ronnie Kline and two Pirate errors in the second.

The White Sox cut loose in the fourth inning to score six runs on six hits off Cleveland pitching. It was Chicago's 14th win in 17 starts. Larry Doby homered in the seventh inning.

Lemon's homer gave Washington's Chuck Stobbs all the runs he needed to beat Kucks. The lone Yank run came in the seventh on singles by Hank Bauer and Andy Carey and a sacrifice fly by pinch hitter Bob Cerv.

Tom Brewer won his tenth game of the season as the Boston Red Sox swept a twi-night double header from Baltimore, 4-2 and 6-3, to run the Orioles' losing streak to five games.

Parker Beaten In Semifinals in Topeka Tennis

TOPEKA, June 30 (AP)—Gene Land, Oklahoma City, lived up to his top-seeded rating today to win his way into the men's single finals of the Jayhawk Open tennis tournament.

Ed Sledge, Dallas, upset second-seeded Ed Doane, Kansas City, to gain the right to meet Land in tomorrow's championship match.

Land blasted Cik Maze, Topeka, 6-0, 6-0, in the quarterfinals and then marched past Ward Parker, St. Louis, in the semifinals, 6-2, 6-3.

Parker gained the semifinals through a default victory over another St. Louis entry, Earl Buchholz, when the latter became ill after winning the junior boys singles title.

Merceina Parker, St. Louis, and Nancy Armor, Dallas, advanced to the finals in women's singles and will play for the title tomorrow.

The St. Louis entry defeated Reddy Johnson, Lawton, Okla., in the quarterfinals, 6-2, 8-6, and moved into the finals when Barbara Wald, also of Lawton, defaulted.

Other results:
Men's singles—Quarterfinal round—Ed Sledge, Dallas, defeated Charles Hickox, Ft. Sill, Okla., 6-3, 3-6, 6-4. Ed Doane, Kansas City, defeated Ralph Hart, St. Louis, 6-3, 6-1.
Women's doubles—Semifinals round—Nora Prosser, Kansas City, and Merceina Parker, St. Louis defeated Barbara Wald and Reddy Johnson, Lawton, Okla., 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.
Junior Boys singles final—Karl Buchholz, St. Louis, defeated Ed Sledge, Dallas, 7-5, 6-3.
Boys' singles final—Chuck McKinley, St. Louis, defeated Billy Buckley, Oklahoma City, 6-4, 6-2.
Boys' doubles final—Jim Parker and Chuck McKinley, St. Louis, defeated Bob Boyson, Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Billy Higgins, Lawton, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

10-0 Record Makes Lawrence Feel Fine; Unhappy Here Only With Self

By Jack Rice

Brooks Lawrence said "I feel fine," a sociable stock answer that doesn't mean much. He used to say he felt fine when he had an ulcer, too. He doesn't have the ulcer any more, but even if he did, Lawrence would have to say he feels fine. A major league pitcher who has a record of 10-and-0 by late June can't decently say he feels any other way.

Lawrence has been doing this extensive winning for the Cincinnati Redlegs, the team that hits all the home runs and gets all the votes for the All-Star game. He was traded to Cincinnati on January 31 by the Cardinals and at the time had the distinction of being the first man General Manager Frank Lane traded from here. Now, it seems he should have been the last.

It is a matter of practically no importance to Lawrence. He returns with relish, not rancor, to Busch Stadium, because that is the way he feels going into any ball park these days. His success is blighted only by the story that one of his final deeds in St. Louis was to challenge Manager Harny Walker.

The Walker Story.

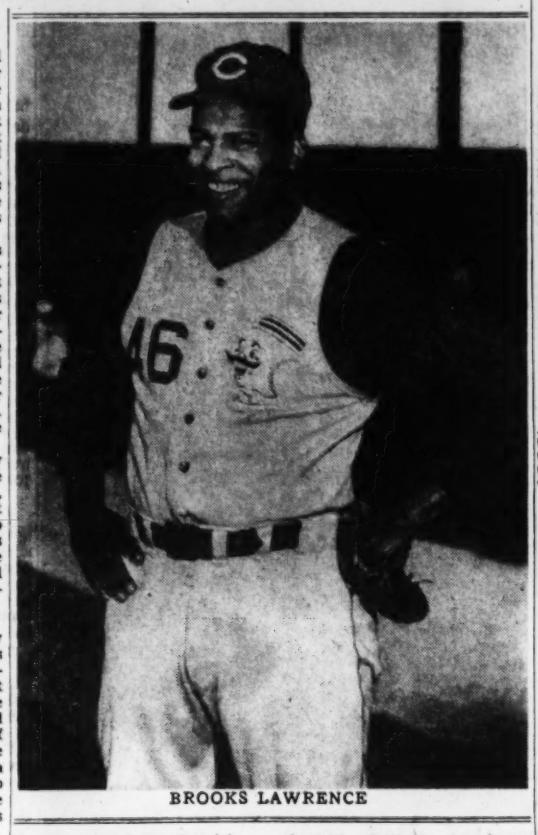

The story, as told recently under an Eastern dateline, is that Lawrence rose in a meeting Walker held and said it had come to his attention the manager had doubted out loud about Lawrence's courage. If Walker cared to repeat it, the story goes, Lawrence offered a guarantee Walker would not do any more such talking as the usual run of homicide victims are silent.

"How'd that get started?", said Lawrence. "Now, that would be kind of silly, wouldn't it, me threatening a manager. That is the best way to get a reputation as a trouble-maker, and I'd be cutting my own throat, not his. I did ask him why I hadn't been pitching more. I hadn't pitched in two weeks, and I knew he was new, and needed time to orient himself, but it seemed that was time enough to give me a chance.

"I got along pretty good with everybody over here," Lawrence said. "I never have said I wasn't satisfied here. I wasn't happy — I wasn't happy with me, and the only one person here I didn't like what he was doing, was me. It's like the questions I'm asked about (Eddie) Stanky. I liked him and he liked me, and I'd think everyone knew it. I don't care what anyone says, he didn't overwork me. He's a man of high ideals.

Good in 1954.

Lawrence had a 15-and-6 record with the Cardinals, after a mid-season arrival on the club in 1954. Stanky's favorite gesture was waving-in Lawrence from the bullpen. Last season, it became apparent early that Lawrence was done, as Djinny with the light brown magic. He had been operated upon, for the ulcer, and the surgery was effective but the pitching wasn't. His record with the Cardinals was 3-and-8. He spent part of the season at Oakland, and his Pacific

BROOKS LAWRENCE

League record was 5-and-1.

Maybe there should be a reason why Lawrence couldn't translate even a little of his Coast League effectiveness into National League effectiveness. If there is, Lawrence hasn't thought of it yet. The Cardinals led the league in club batting at .281 in 1954, and were 20 points below that in 1955. It could be an important point for a hang-on type of pitcher like Lawrence, but it's not a suggestion for him to make.

"I think I lost my confidence," he said, putting added blame on himself. This seldom leads to objections from others. "That the prime reason. Lose faith in yourself, and you're shot. When did I get confidence? The day I picked up a baseball in spring training this year, and threw it the first time. I think I'd be pitching for anyone this way. Anyone in the world. No—I don't know if that's certain. Number One out there is one of the greatest around."

Number One is Reds' Manager Birdie Tebbetts, a man known well for a squeekly voice and applied psychology, and balanced rhetoric on any subject. "I think confidence is a great factor in the life of a man like Brooks Lawrence," said Tebbetts, "and I don't think anyone over here has done anything special to encourage it, that wasn't done elsewhere. Any credit for it goes only to Brooks Lawrence."

Hard Winter Job.

It may have been as simple as restoring muscle tone. "I found the hardest job I could this winter," Lawrence said. The job he found was with a street department gang, and he worked with an air hammer. This is the pogo stick for men of steel. Ordinary iron men won't survive its pneumatic bouncing between concrete and their innards.

This afternoon's doubleheader is supposed to include a game started by Brooks Lawrence. If he wins, Lane will be expected to try to force a blush through his sun tan. He is aware of this, but not in sympathy with it.

Lane's Reasons.

"I'm not concerned with what a player does after he goes away," he said, "but with what the player does that we get. I thought (Jack) Collum would be a good lefthand relief pitcher and spot pitcher for us. He had a 9-8 record last year, and Lawrence was 3-8.

"The story I got was that he was throwing soft stuff. This year he's discarded that idea and is powdering the ball. I had to go on what his record was in '55, and Collum's was in '55. Now, whether Lawrence would win these games for us this year, I question. Don't forget, he's pitched four complete games, and won four in the shower bath, and I doubt we'd win those games for him because we're not that kind of a batting club. When'd we get nine runs in the eighth inning?" Lane was referring to an explosive success the Reds presented Lawrence at Pittsburgh, after the pitcher left the game in arrears, 2-1.

"Little Collum has won three and lost one, and he's saved five, and nobody says a word about that," Lane said about it, "and I don't want to take anything away from Lawrence, either." So far, nobody has.

Short Waves

CHUCK DIERING, 33, St. Louisan and former Cardinal, was sold by Baltimore to Montreal. He was the last of the Oriole players PAUL RICHARDS inherited when he became Baltimore manager late in 1954 . . . Khoury League managers and coaches will play their annual baseball game July 4 at Forest Park No. 1 at 1 o'clock. A picnic will follow.

HARRY LOU, a consistent performer at Fairmount Park in past seasons, has been nominated for the $3000 handicap which will feature the Independence Day afternoon program at the Collinsville track. Other nominees include CALLOWAY K, GAME PRINCE and MISTER PLUCKY.

The third running of the $12,000 added St. Louis Derby over the mile and one-sixteenth route will be run Sept. 22 at Cahokia Downs, a week before the 60-day and night meeting closes. Racing at the East St. Louis Jockey Club's course will begin the night of July 21.

Three major swimming meets locally this summer will be the Ozark A.A.U. championships July 13-14 at Webster Groves, the Chain of Rocks meet July 20 and the national junior 400-yard free style relay for women at Shaw Park, Aug. 1-3. WALLY LUNDT, Shaw Park coach and Ozark swim chairman, said the Webster Groves meet would qualify women contestants for the Olympic trials at Detroit, Aug. 7-10.

Champions RALPH HART, MERCEINA PARKER and WARD PARKER will be in the lists for the Muny tennis association's annual tournament beginning next Saturday at Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park. Entries may be made by phone or mail by 8 p.m. Thursday at the Muny office, 2319 Hampton, or with Sardis Glascock, EV 3-2117 . . . The sixth annual Webster Groves tennis tourney will begin July 14 in five divisions.

One Millionth Visitor.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y., June 30 (UP)—John F. Morrissy of Bronxville, N.Y., was presented with a lifetime pass to the Hall of Fame and season passes to all National and American League parks yesterday when he became the 1,000,000th visitor to the baseball shrine. A long-time fan, Morrissy said the unexpected ceremonies gave him "the most thrilling moment of my life."

Lady Joker Is Winner; Foul Claim Rejected

By Herman Wecke

Lady Joker, ridden by John Hanley, won the sixth and feature race at Fairmount last night, beating out Broad Moat by a head. John Delahoussaye, Broad Moat's rider, claimed a foul because he said Lady Joker bounced into him near the finish, but the claim was disallowed.

Lady Joker paid $25.80, $13, and $7.

Desefolks was third.

A daily double of $49 was paid out on Mrs. A. M. in the first race and Poltroon in the second.

Clarence Meaux, the leading jockey in this meeting, was forced to withdraw from all his races last night because of boils.

Attendance was 8416.

Perez Retains Flyweight Title

MONTEVIDEO, June 30 (AP)—Pascual Perez of Argentina retained his world flyweight boxing title tonight by stopping Cuban Challenger Oscar Suarez on a technical knockout in the eleventh round.

Perez weighed 108 and Suarez 111.

A capacity crowd of 8500 filled Penarol stadium for the first world championship ever held in Montevideo and constantly cheered as the two flyweights waged a furious, bloody battle.

Ask Me Another

By Harold Tuthill

"When did Harvey Haddix, as a Cardinal, pitch and win a game from Brooklyn at Ebbets Field?" Roy De Moor, 10943 St. Boniface Lane.

Haddix, who had a 5-5 pitching record against Brooklyn as a Cardinal, failed to beat the Dodgers on their home diamond.

"Allan Sothoron, former pitcher for the Browns and Cardinals, was hired as coach of the Browns after quitting as manager of Louisville in the American Association. What was the date of his signing with the Browns?" A. B.

Sothoron resigned as Louisville manager, Oct. 12, 1931, and the next day was named coach of the Browns.

Seven Americans Win, One Loses in Wimbledon Tennis

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Street Fights Not Profitable.

BOXERS like to get paid for their work. That's the reason so few of them engage in fighting on the highways and byways. It's unprofitable and dangerous, if you take the word of Jack Dempsey.

Dempsey tells a story on himself. He was in a bar in Tampa, Fla., recently when a stranger walked up and asked if he really were Jack Dempsey. Jack said that he was whereupon the stranger walked back to another man and soon they were in a fight over whether Jack had told the truth.

"And do you know what I did? I got out of there as fast as I could. You can get hurt in that sort of thing," Jack said.

Yet, once in a while boxers do boil over and get into a brawl. Art Aragon and another welterweight engaged in a scrap on the street in Los Angeles recently because Aragon was quoted as saying that he would knock out the other fellow, Dick Goldstein, when they met in a bout which was then in the making.

And a few months ago Jimmy Carruthers of Australia, former bantamweight champion of the world, who now operates a restaurant and bar in Sydney, put on a non-profit battle with Ray Coleman, former Australian featherweight.

They met once in the ring and Carruthers won the decision. Coleman brooded over what he thought was an injustice and frequently went into the Carruthers bar and created a disturbance.

Finally, Jim invited him outside and they went to it.

"I am sure Ray realizes what happened to him that night will be repeated if he wants another return," Carruthers said.

The most famous of these street brawls, however, concerns Mickey Walker and the late Harry Greb. The story has been told for years as the truth. But now comes a close friend of Walker's and tells Ring Magazine that the bout could never have happened.

As related for years it followed a gruelling 15-round fight between Walker and Greb in Yankee Stadium, which Greb won.

They met later in the evening in a restaurant and Walker angrily told Greb that he hadn't won the fight but had been given an unfair decision (they were doing that long before television).

Greb invited Walker outside. They started swinging at each other until a cop came along, recognized them, put them in separate taxicabs and sent them on their way.

When he reached his hotel room, Walker picked up the telephone, called Greb and was reported to have said:

"You never saw the day you could lick me, you bum."

And now this friend of Walker's says it's all boloney.

"Mickey didn't go anywhere after that fight, except to a hotel," he said, "I was with him every second. Mickey's face was badly bruised and swollen, and I was up all night applying ice packs."

And so another good story goes down the drain when exposed to the cruel light of truth. It has entertained many gatherings of boxing fans for many years, though.

Jeanette and McVey.

IN THESE days when three knock downs in any one round automatically terminate a bout, it would be well for officials to reflect on the heavyweight fight between Joe Jeanette and Sam McVey, two Negro scrappers, famous in the early part of the century.

It happened in 1909 and McVey told the story that he knocked Jeanette down 36 times but lost on a technical knockout in the forty-ninth round.

"That Jeanette wasn't human," declared McVey. "Seemed like he was dead every time I knocked him down, and maybe he was dead. But his ghost or something kept jumping up and after that kind of business, I was wore out trying to knock out a spook.

"Well, we come to the 49th round. I'm tired, whew! Then this here Jeanette comes sort of rolling in at me and says, 'Come on now—let's do some fightin'.'

"After I ain't been doing anything but knock him down 36 times. When he says that to me, I feels my knees knocking together and my arms won't lift up. So I back away and say 'Boy, all the fightin' that's gonna be done am done.' And I walk over to my corner and fall into a heap in my chair. When the next bell rings, I wouldn't get up, and was counted out."

Death of Johnny Behr.

JOHNNY BEHR, member of the Chicago Athletic Commission, died the other day while watching a handball game in the Illinois Athletic Club.

He was the second member of the Commission to die within a few weeks. The other was Livingston Osborne, former chairman.

Behr was active in boxing in Chicago for many years and helped to train the Chicago teams in the National A.A.U. tournaments here in 1934 and 1935.

He was also a referee and was the third man in the ring the night Rocky Graziano knocked out Tony Zale for the middleweight title in Chicago, July 16, 1947.

The end came in the sixth round of that fight with Zale draped over the ropes. He was exhausted from the heat and the punishment he had taken from the rampaging Graziano who had found new life after being almost knocked out in the first round.

Behr was criticised by some for stopping the bout when he did because Zale's weakened condition was not apparent to all.

Johnny hated to take Zale's championship away from him but he knew there was nothing else to do and merely shrugged off the criticism.

Here's one vote for calling Willie Butler by that name and not "Yama Bahama."

Seixas and Brough in Star Roles

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30 (UP)—Vic Seixas and Ham Richardson advanced to the singles quarterfinals of the Wimbledon tennis tournament with a minimum of resistance today and America's four seeded women stars won half the quarterfinal berths in their division.

Seixas, who is playing in this year's tournament much like when he won the title in 1953, defeated young Gordon Forbes of South Africa, 6-2, 6-1, 8-6. Richardson, former United States intercollegiate champion who is now a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, moved up when big Abe Segal of South Africa had to withdraw after the first set because of a wrenched back. Richardson had won the opening set, 7-5.

The standing-room-only crowd of nearly 25,000 which jammed the famed all-England club grounds on a sunny but slightly gusty day also watched the "big four" of women's tennis in the United States sweep through their fourth round matches without the loss of a set.

Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., the top-seeded player who is seeking her fifth Wimbledon singles championship, drubbed Fay Muller of Australia, 6-3, 6-1; second-seeded Beverly Baker Fleitz of Los Angeles defeated Zusi Kormoczi of Hungary, 6-0, 8-6; Althea Gibson of New York eliminated Pat Hird of England, 6-0, 6-4; and Shirley Fry of St. Petersburg, Fla., defeated Jennifer Hoad of Australia, 6-2, 6-2. Miss Gibson and Miss Fry are seeded fourth and fifth, respectively.

The lone American fourth round singles casualty was Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., who bowed to second-seeded Ken Rosewall of Australia, 7-5, 7-5, 6-3, in a superbly played match that drew continuous applause from the center court gallery.

Aussies in Strength.

By winning, Seixas and Richardson joined Allen Morris of Atlanta, Ga., in Monday's quarter-final round. Australia supplied half of the last eight survivors, the United States three and Sweden one.

Seixas next plays Morris, the unseeded upstart who won on Friday; Richardson is pitted against Neale Fraser of Australia; Rosewall plays Ulf Schmidt of Sweden, and top-seeded Lew Hoad, who also won on Friday, meets his countryman, Mal Anderson, in the quarter-finals.

The chances for a ninth consecutive all-American women's singles semi-final at Wimbledon have been eliminated because of the nature of the draw. Miss Gibson plays Miss Fry in one quarter-final pairing, while third-seeded Angela Mortimer faces Pat Ward in an all-English match for another berth in the round-of-four. Miss Brough is paired against Shirley Bloomer of England, and Mrs. Fleitz meets England's Angela Buxton. Miss Ward is the only unseeded player among the eight survivors.

In today's other men's fourth round matches, Fraser defeated Bob Howe of Australia, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5; Schmidt eliminated Luis Ayala of Chile, 7-5, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2; and Anderson beat Nicola Pietrangeli of Italy, 9-7, 3-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Seixas in Great Form.

The 32-year-old Seixas, who is seeded eighth in the men's division, continued the brilliant tennis he has played throughout the tournament. The veteran Philadelphian's service and ground strokes were strong and accurate as he won the first two sets with the loss of only three games.

Seixas also pulled away to a 5-1 lead in the third set before the 22-year-old Forbes finally puller his game together. Forbes battled back to tie the set three times, but Seixas went ahead again when he served four balls the South African could not return in the thirteenth game. Forbes staved off match point twice in the next game before double-faulting to lose the match. This was Seixas' third straight-sets victory in the four singles matches he has played.

Richardson, the Tulane University graduate who now makes his home in Westfield, N.J., won by default after powerfully built Segal twisted a back muscle in attempting to return a shot during the tenth game of their opening set. The score was tied at 5-5 at the time and Segal, in obvious pain, signalled that he no longer could continue after losing the next two games and the set.

"I'm sorry to win this way," said the 22-year-old Richardson, "but Abe looked as though he was going to be sick."

Rosewall and Larsen enthralled the crowd with a magnificent display of classic ground strokes that represented a throwback to the days before the serve-and-slam style of tennis. The Australian clinched in the third set when he won all five of his services at love. Games followed service until the eighth when Larsen double-faulted twice to set up his defeat.

JANET HOPPS of Seattle, Wash., (left) won the national collegiate women's singles tennis championship for the third straight year yesterday at Washington University, defeating JEANNE ARTH of St. Paul, Minn., 10-8, 10-8. Miss Arth could smile too, however, because she and Miss Hopps were partners in retaining their doubles title.

Flower Bowl Wins Rich Race

STANTON, Del., June 30 (AP)—Flower Bowl, a fast closing 4-year-old from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable, came from far back today to win the turf's richest race for fillies and mares—the 19th running of the $156,500 Delaware Handicap—at Delaware Park.

Under the stinging whip of Logan Batcheller, the daughter of the Australian sire, Alibhai, took to the middle of the stretch in the final quarter mile of the mile and one quarter race and sped under the finish line two lengths in front of Christopher T. Chenery's Manotick.

Walter M. Jefford's Open Sesame was third in the field of the turf's finest members of the distaff side as Miz Clementine, favorite from the Calumet farm, wound up fourth.

Flower Bowl, who had only five victories to show for 22 previous starts and none of them a stake triumph paid $33.80, $14.80 and $10.20 in picking up the winner's purse of $109,750. Manotick, also lightly regarded by the crowd of 24,080, returned $9.40 and $7.00 and Open Sesame, another outsider paid $10.40 to show.

Janet Hopps Wins Tourney Third Time

Janet Hopps, 21-year-old recent Seattle University graduate, won her third straight National College girls' tennis championship yesterday, but only after a brilliant two-hour struggle with Jeanne Arth. The scores of the final on the Washington University court were 10-8, 10-8.

In the doubles final, Miss Hopps and Miss Arth successfully defended their title with an easy victory over Bev Tolan, St. Louis, and Pat Shaffer, St. Petersburg, Fla., 6-2, 6-0. The champions lost the first two games, then won 12 straight from the two Florida U. students.

Miss Hopps, who is in the midst of a summer tennis campaign that she hopes will bring her a higher national ranking than her No. 11 spot of the current year, which in turn could lead to Wimbledon and the Wightman Cup team, trailed Miss Arth in both sets. In fact, the Seattle girl had to overcome deficits of 5-4 and 8-7 in the first set to win three straight games from Miss Arth, a 20-year-old graduate of St. Catherine's College in St. Paul.

The St. Paul player, who beat Miss Hopps in the 1953 national junior girls event and lost to the champion in the 1953 college event final, 6-4, 6-1, played excellent tennis. Miss Arth outscored her opponent in placements but was erratic at times, too. She had five double faults in the first set and one in the second. Miss Hopps, a player on the Seattle U. men's team during her undergraduate days, was unable to play her usual game at the net. Only at the finish did Miss Hopps take the offensive to end the match.

Stroke analysis of the match:

Miss Hopps will not defend her Missouri Valley title in the event starting next weekend at Omaha, but will compete in the Tri-State at Cincinnati instead. After that will be the Western, the National Clay Courts and other meets

In the consolation singles final Bonnie MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, a sister of Barry MacKay, who played this week at Wimbledon, downed St. Louis's Carol Clarkson, 6-4, 7-5.

Olmedo, Peruvian, Wins NCAA Singles

KALAMAZOO, Mich., June (UP)—Second-seeded Alex Olmedo of the University of Southern California recovered from a first-set loss to sweep the next three sets and the NCAA singles championship today at Kalamazoo College.

Olmedo, a Peruvian, deserted his favored press-and-volley game in the second set for brilliant base line play to defeat Stanford's Jack Frost, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

Olmedo returned to action later in the afternoon as USC's top-seeded doubles team of Olmedo and Poncho Contreras captured the second tournament crown by edging second-seeded UCLA, 2-6, 1-6, 6-3, 11-9, 6-4.

Despite the double USC victories, UCLA piled up enough early tourney wins to top team scoring with 15 points. USC took close second with 14, followed by Stanford, 7, Houston, 4 and Kalamazoo, 2.

Public High Sets Up Grid, Basket Cards Without Night Games

By Harold Tuthill

A sweeping revision of the Public High League football and basketball schedules for the forthcoming seasons, with nothing but day games, was announced yesterday by League Manager Walter Williams.

In line with the league's new policy to eliminate all night competition—recently enacted during the track season when the annual field day was held in the afternoon—football games will be played on Wednesday, Thusrday, Friday and Saturday afternoons at the Public Schools Stadium.

Basketball doubleheaders will be played on Saturday afternoons at two places—Hadley Tech and St. Louis U. High. The second annual Christmas tournament will be run off as strictly a daytime affair with the consolation round eliminated.

Although all night activity has been dropped, the football schedule will follow pretty generally that which prevailed before. Ten schools will compete, except Washington Tech has been transferred to Hadley Tech and Hadley Tech, which will move to O'Fallon on Kingshighway near Manchester, will not play football.

First Round Games.

The first round of play will be Southwest vs. Central, Wednesday, Oct. 10, 1:30 p.m., McKinley vs. Cleveland, Thursday, Oct. 11, 1:30; Beaumont vs. Vashon, Friday, Oct. 12; 1:30; Soldan vs. Sumner, Saturday, Oct. 13, and Hadley vs. Roosevelt, Saturday, 3 p.m. The annual Accident Benefit game will be played Thanksgiving day with the champion of the Catholic Athletic Conference.

Central is the defending football champion.

Some of the coaches felt each member might have to play nine league games—and some of those on Saturday morning—but the 1956 schedule permits three non-league games for every school.

Ten schools also will play basketball. This is one fewer than last winter, the loss coming because O'Fallon will not have a gym for several years. The season will open Dec. 8 and continue through March 2, the only break in the all-Saturday program being a Friday afternoon game Feb. 15 between Beaumont and Hadley. B basketball will continue to be played on Friday afternoons.

Sumner is the defending champion in the winter sport.

Tennis In Fall.

According to the calendar released by Williams, the tennis tournament will start on the third Tuesday of the fall semester—the same as usual and swimming and baseball will follow the same pattern as before. The dates set for the annual interscholastic field days are preliminaries May 21 and finals May 24.

The financing of the high school program will be determined by the Board of Education at its July meeting, but Williams indicated the football and basketball prices would be the same as last year—$2 for a season football ticket and $1.50 for a season basketball ticket.

The need of another football field was seen in William's report, which stated "this (football) schedule is proposed as only a temporary arrangement. It is hoped that a second field, probably at Roosevelt, will be available for the 1957 season. When the second field is available, it will require only one game per week on a school day, probably Friday afternoon."

That would indicate a cooling off of efforts to obtain Walsh, now Oakland Stadium, which soon will be razed for an office building.

Du Bourg to Lose Field.

Du Bourg High's football field will not be available for Catholic Athletic Conference games henceforth, it was learned yesterday. The recently-completed school in Southwest St. Louis will be added to, a wing on the west side which is expected to be ready for use in September.

The football field, on the south side of the school, will be needed for physical education purposes. The bleachers formerly at Du Bourg will be transferred to Mercy High in University City.

Frisina Beats Goalby, 3-1, for Fourth Illinois Amateur Golf Title

Veteran Is Too Steady For Youth

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 30 (AP)—Seasoned Jim Frisina of Taylorville won an unprecedented fourth Illinois State Amateur Golf title today with a 3 and 1 triumph over 26-year-old Bob Goalby of Belleville in their 36-hole championship match.

The 45-year-old Frisina, who previously took this meet in 1954, 1947 and 1942, never trailed as he outsteadied long-hitting Goalby on wind-swept University of Illinois course.

Frisina matched par 72 with his 35-37 morning round and then wound up on the 35th hole two over par for the distance. Goalby, who couldn't match Frisina's fine play around the greens, ended seven over par.

Frisina held a three-hole margin going into the afternoon round, slipped a little with a 38 against Goalby's 37 at the turn of the final 18, but turned on the pressure at the finish.

It appeared Goalby might rally when he tapped in a 25-footer on the thirty-first for a par three to come within two holes of Frisina. But the Taylorville veteran made two terrific explosion shots out of traps to come within a few feet of the pin on the next two holes for halves. Frisina's par three on the thirty-fifth hole while Goalby took a bogey settled the issue.

This was the first time Goalby, one of the state's longest simonpure belters, had reached the championship round.

Fairfield Has 63 But Palmer Is Golf Leader

WETHERSFIELD, Conn., June 30 (UP)—Twenty-six-year-old Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., who turned pro in 1954, took a clearcut lead at the end of the third round in the Insurance City open golf championship today by scoring a three-under-par 68 for a total of 203.

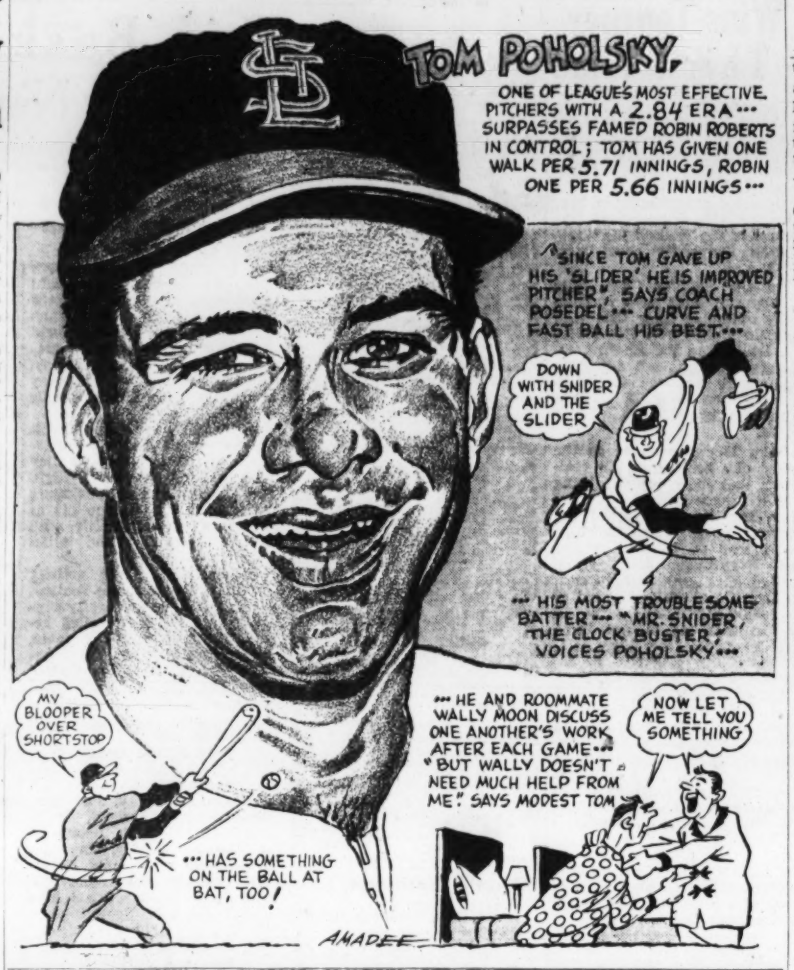

The score is 10 under par for the 54 holes played. Palmer previously had been tied for top place with Ed (Porky) Oliver of Canton, Mass., at 135.

But Oliver slumped to a 72 today and dropped to a tie for seventh place. With one round to go, Palmer has scored 66-69-68 and his putting on the fine Wethersfield greens has been especially impressive. Today he bagged six birdies, making four in succession on the back nine.

Gardner Dickinson of Panama City, Fla., scored a 65 today and moved into a tie for second place at 204 with handsome Dick Mayer of St. Petersburg, Fla. Dickinson has scored rounds of 70-79-65 to Mayer's 71-66-67.

The finest performance of the current tournament was staged by Don Fairfield of Casey, Ill., who did a 63—eight under par — and only three shots away from Tommy Bolt's record 60 scored here two years ago. Fairfield who had previously scored rounds of 69 and 77, put himself back in the tournament with his extraordinary round and, with a total of 209, was only six shots off the pace.

July 4 is considered the halfway point in major league baseball. Frequently it is conceded that the team leadingthen, goes on to win the pennant. When was the last time the July 4 leader in both leagues failed to win out?

Swoon's Son Scores At Arlington Park

CHICAGO, June 30 (AP)—Favored Swoon's Son scored his third straight stakes victory and fourth triumph without defeat this year when he breezed to a five-length victory today in the $27,275 Warren Wright Memorial for 3-year-olds at Arlington Park.

Ridden by Dave Erb, Swoon's Son, a prohibitive favorite with the crowd of 24,192, ran the seven furlongs in 1:22 2-5, only two-fifths of a second slower than the track mark.

Owner E. Gay Drake collected $15,750 as Swoon's Son pushed his 1956 earnings to $54,625. As a juvenile last year, he earned $236,705.

Swoon's Son paid $2.60, $2.40 and $2.20. The Warrior finished second and paid $3.20 and $2.20 and Jovial Jove paid $2.20.

Ben A. Jones finished fourth followed by Ambidextrous, First Lap and Mr. Victory.

Swoon's Son's next objective will be the $100,000 Arlington classic, July 14.

State Department to Underwrite Expense of Soccer Team's Tour

Four From St. Louis Included

By Dent McSkimming

The United States Department of State has approved a budget of $59,000 to finance the Far East tour of the United States Amateur soccer team on its trip to the Olympics, it is revealed in a report of soccer president Ed Sullivan of Philadelphia.

Sullivan will report this news to the United States Soccer Football Association delegates at their annual convention at Pittsburgh, July 7-8. The interest of the State Department was stimulated by the favorable impression created by the United States soccer squad in a three-game visit to Iceland a year ago.

Four St. Louis players (Harry Keough, Herman Wecke, Bill Looby and Ruben Mendoza) are on the Olympic squad which would make the Far East tour and play in the tournament at Melbourne.

Play on Return Trip.

In his letter to Sullivan, State Department staff member Harold E. Howland of the International Educational Exchange Service, suggested that gate receipts from games planned for Manila, Tokyo and other Orient ctpitals would probably pay the costs of the trip. But, he added, the $59,000 is budgeted to assure that there would be no hitch in the event of bad weather. Games may also be played in the Fiji Island on the return trip from Melbourne. The Olympic Games open Nov. 22.

Harry Luecke, secretary of the Missouri Soccer Commission, will be the voting delegate from this area attending the national convention. His alternate will be George McGann, former player and manager and more recently member of the Missouri commission. Walter Giesler, former secretary of the state association, will also attend and will be entitled to voting privileges as a past president of the U.S.S.

Handball Final At Forest Park

Stands have been erected to accommodate spectators at the championship final of the Forest Park Handball Club's title tournament, this afternoon. Play on the public courts, northeast of the field house near Lindell and DeBalivere, will start at 4 p.m.

Finalists are Harry Dreyfus and Henry Miller against Bill McGreevy and Larry Kickham. Dreyfus was a member of the champion team last year.

Manchester Homecoming.

The Manchester, Mo. Athletic Association will hold its homecoming Wednesday, July 4th. It will be an all-day affair which will be climaxed with a big fireworks display at 10:00 p.m.

At 3 p.m. the Manchester Men's softball team will play the Jennings Boat team of the Muny League.

Unusual Bike Ride For St. Louis Student

David R. W. Hoefer, a St. Louis student at Colorado A. & M. College, accomplished an unusual feat in bicycle riding recently. He rode a bike over the Trail Ridge Road in Rocky Mountain National Park, making the climb in five hours and the descent in 45 minutes. It took him six hours to ride from Fort Collins, Colo., to Estes Park.

C.Y.C. Girls' Softball.

Alton Athlete to Go to St. Louis U.

Gene Velloff, 6-foot-4, 185-pound basketball and baseball athlete from Alton, Ill., High, will enroll at St. Louis University, it was announced yesterday by Athletic Director Eddie Hickey.

As a guard on the Alton basketball team, Velloff averaged more than 28 points per game last season and won all-state honors.

In baseball Velloff has attended Cardinal tryout camps but has declined pro offers in order to participate in college athletics. During the past two years he pitched for Alton and Worden legion teams, winning 28 games and losing only four.

GOLF by ROBERT MORRISON

Down to Business.

POKER-HAND, throw-out and other golf competition confections designed to interest the neophyte and the unskilled, especially among women players, are now about to take a back seat.

The women shortly will get down to real tournament business, in which not even handicaps will disguise the quality of play. Their state tournament starts a week from Monday at Excelsior Springs, Mo., where early arrivals will be practicing this coming weekend.

There's a time and a place for poker-hand, throw-out and numerous other "crazy" club events in which the element, of luck is allowed to enter so that beginners may win prizes.

"It's a way of getting people started in the game," commented Mrs. A. A. Will, who this year heads both state and district women's golf organizations.

"Such events are fun even though the good player may have to stand and wait at times while somebody is taking 13 putts on one green. But, first thing you know, that beginner becomes interested, plays better and joins the district group."

So there is a reasonable purpose in things like the throw-out—in which the golfers play medal play, full handicap, and throw out the three worst holes in determining the score—and in poker-hand, in which the winner may have, say, four 4s on certain secretly pre-designated (blind) holes.

But it's hardly golf competition.

Star of the Show.

THROUGH the season the women's district group has serious competition, both in gross and net score divisions, and insofar as the regularly-playing members of the association are concerned, these results give an indication of the best players.

This summer a St. Louis Country Club member, Mrs. George Conant Jr., has created something of a sensation with her rapid improvement.

Mrs. Conant has cut her handicap from seven to four strokes in this season's play alone, an accomplishment that is considerably more difficult than reducing a higher handicap by a greater number of strokes.

"This time last year Mrs. Conont's handicap was 14 strokes," Mrs. Will reported, "so she's really been doing fine. She has taken a deep interest in the game and has put in a lot of time taking lessons and practicing on indoor and outdoor driving ranges."

Mrs. Conant, along with several other St. Louisans, has been at Des Moines this past weekend playing in the Women's Western Open at Wakonda C.C. Mary Rose Driscoll, another of the better players in the district, also went to that tournament, and when they go to Excelsior Springs from the big, tough Wakonda course, the state tournament course should look easy.

Among the Missing.

TWO of St. Louis's long-time standouts in women's golf, Mrs. Marilyn Herpel Conroy and Jeanie Dobbin, will be among the missing at the state event.

Mrs. Conroy's infant son Kevin presents too great a baby-sitting problem for her to take time to shoot for a fourth women's state crown, she said.

Miss Dobbin, who was a semifinalist in the Doherty women's tournament during a long stay in Florida the past winter, has a job, hasn't played since returning from Florida in April, and will pass up the state event this time, she said. She was medalist and runner-up to winner Marian Gault last year at Kansas City, and runner-up in 1950 to Mrs. Conroy.

But a number of the district association's regular tournament contenders are fairly definite starters at Excelsior Springs. These, with their current handicaps are Mrs. Lucien Fouke (3), Mrs. Conant (4), Mrs. Ray Schwartz (4), Mrs. W. F. Anderson (5), Susan Driscoll (5), Mary Rose Driscoll (6), Mrs. Russ Schoneberg (7), and Mrs. Ed Furgol, who has reduced her handicap from 12 to 8 strokes.

"Ed's had more time to help me with my game this year," said the wife of the 1954 National Open champion.

Closing date for women's state entries is today. Entry fees must be post-marked no later than July 1.

5.7 Yards Per Carry.

Paige Cothren, Mississippi fullback, averaged 5.7 yards per carry on 93 attempts during 1955.

Costello Hurls For Holy Cross In CYC Game

League leading Holy Cross (6-1) opposes second place Mount Carmel (4-3) in the outstanding game of the C.Y.C. Bishop Cody Senior circuit today in the 1:00 p.m. opener at Sherman Park Grounds two. In the second game, Sacred Heart (4-3) opposes St. Rita. Kenrick (2-2) draws the bye.

Don Costello, former Beaumont High ace, is expected to be on the mound for the league leaders, while Ray Liss is the probable choice for his opposition.

Mount Carmel hung a 3 to 2 defeat on Holy Cross the first game of the season and the latter club has scored six consecutive victories.

Manager Dan Rohn's Holy Rosary, defending champions, will to out to make it six in a row when it takes on St. Enbelbert's at Fairgrounds No. 2 at 1:00 p.m. Holy Rosary is the only undefeated senior nine in C.Y.C. loop.

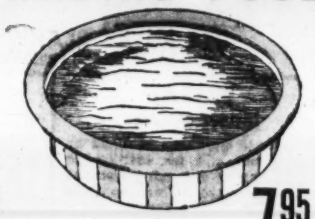

The top game on the South Side pits St. Joseph's, front-runners with a 5-2 record, against St. Pius (4-2) in a battle for first place. In the 1:00 p.m. opener Epiphany (3-3) meets St. Cronan (1-6).

JUST FOR FUN
ANSWER TO QUESTION ON PRECEDING PAGE

In 1951 both New York clubs were in second place on July 4 but finished on top. Brooklyn, the leader at the halfway point, ran second in the National League and the Chicago White Sox, ahead by half a game July 4, wound up fourth in the American League race. The last four years the July 4 leaders have gone on to win pennants.

Soffer to Hurl for Wilsons

By John J. Archibald

If it's a game between senior Muny League contenders you're looking for this afternoon, you'll have to go to Jackson Park in Berkeley. There the first-place Wilson Aces (5 and 2) will meet the Schmersahls (4 and 3) in the 12:30 game of a Berkeley League doubleheader.

The old city leagues had their "crucial" battles last Sunday, and today all the leaders will be matched with teams that are well down in the standings. Borbein-Young (6 and 0) in the North Side League, Carondelet No. 1 (5 and 1) in the South Side League, and Carondelet No. 2 (6 and 2) in the Heine Meine League will have to be on their guard to prevent an upset, but all won their big games last week.

In the Art Rogers League, the two top contenders will be playing the second division teams. The Jokers A.C. (5 and 1) will meet Fischer Fleet (1 and 4), while the Broadway Merchants (4 and 1) will have Titanium (1 and 5) as its opponent.

But in Berkeley it figures to be a battle, although the Wilson Aces have defeated the Schmersahls in two previous meetings. Larry Soffer, the University of Missouri senior who will be on the mound today, beat the Schmershals, 3 to 1, on a 14-strikeout job, while the Aces won the other time, 11 to 6, with Sid Kaufmann pitching.

Soffer Tops—So Far.

Coach Dick Stoughton's Aces have relied mainly on strong pitching so far. Lefthanded Soffer, who pitched for University City High some years ago and has completed his military service, has a 4 and 0 record for the Wilson club. He was on the Missouri U. squad this season, but didn't see much action.

Others on the Aces' hurling staff are Kaufmann, Al Wolf of Missouri U., and Bud Schwarz of Purdue. The team's best hitter, surprisingly, is Second Baseman Ray Booker, who was a .340 average. Booker was never known as a slugger while playing for the Maplewood High School or Maplewood Legion teams, but he's the best hitter the Aces have right now. He played as a regular for Washington University although a freshman this past spring.

The Wilson Aces' hurling corps was further strengthened Friday by the signing of Rich Wright, 21-year-old former Maplewood Legion team pitcher. Wright was in minor league ball for three seasons, but was released in May by Pocatello, Idaho, in the Pioneer League.

Neil Macormic with .303 and Ron Gulley with .300 are the other top hitters for the Aces.

Belleville Bowler In '300' Tournament

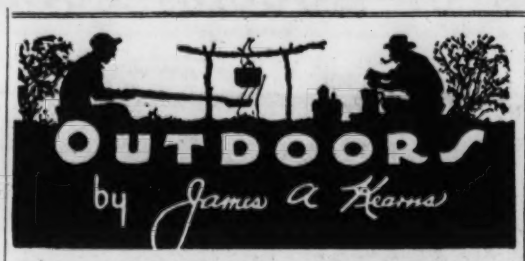

Robert L. Muren of Belleville will be one of 77 perfect game bowlers who will compete in a special tournament at Sunset Bowl in Chicago, Sept. 7-9. Muren rolled his 300 score at the Elks Lanes in Belleville April 30. The tournament, in which first prize is a trip to Europe, will be conducted by a shirt manufacturer.

Diving Exhibition.

A former Olympic champion diver and a former national college champion will give an exhibition of fancy, trick and comedy diving at the Hotel Chase pool Friday evening at 7 o'clock. Bruce Harlan won 20 major titles in the United States and Olympic honors, while Hobert Billingsley won United States collegiate honors at Ohio State.

Missouri Trout Plentiful and Running Bigger.

TROUT FISHING in Montauk, Bennett Spring and Roaring River state parks has been the best in many years, the park superintendents told Outdoors yesterday.

Experienced fishermen are taking the daily limit of six rainbows without difficulty in each of the parks, and the trout are running larger than in previous years, the superintendents reported.

Howard Hanks of Bennett Spring State Park near Lebanon said that the 16,330 fishermen who visited the park between the trout season's opening March 1 and June 20 caught 40,825 rainbows. This average of two and one-half trout per fisherman is amazingly high considering the large number of anglers and length of time involved.

Hanks produced the following breakdown of fishing results in each month, with the first figure representing the number of fishermen and the second the total trout caught: March—5600 and 14,000; April—3710 and 9275; May—3654 and 9135; June (up to the twentieth)—3366 and 8415.

Large Rainbows Taken.

The average size of trout taken has been 10 to 12 inches, with their weight running from three-quarters of a pound to one pound, Hanks said. There have been many catches of rainbows weighing two to four pounds.

The largest trout taken thus far this year at Bennett Spring was a 5¼-pounder.

At Montauk State Park, near Salem, fishing "has been good—extra good—the best in at least four years," Superintendent Paul Hagler said. He pointed out that the section of Current river in the park is in better condition and has more water than in several years. Rains caused the stream to rise three times within the last two months, he said.

Hagler reported the average creel has been 2½ fish, with the trout usually weighing from three-quarters to 1½ pounds. On opening day, O. K. Stigers of St. Louis hooked a 5¾-pound rainbow. Last month, 14-year-old Ted Streete of Caruthersville brought in a 5½-pound trout at Montauk.

Best fishing for trout in the park has been above the bridge, in a spot known as the "white oak hole." Montauk has had about 9500 fishermen since March 1.

Roaring River Project.

The stream at Roaring River Park near Cassville was completely rebuilt after a flood the middle of last month, with the result it is in its best condition in the last 25 years, Lige Frost said.

Frost, who has been superintendent of the park for the last three years but has lived in the area most of his life, said large amounts of gravel were removed from the stream and new baffles installed in the rebuilding project.

Roaring River has had 10,000 to 11,000 trout fishermen since the season's opening. The biggest catch was a 4-pound, 9-ounce rainbow taken by a Springdale (Ark.) physician.

Frost said the fish stocked in the stream are bigger this year—a condition he attributed to a new feed program used in the conservation commission's hatchery.

Persons who desire reservations in the lodges or cabins at any of three parks on weekends are advised to write about a month ahead because of the crowds. The camping grounds at Bennett Spring Park have been used extensively this year.

Squirrel Season Opens.

The squirrel and frog seasons opened today in Missouri. The squirrel season extends through Nov. 30, except for a nine-day closed period starting Nov. 1. The daily bag and possession limit is six.

Frogs may be taken through Nov. 30, with a daily bag and possession limit of six. Persons with fishing permits may take frogs by hand, hand net, gig, and hook-and-line. A hunting license permits use of a .22-caliber rim-fire rifle, pistol, bow and arrow, hand and hand net on frogs.

A trout hatchery capable of producing 80,000 pounds of fish a year is being built at Norfork, Ark., by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service to provide trout for streams in the White River watershed.

The schedule calls for distribution of the first fingerlings from the hatchery during next summer. The Service plans to plant both fingerlings and catchable-size trout. Below Bull Shoals dam, there are 45 miles of trout streams.

Lead at Stake In Two Khoury Senior Leagues

First place is in jeopardy in two of the four senior Khoury Leagues today as the Orlando Brothers in the University City League and Second Ward Democrats in the Missouri League could each fall into a first place tie if they are defeated. Both teams have five victories in six starts.

Just one game back of the Orlandos at 4-2 is the St. Louis County A.C. team, which plays the last-place Oilers at 1 p.m. The Orlandos take on St. Ann in the 3:30 game at Heman Park.

After losing their first two games by close margins, the St. Louis County club has bounced back to take their last four, including the lone victory over the Orlandos.

In the Missouri League, the second place Veterans A.C. will tackle the Local 25 team, winless in six games, while the league leading Second Ward Democrats go for their seventh consecutive victory over the Trojan Club.

Three Ban Johnson Ball Games Today

Three games in the Eastern Missouri Ban Johnson League will be played this afternoon. Two games are scheduled for Belleville, Ill., where the Kinloch Giants will play the Mo-Pac Eagles in the 1 o'clock opener while Mallory and the Gore Reporters will tangle at 3:30 p.m.

The third game is scheduled for Fletchers Field in Collinsville, where the two top teams, McMackin and Meramec Caverns meet at 2:30 p.m.

Glencoe Win Would Resolve Mixed-Up County Title Race

The County League's American Division wipes the slate clean and starts the pennant race all over today, a trick which another American League which annually has New York Yankee trouble, might copy with profit. Ballwin won the first half title by finishing with an 8 and 2 record last Sunday, but today it will be just another ball club when it is host to Olivette, a cellar team with its 2-7 record in the first half.

In other American Division games, Manchester will be at Creve Coeur and Twin City will be at Vigus. Starting time for all contests is 2:30.

The County League's National Division title for the first half wasn't quite wrapped up by Glencoe as reported earlier in the week, for the outcome of a Twin City protest of its game last Sunday with Florissant could still produce a tie. The National Division winds up its first half today.

Glencoe, which will play Bridgeton on the Maplewood field, is certain of at least a tie with its 8-1 record. Twin City has 6-3, with a protest hanging. If Glencoe can win today it will clinch the first-half title and make action on the protest unnecessary. But if Glencoe loses, Twin City wins from Chesterfield, and if Twin City then has a chance to replay last Sunday's game. Twin City could tie Glencoe for the title. Both would have 8-2 records.

Here's the cause of the protest, and it's a honey. In the first half of the fifth inning last Sunday Twin City had runners on first and second with none out. The batter then hit the ball down the third base line and the umpire immediately called foul.

The ball, however, rolled back into fair territory and was picked up by the Florissant third baseman. He stepped on third for a force out, threw to first and easily got the batter, who had stopped running after the umpire's call, and a throw to second base got the runner going there—thus there was a triple play on a "foul ball."

Florissant scored two runs in its half of the fifth and eventually won, 2 to 0.

Glencoe's opponent today, Bridgeton, has a 1-6 record. Chesterfield (1-6) will be at Twin City, which plays on the Festus field. Florissant will be at Webster Groves in the other game.—J.J.A.

A Fine Day Fishing On Heaven Creek

By Leonard Hall

I THINK it was MacKinley Kantor who first wrote about Heaven creek along whose ridges the silver-voiced hounds pursue the wily fox through the dew-drenched nights of June. But Kantor didn't exactly locate Heaven creek and you won't find it on your map of Missouri and the truth is that we only manage to discover it about every other summer. It lies far to the southwest, many miles from Possum Trot in the heart of the deep hills. Like many another little Ozark river, it flows clear and cool down its rocky course. There are swift gravelly runs and sudden turns, lazy reaches along high clay banks, shaded pools beneath towering limestone bluffs and dark holes where old sunken sycamore logs make an inviting tangle. Goggle-eye lurk in the shade of overhanging trees, always ready to do battle, and there are big hungry perch at the foot of every riffle. Wary small-mouth bass take advantage of each bit of cover, spurning your lure if any shadow falls across their hiding place but now and then charging out to engulf a well-placed fly or minnow. For the fisherman, no stream could be better named.

Heaven creek looms large in letters that go back and forth at long intervals between Possum Trot and our friend Cy Richeson in far-away Korea. Then he finally manages a month's vacation from his work in civilian relief, stops off in Tokyo to collect his family and makes the long hop across the Pacific on his way home to Potosi. Once there and with the visiting out of the way, we go a' fishing, though I won't say this is all the fishing Cy does while he is home. But this one day is a sort of ritual—an expedition with a capital "E." Cy's family goes along—his wife Martha, and Mollie and Phil, who already threatens his dad's preeminence as a minnow fisherman. Then there are Sam and Erlene, Sam still contending after all these years that the plug is the sporting way to take small-mouth. Ginnie goes as a matter of course, being our chief fly fisherman. And I tag along to carry the fish, on this occasion with cousin Ed Bust as a helper, though I noticed he took his rod and minnow bucket.

We made an early start for the creek, gathering at Sam's house in Potosi and sorting out enough duffle to make a month's safari. There were tackle boxes and creels and rod cases, iceboxes and hampers of food for luncheon and supper, seines and minnow traps and buckets, cameras and binoculars. Nor must I forget to mention two big black iron skillets; for the culmination of this day was to be a fish fry on the creek bank.

● AFTER YOU LEAVE the highway on the journey to Heaven creek, you travel for miles along back-country roads, following one ridge, then crossing a hollow, then climbing again until there'd be a fine chance for anyone who didn't know the way to become completely turned around and lost. But we came out at last onto a shady gravel bar and parked the cars. There we had lunch and changed to old fishing togs and wading shoes. From a big clear-water slough behind our camping spot, Ginnie and I picked up a dozen or so big black perch "just to take the pressure off the stringers when it came time for supper." This slough, perhaps a mile long, was literally alive with perch and sunfish and we hoped it wouldn't dry up with the advance of summer, for there were enough fish here to stock a half-dozen small streams.

Not long after lunch, as soon as there was a bit of shade along the creek, everyone started out to try his luck. Ginnie and I elected to fly fish downstream. Cy and Ed and Phil with their buckets of minnows took their car and headed a mile or so upstream to try some likely holes. Sam and Erlene drove us to the ford and said they'd stay right there, it being as good a place as any. The fact that we were fishing during the full quarter of the moon discouraged no-one, for all we really needed was enough fish for supper and with seven rods at work we were confident we'd be well-fed. Ginnie and I waded downstream, taking the likely spots as they came. Our luck wasn't phenomenal, yet often enough to keep things interesting one or the other of us was fast to a fish, so that my creel grew steadily heavier.

● SOONER THAN WE'D HAVE THOUGHT POSSIBLE the shadows were growing long and it was time to turn back toward our rendezvous. Back at camp again, we found everyone had enjoyed a fine afternoon's sport. Erlene, top angler of the day, had a three-pounder on her stringer and the minnow fisherman did almost as well. Ed and Cy undertook the task of cleaning the catch while Sam and I built the fire for supper, searching out enough solid old fence posts among the driftwood to make a fine bed of coals. Just at dusk the big skillets went onto the coals, each filled with perhaps two pounds of leaf lard. And just before it came to a rolling boil, Sam tested it carefully and dropped in his fish. The girls unpacked cold potato salad, baked beans, tomatoes, sliced onions and cold drinks. A full moon climbed up the eastern sky to light the feast and those bass were cooked so you could eat the tails and fins as though they were potato chips. Before we were finished and leaned back to watch the glow of the fire and listen to the whippoorwills, we'd even forgotten about the pineapple cake which Ginnie had labored on so hard the day before, then carefully left at home. Driving back to the farm, we discussed the possible reasons why the fishing stays so good in Heaven creek. Perhaps it's because we only manage to find it once every other year or so.

DR. EDGAR S. ANDERSON, DIRECTOR OF THE MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN, EXAMINES A KOREAN IVY TREE WHICH STANDS OUTSIDE THE DOOR OF HIS HOME ON THE BOTANICAL GARDEN GROUNDS.

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

DR. ANDERSON WIELDS A HOE IN HIS HOME GARDEN. HE CALLS IT A BOTANIST'S GARDEN, ONE OF EACH, WITH "A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF BLOWZY CHARM."

Our City's Top Gardener

Famed Botanist Dr. Edgar S. Anderson, Director of Missouri Botanical Garden, Helps Other St. Louisans Make Things Grow

By Clarissa Start

THE average St. Louisan buys more seeds and garden supplies than the average resident of any other large city in the United States. This interesting civic statistic was pointed out to Dr. Edgar S. Anderson, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, by nurseryman Hugh Steavenson of Elsberry, Mo.

"I have my own ideas why this situation exists," says Dr. Anderson, famed botanist, who is also Engelmann professor of botany at Washington University. "I think it's because we have so many people of German descent in St. Louis and Germans are traditionally garden minded. I've lived in the Balkans where there are islands of German settlements and wherever you find well-kept parks and gardens, you know you're in one of those settlements. However, Hugh Steavenson was nice enough to say it was because the Garden has been here so many years."

According to the will of the late Henry Shaw, who started the garden which many call by his name, the Missouri Botanical Garden is intended to serve two purposes: to be a center of information to the general public about gardening and a center of education in the science of botany.

Dr. Anderson rereads this will about once a week and if St. Louisans have pretty gardens and if at some future date, they have lovely lawns as well, much of the credit can go to him for taking the community education phase of his job so seriously.

For Dr. Anderson is not only a geneticist and professor of botany. He is also a home gardener who started a lawn from a quarter-size piece of Meyer's Zoysia, a man who battles ants, blackspot, crabgrass, dandelions and the rest of the alphabet of home garden plagues. No chair-borne expert, he hoists a hoe and digs your troubles.

"THE best thing that can be said for my garden," he says as he shows you around, "is that it has a certain amount of blowzy charm. It's a botanist's garden, one of each. Because the house had no garden since it was built in 1890, I always dig a hole twice as big as it should be because we still come across building materials in the ground. I know quite a lot now about 1890 plaster."

Tht stone house on the Botanical Garden grounds, where Dr. Anderson lives with his wife, a botanist, too, and their daughter, Phoebe, social worker with the Cerebral Palsy Association, was once a waiting room for the horsedrawn stage which transported passengers twice a day to the horse cars on Compton avenue. Now a charming, small but spacious appearing home, it houses such Anderson family hobbies as house plants, music, Chinese checkers and diet-minded cooking.

Outside the door is the garden, herbs on one side, a Korean ivy tree on the other, and between them a variety fascinating to the gardener who knows only the familiar. Included is amsonia, a shrubby plant with Canton blue flowers, native to the Meramec gravel bars; eremurus, with flowering spikes of greeny gold; alium giganteum, literally giant onion, but one with pink blossoms; a daisy like the wild variety but lemon yellow in color; Peruvian daffodils, fringed and lily-like with tube-rose perfume, and other plants, rare because they are new or because they are old.

"SOME of the things I have are so old-fashioned that most people don't have them," Dr. Anderson says. "Most people have the beautiful hybrid large-flowered cannas, for instance. But our grandparents favored the cannas which have small flowers but grow to tremendous heights and love heat. They make a great curtain of vegetation to hide an ashpit or shut off the noise of the street. Then I have these old-fashioned coral bells. Most people have the brighter colored ones that flower only once, but this pink variety is in its third flowering."

The only flower concerning which Dr. Anderson claims to have specialized knowledge is the Rose Alba, the white rose of the Renaissance, predecessor of our modern roses which are the result of Oriental importation and European hybridization. Dr. Anderson's Rose Alba bushes which he grew at his former home and which survive heat, elm roots and other vicissitudes, now grow on each side of the entrance to the garden's administration building on Tower Grove avenue. On this plant alone does Dr. Anderson consider himself an expert.

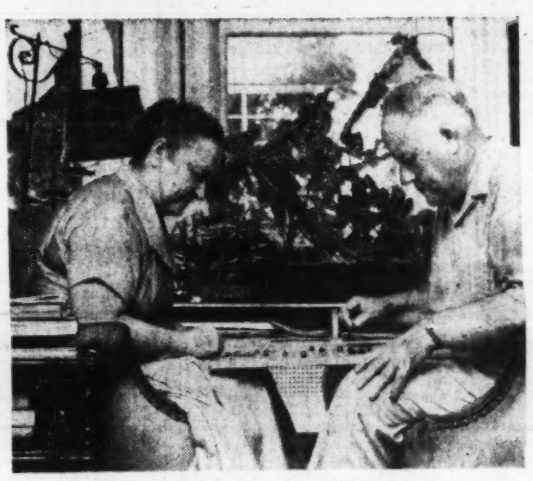

"I'm just an amateur," he sums up his gardening, "which means I love it and I admit I'm still learning."

DR. ANDERSON'S learning began at East Lansing, Mich., where he was born and where his father was professor of dairy science at Michigan State College. His mother was a pianist and a love of music is evidenced in the Anderson home where classics and square dance albums share the bookshelves.

He received degrees from Michigan State and Harvard, worked as geneticist at Shaw's Garden and assistant professor of botany at Washington University from 1922 to 1930, then returned to Harvard as arborist at the university's Arnold Arboretum. Searching for holly and ivy which would grow in the northern United States, he went to the Balkans where he found the ivy now grown at Gray Summit and by grateful gardeners in this vicinity. This work won for him a medal, the Order of the Yugoslavian Crown. In 1935 he returned as Garden geneticist and Washingington U. professor, his work concentrating on genetics, primarily corn hybridization. He is frank in saying that he was surprised to find himself director of the Botanical Garden, a title he received in 1954, as it was not a job for which he'd taken special aim.

"I consider myself a teacher, investigator, writer, and keen amateur gardener," he says, "and I've done demonstrably well in those fields. I can sell what I write or do it for something I love. I've taught long enough that some of my students are doing well. A lot of people think my pet theories are all wet, but an equal number think they're good and some have been tried and have worked. I always thought if you didn't want an executive job you could get out of it, but I found it wasn't possible.

"A Botanical Garden director's job is a special kind of job. You can't just go out and buy a director. You have to catch them young and train them, not only the director but all the people on the staff. Our librarians, Nell Horner and Edna Mepham, were trained here. Our man in charge of succulents, Lad Cutak, is the son of a man who worked here. Many of our people grew up with us.

"A botanical garden is a place where the scientific study of plants and the art of growing plants and the general public and the scientific public all come together. You have to train people with all that in mind. A hundred years ago most botanists were gardeners but today botany is as technical as physics or chemistry. I could name you half a dozen botanists who work with electronic microscopes. I myself have been invited to be a visiting member of a prominent mathematics department.

"Therefore you can't just take the first trained botanist you find and make a director of him. Dr. Hugh Cutler, our associate director, is being trained for the job and right now I do only the jobs I'm skilled at doing. For instance, a big job is equipment about which I know nothing. Dr. Cutler's father was a prominent engineer who saw no reason a boy should be stupid about other things just because he was interested in plants so he taught him all about power equipment."

IN addition to the scientific and administrative phases of his job, Dr. Anderson has the problem of working with the community, as Shaw's will stipulates. Besieged by calls and letters from eager amateurs, the Garden has set up a program to assist the public in its quest for horticultural education.

"We have a council of outstanding specialists, on lawns, house plants, shrubbery, roses," Dr. Anderson explains. "They are set up to answer questions, to go into neighborhoods and give advice. People are learning to call them directly instead of calling us.

"Up to a few years ago, many people didn't know there were garden clubs or that you could start one. They didn't know there was a Dahlia Society, a Rose Society, a Horticulture Society open to everyone. We give out the names and addresses of these organizations which are willing to have new members and answer requests for information.

"Another idea we've tried to give the general public is that you learn about gardening from fellow gardeners. There are 1,000,000 kinds of plants and thousands of name varieties of each one; for instance there are 5000 name varieties of iris on the market now. Any two gardeners can learn from each other and our job so far as gardening is concerned is to see that St. Louis gardeners do learn from each other."

SO much for the provisions in Shaw's will concerning information for gardeners. It is the provision concerning the teaching of botany which is intriguing Dr. Anderson at the moment, because he is undertaking it through work on the St. Louis gardener's number one problem, grass. Ever since Dr. George Van Schaak put the Engelmann herbareum in order, Shaw's Garden has had the second most useful herbareum in the United States. Dr. Anderson hopes he can teach not only botanists but lay people about grasses. First step in his program has been the founding of the Friends of the Grass Society and the inauguration a few weeks ago of the first Grass Walk.

"The main reason we have trouble managing grass in the Middle West," he points out, "is that all grasses look alike to the average person. If crabgrass were red and bluegrass blue and annual bluegrass were yellow, it would be much simpler. In the fall you'd have a blue lawn getting yellow as the annual bluegrass woke up, and as winter went on you'd see more yellow than blue.

"In early spring your lawn would be all yellow, gradually getting bluer and bluer as spring went on. Then as hot weather hit, you'd see lawns dramatically turning red. Incidentally, night temperatures are more important than day in governing grass."

THE average gardener thinks grass is grass and doesn't take much interest in it until summer when he suddenly starts seeding and fertilizing and frantically trying to raise the bluegrass which grows in winter and is all set to hibernate in hot weather.

"We hope to train the public that Sept. 15 to Nov. 15 is the time to grow grass," Dr. Anderson says. "You're wasting your fertilizer and time in spring and summer."

The Friends of the Grass Society had its first meeting at Westwood Country Club where the men who've served on the greens committee came together with nurserymen, seedmen and scientists. The Better Turf Institute gave the group a grant of $500 and with this, they have started an education program, the first step of which is the labeling of grass and weeds at Shaw's Garden.

Philip Hale of the Dahlia Society has made weatherproof signs with chatty information, so the visitor to the Garden now can study a big circle of U-3 Bermuda and learn that its good points are that it does well in hot weather, takes any amount of heat, and if watered will make a fine turf; its bad points are that it can become a weed outgrowing its limits, it turns white with frost, dies off in shade, and takes frequent mowing. Because this grass dies in winter, many gardeners combine it with annual bluegrass which does the reverse.

"This means there are times of the year when your lawn looks like a girl with molasses hair," Anderson says, "and there are those who don't care for molasses hair but I think it's the loveliest kind of hair you can have."

AT other parts of the Garden you can read about Meyer's Zoysia (starts from plugs, takes less mowing); bluegrass ("likes to sleep during hot weather—don't wake it up"), and ivy ("older St. Louisans," says Dr. Anderson, "associate ivy with Bellefontaine Cemetery, but younger gardeners like it.") In due time, weeds, too, will be labeled.

Dr. Anderson considers the Garden's biggest grass success is its plot of bluegrass which was allowed to go to seed last fall in spite of angry callers who wanted to know what the gardens were coming to with all that high grass. He hopes to develop a Tower Grove blue as they have developed an Arboretum blue for commercial sale.

In order to pass on all this information, the first Grass Walk was set up, a public meeting for 7:30 on a Sunday morning. The hour was made purposely inconvenient so only the dedicated would come out and Dr. Anderson and Dr. Van Schaak anticipated from half a dozen to 25. Instead they had more than 75 eager walkers, some of whom came from Illinois and the far north county, and many of whom stayed four hours. Next year, Anderson hopes it rains on the appointed day.

"So we get only the absolutely devoted people and have the cream to work with," he says.

"We figure if we can get 100 people in St. Louis who really understand grass and see what is happening in their lawns, then 25 years from now we might have such good grass in this area, it will drive out all the weeds."

You should live so long.

Suggestions on How to Grow a Lawn in St. Louis

SEPTEMBER is the best month of the year to establish or improve the lawn, according to "Good Lawn Management," a Missouri Botanical Garden bulletin by Paul A. Kohl. A step-by-step guide for a better lawn, from tips by Kohl and Dr. Anderson follows:

1. From late August through September, cut crabgrass as close to the ground as possible. Raise seed stalks with the rake and cut a second or even a third time. Use a grass catcher to remove as much seed as possible.

2. Rough remaining grass with strong-toothed rake and remove dead grass.

3. Spread a commercial fertilizer, using about 20 pounds to 1000 square feet of lawn surface. Apply only when grass is dry and water it in immediately.

4. A day or so later sow a good grass seed mixture at the rate of five pounds to 1000 square feet for new lawns or those consisting mainly of crabgrass, half this amount for established lawns. Use only the best quality seed. Bluegrass, while not entirely satisfactory, is by far the most important grass in this area and best for the average lawn, Dr. Anderson believes.

PLOT OF U-3 BERMUDA AT THE GARDEN, PART OF DR. ANDERSON'S EFFORTS TO EDUCATE THE PUBLIC. SIGN LISTS ITS GOOD AND BAD POINTS.

There are many specialized grasses for specialized purposes; most golf greens use bent grass, for instance, but this takes expert care. The highly publicized hot weather grasses—U-3 Bermuda and Zoysia — have good points and bad, as outlined in the accompanying story, and Dr. Anderson suggests home owners try them on a small scale until they see what they can do with them. He suggests that the local gardener keep up his interest in hot weather grasses even though at present they are not for the average person. He advises against planting rye in this area but thinks the new fescues are promising and says the Botanical Garden plans to try them out this fall. There are other cool weather grasses but no experiments have been tried with them as yet.

5. Spray lawn with a fine mist after seeding. If ground is dry, spray daily. Gather leaves once a week to keep them from smothering grass, using a fan-shaped metal broom-rake.

6. If grass grows tall, cut it before it mats, at one and one half to two inches. Be sure mower is sharp as a a dull mower will spoil the best lawn. A well fed lawn of good grass, cut to a height of two inches and kept free of leaves is ready for the winter season.

7. In February the lawn becomes green. Seed bare spots and feed lightly but not later than the middle of April. Feeding in May only benefits the weeds.

8. Cut in March once or twice a week but never shorter than two inches.

9. Remove grass clippings early in the season. Later when growth is retarded by heat, there is no objection to letting them act as a mulch.

10. Bluegrass becomes dormant in July and August but is not dead as might be supposed. To discourage crabgrass, do not water the lawn. But if drouth lasts more than a month, give the lawn a soaking at least six inches deep.

"Much effort is put into the lawn each year but there is little to show for it," says the bulletin. "The reason for this is poor timing and little or no food for the grass. Try fall seeding and fertilizing and compare the results with the spring-made lawn."

Hollywood Mother

Gale Storm Stars In Career, Home

By James Bacon

HOLLYWOOD, June 30 (AP).

CAN an actress be normal—and still successful? Gale Storm, who never has done any of the odd things usually associated with the acting profession, continues to amaze Hollywood. Long famed as an exemplary mother, a Sunday school teacher and an opponent of cheesecake for cheesecake's sake, Gale defies every accepted axiom for Hollywood success.

GALE STORM . . . TURNED DOWN $400,000 OFFER.

Yet, this is her economic status at the moment: She recently turned down a firm offer of $400,000 for her share of 126 "My Little Margie" television films, now being rerun throughout the nation. Her first recording, "I Hear You Knocking," sold more than 800,000 copies and made a small recording label into a near-major as a result. A new video film series entitled "Oh, Susanna" in which Gale will star as a social director on an ocean liner is currently in production at Hal Roach Studios. Even movies, her old standby, are beckoning stronger than ever.

Although Gale says, "If I'm normal, pity the odd ones," this remarkably successful woman is often seen pushing a cart in a suburban Sherman Oaks supermarket or attending church and P.-T.A. meetings. She is rarely seen in night spots. While at first glance it might seem Gale was less than "normal" to turn down $400,000 in cash, that too was done with good and perfectly normal logic. She stands to make twice the amount by retaining the rights to the "Margie" episodes.

● NO ONE KNOWS better than Gale how many times a film can be repeated on television. During the war, she was queen of the B movies at the old Monogram Studios. She owned no part of those movies, some of which were made on eight day schedules. They are haunting her no end now. "In fact," she says, "I may use some of my 'Margie' profits to buy them back—so I can keep them off TV." The "Margie" films, half-hour length, probably will re-run for years on local TV stations.

Lee Bonnell, her husband-manager and a successful insurance executive, calls them the greatest form of annuity ever invented. Gale's emergence as a recording star on her first record also started some head shaking around Hollywood. The records were made by Dot, a Gallatin (Tenn.) company. The company, practically unheard of until Gale's arrival, subsequently did 15 per cent of the national business, Daily Variety has reported.

Although she is the mother of three boys and is over 30, Gale not only looks like a teen-ager in person but make-up men say she has the skin of a teen-ager, soft and youthful in texture.

How does a busy actress keep a semblance of normalcy at home? "Actually," she said, "I think all this activity is good for my family. When I do have time to devote to my boys, I give full time to it. A lot of full time mothers maybe see too much of their kids and don't get a chance to appreciate them until they're gone." To make up for her absence during the day, dinner time is devoted to the boys. Each tells what happened during the day. On school holidays or Saturdays, Gale takes one of the boys to work with her. She once tried taking all three. But, boys being boys, that proved too chaotic. "Sunday is the family's day. We all get up early and go to church and Sunday school. Then we spend the whole day together. Whatever we do, we do together."

● GALE, WHO HAD a strong religious upbringing in her hometown of Houston, got into Sunday school teaching this way: "When my oldest son, Phillip, now 12, was a toddler of 2½, I took him to Sunday school nursery at our church. 'There he is,' I said brightly to the teacher, and put his little hand in hers. 'Oh, Mrs. Bonell,' she called to me as I started down the walk, 'You'll have to attend, too.' One look at Phillip's tear-streaked face and I understood why. So Phillip and I started nursery Sunday school together."

Gale eventually taught Sunday school at all grade levels. She and Lee even conducted a seminar for high schoolers. The Hollywood Beverly Christian Church reports that it was one of the best attended classes in the history of the church.

"However, the reason wasn't always religion," she recalls. "They all wanted to find out how it felt to be a movie star. Always, with children I have found they like their dessert before their vegetable. So I gave them dessert. I talked about glamour and Hollywood for the first part of the class. Then we indulged in a good old-fashioned discussion about the meaning of God, and how to apply His ways."

Which in any Sunday school, in Hollywood or elsewhere, seems a very normal thing for the teacher to do.

Try and Stop Me

FELLOW BOUGHT a house near a river bank, despite the fact that the cellar seemed rather damp. "Snug as a bug in a rug," the salesman assured. "This cellar is dryer than the Sahara Desert."

A month later the buyer charged into the seller's office, prepared to wring his neck. "You and your Sahara," he cried. "I put two mouse traps in that cellar and when I went down to look at them this morning they had caught a flounder and a haddock."

THE EMERGENCE of new "he-man" movie stars with names like Rock Hudson and Race Gentry is keeping agents awake nights trying to think of tough toppers. Soon, it is predicted, you'll see in lights, "Introducing Trip Hammer," or "Featuring Steel Barr, Hit Harder, Puncher Good," etc., etc.

No Time for Sergeants

Bad Morning After Night Before

As Result, Georgia Farm Boy's Armed Forces Career Takes New and Surprising Turn

Seventh installment in a series condensed from the book, "No Time for Sergeants," best-seller published by Random House.

By Mac Hyman

I WAS a little tired after the big party that Sgt. King and the other fellows gave me. They was real nice—they kept pouring whisky, wine, gin, and beer for me to drink, and then we added a little kerosene for flavor toward morning.

Of course, all this was a little weak compared to Pa's Georgia moonshine, but I didn't say nothing about that. After the big fight in the bar, we all piled into Sgt. King's new car, that he always set such store by, and went slamming around, and finally drove into the ocean and started washing the car there.

After a couple of hours I got sort of bored and went back to the barracks. Next morning when I got up, the others still hadn't got in. But I had the latrine to clean up, so I went ahead with a mop and rags and soap and really got it to shining, too.

Then I took a long piece of wire I had and run it from seat to seat, because they are all in a line, you know, and then I was all ready for inspection.

I didn't want nobody in there messing things up none, so I closed the door. At first some of the fellows wanted to use the latrine anyhow, but after I explained to them what I would do if any of them went in there, they acted real nice about it and went over and used the one next door, all of them but this one fellow who didn't act so decent about it. He come up and kept jabbering about taking medicine of some kind, and I said, "Well, go over next door and take it if you want to," but he stood there saying, "I already took it, I took it last night."

Anyhow, I began to get right anxious about Sgt. King. And then some fellow looked out the window and said, he seen the Colonel and the other officers next door, and said, "It won't be long now. They'll be here next. It's just too bad about King, I guess."

THEN this fellow called out, "Here they come! Here they come!" And I looked around ready to come to attention, but then I seen it warn't the officers he meant. Sgt. King and Polettie and P. J. and Chris come dragging in, water still spurting out of their shoes every step they took, their clothes still wet and their hair hanging down in their eyes. Sgt. King had one sleeve torn off his shirt and one of his eyes black, and the rest of them looked about the same—I guess about the worst-looking bunch I ever seen in my life. They stopped in the middle of the barracks, water dripping in little puddles on the floor, and then Sgt. King looked up all of a sudden and said, "Ain't inspection over with yet? Ain't . . ."

But about that time, the door opened and somebody called out, "Attention!" and the Colonel and the Captain and the Lieutenants come walking in. Sgt. King's head kind of snatched back and his eyes kind of popped, but then he snatched himself up to attention and stood there like the others done; and then the officers stopped right still too.

Anyhow, I was standing there in the door with the wire around my foot and they come walking on back to where Sgt. King and them were standing. Sgt. King and them stood real stiff, looking like tramps; and the Colonel first walked up to Sgt. King and looked him over, up and down while Sgt. King stood there so stiff he didn't even seem to be breathing. Then the Colonel looked up and down Chris and P. J. and Polettie, and then he went back to Sgt. King and started all over again.

THE Colonel finally come walking on back, just like I knowed he would, everything still right quiet, and then he come poking his face in the door, and about that time I yelled out, "Ten-shun!" just as loud as I could! He warn't standing but about two feet off and he jumped back into one of the Lieutenants because it was such a surprise for him—anyhow, I jerked up real straight and snatched my foot with the wire tied to it, and those seats popped up in the air just as nice as they could! They slammed up against the side of the wall so loud it sounded like the place was coming down.

Me and those seats were standing just as straight as you could want, all right at attention! He just stared at them for a while. But finally he got himself straightened out and nodded at me and said, "Yes, I remember you. I certainly do."

"Yessir," I said. "Sgt. King made me permanent latrine man."

"Oh, yes. Sgt. King did that . . ."

"Yessir," I said, and then I looked at Sgt. King and I told a flat lie. I said, "We thought you would like it. Me and him fixed it up for you." I looked at Sgt. King out of the corner of my eye and you should have seen his face. It was the whitest I ever seen. He was right embarrassed about it. "He showed me how," I said.

And then the Colonel looked at him and said, "Sgt. King ought to tell us some of these things. In fact, I think Sgt. King had better come over to the orderly room again and explain a few more things to us!" He stood there looking Sgt. King up and down and then he shouted out, "Right now, Sergeant. Right this minute! And don't bother to get dressed up. I want to talk to you just the way you are — I'll enjoy what I'm going to do a lot more," and then he turned and headed out the door.

SGT. KING followed them out and for a few minutes didn't nobody move. They all come and looked at the latrine and stared at it like they hadn't never seen nothing like it before. And then Chris come over and stood there and looked at me with his eyes kind of blank, and started to say something; he opened his mouth but nothing come out, and then he kind of stumbled over and flopped down on his bed.

Little P. J. still hadn't come out of it, I guess. He hauled off and tried to kick at me but his foot got tangled up in the wire which tripped him up so that he hit flat on his back, which made the seats fly up and bang against the wall again, which kind of scared Chris because he come bounding up in the bed, looking wild-eyed this way and that, and then flopped back down again. So I picked little P. J. up and put him to bed; he was out like a light already.

Anyhow, I waited around for Sgt. King to get back and find out what happened with the Colonel, but they kept him over there for the longest sort of time.

I finally begun worrying over what was keeping him so long and went over to the orderly room to find out. You couldn't hear nothing, though; the doors was closed. But all the clerks were setting around and while I was standing there, the First Sergeant come up to me and said, "Stockdale, I just wanted to tell you that you're going to gunnery school all right. I think you ought to tell Sgt. King about it when he gets out. I think it'll do him good."

"Well, I be dogged," I said. "I'm mighty glad to hear it."

"You ain't the only one," the First Sergeant said; then he looked at the door to the office where they had Sgt. King and said, "I ain't ever liked him too much, but anyhow you tell him when he gets back, will you? There's just so much a man can take, and I think it might help a little bit."

So I went back over to the barracks and waited until Sgt. King finally come back. We went up to his room and he was laying on the bunk with his hands over his eyes, holding his stripes in his other hand, and he didn't move when we come in. He said, "Stockdale, I give up. Just go away, will you?"

"I got some good news," I said. "Guess what."

"No," he said. "I don't want to guess. I'll tell you what I'll do though. I'll stay right here and keep my eyes closed for 30 seconds, and anything else you can do to me, just go ahead. All I ask is that it is quick and silent."

"I just wanted to tell you I'm going to gunnery school. I just heered."

SGT. KING looked at me and shook his head and took a deep breath and said, "Well, no man can expect everything. I lost my stripes, but I can take it, I guess. I guess I can take it."

Then he turned to me and said, "So you're going to gunnery school. You're going to ship out far, far away and never come back no more and I won't ever see you no more . . . you think I can't take it? With that I can take anything!"

"I'll try to make it back every once in a while," I said.

And then somebody yelled out, "Yeah, there it comes!" and Sgt. King stopped and they yelled, "It's outside, King! They just brought it in!"

He looked outside the door. "They just brought what in?"

"Your car," they said. "They got it out there now. Look at that thing, will you?"

People were yelling to each other all over the place, running to the windows to get a look at it. It didn't look so good, neither. The seats was turned upside down and the back one was poking out through the rear window and all the other windows was broke, and it had weeds all over it and a big dent in it, and it was the most peculiar-looking color I ever saw. It was hung on the back of a wrecker, parked in the front of the orderly room, and there was some AP's going inside.

SGT. KING looked at it; then turned away from the window real quick and lit a cigarette and begun walking up and down, puffing, and rubbing his hands over his face. Then the First Sergeant stuck his head in the door again and motioned with his finger to Sgt. King, and Sgt. King took a deep breath and started out again.

Well, it warn't until I got back from dinner that I found out what had happened. I stopped by his room on the way back to get my bags packed and I said, "Well, I guess I'll start getting packed now. I guess I'll see you around before I go so I can sa ygoodby, won't I?"

And then this fellow next to me said. "No use in that. He's going to gunnery school himself. He'll be right with you."

Well, it was the most surprising thing! I looked at Sgt. King and he just kept setting there staring out the window.

"It just goes to show you," I said, "that nothing bad ever happens, but what some good don't come out of it one way or the other." Sgt. King didn't say nothing, just set there staring out the window.

Designing Woman

Window Setting for Dressing Table

By Elizabeth Hillyer

WHETHER or not it's the only place where there's room for it, a dressing table can look particularly handsome in the setting of big windows. And the problems of light and privacy like those Mrs. K.B.W. has are easily solved.

She writes, "Draperies behind my dressing table are fine closed at night, but these windows are the only source of light from outdoors in the daytime. Is there some way to keep the draperies open and design curtaining which shuts off the too-plain-view into the room from next door?"

Choose curtain fabric that light filters through but which can't be seen through from outside. Mrs. W., then make them to hang at this certain level. Place the rod so the curtains begin higher than a standing person. They'll be attractive with the typical cafe curtain heading, and the uncovered glass that's too high to see the room through will let in extra, unobstructed light.

MRS. E. R. "My husband thinks canary yellow would be a good color for our kitchen walls to go with a brown dinette set with some yellow and blue in it, a light gray floor with flecks of red and red trim around the sink, white appliances and cafe curtains with red, yellow, green, and brown on a white ground. The kitchen can be seen into from the living room, which is predominantly gray. Would the yellow be best for the new wall color?"

Bright yellow is always a cheerful kitchen color and should look good for your walls. Strengthen its value to the scheme with yellow accessories, and you might be able to add more yellow to the furniture.

MRS. M. M. "We have a small room just off the living room that we plan to use as a TV room, and now that we have a new sofa, the old one has been moved in there. It's green and repeats the green in the living room. What other colors should go in this room to make it different from but in harmony with the living room?" Other living-room colors are melon and beige. The carpet and walls are beige."

A soft shade of the melon color shouldn't be too strong for the walls of the TV room. The rug might be green or the same beige as the living room carpet, and chairs perhaps patterned in green and beige. Accessories and wall decoration could take more green and a stronger shade of the melon.

Inheritance

A Wrong View on 'Rights'

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

SOME of the most unhappy situations in family life grow out of children's expectations of inheriting money from their parents. In some European cultures in the past, they had a right to expect something. Property was passed down from generation to generation, each one being entitled to the use of it, but not to dispose of it.

On this continent, on the other hand, no one has a right to expect anything. Mr. McK. might just as well face this fact. But this is the way he sees it:

"My parents are old and well-to-do. I have always expected a substantial inheritance from them when they die. I am married, with three children and an average salary. We have always counted on getting this inheritance some day to ease our situation.

"But now my parents seem determined to squander everything they have. They are even planning a trip around the world, and you know that can't be done for nothing. I'm afraid there will be nothing left for me. Is there any way that they can be put under legal or moral pressure to prevent them from wasting their money? It seems to me this is an extremely important part of family relations."

I'm afraid you can't get much sympathy from me or from my readers, Mr. McK. It's about time for you to stand on your own feet and live your own life. If your parents can get the enjoyment in their older years of being able to travel, they ought to do so.

PARENTS NORMALLY want to see their offspring prosper and enjoy giving a little help from time to time, but there is no reason why they should be expected to devote their entire lives to taking care of an able-bodied son who ought to take care of himself. If we give our sons and daughters good health, good education, and a family name of which they need not be ashamed, we have done all the younger generation has a right to expect and much more than some of the younger generation ever get.

If your parents made you too dependent in the past, Mr. McK., they did not do you a favor. I can't undo what they have done, but I advise you strongly to turn around today and begin to live your own life. It will be better for you and your wife and your children. If you ever do inherit a cent from your parents, look on it as a stroke of luck. It is certainly not something to which you have any claim.

Answers to Questions.

Q. How can I overcome shyness?

A. It would be disastrous if everyone were aggressive and determined to do all the talking. Good listeners are always in demand. But make it a point to speak to five persons of the other sex every day. It makes no difference whether you get a cordial response; your job is to speak to them. It's good practice.

Q. I SUPPOSE many young women have asked you this question before, Dr. Popenoe. Where can I meet marriageable men?

A. In every large city there are innumerable groups devoted to special interests; music, art, literature, foreign languages, science, religion, nature study, politics, sports of all sorts indoors and out, dancing, card playing, even eugenics. Visit a new one each week; study the arts of popularity, take an interest in other people and make them see that you find them interesting.

Q. Husband bedridden with heart ailment for the past two years; thinks I should stay with him continually. I'm getting irritable, and my friends say I ought to get out once in a while; he seems to think I should be perfectly satisfied to stay home because he has to. What can I do?

A. Get his physician to order you, in his presence, to get out at least three times a week. Arrange for someone to visit him.

Q. What effect do wars have on the relations between the sexes?

A. Variable. You are probably old enough to remember that after World War I, there was a pronounced swing toward masculinity in women's dress. This did not occur after World War II—there was emphasis on femininity and increased public interest in motherhood and homemaking.

North Side's Good Neighbor

Neighborhood Association Carries on Busy Program Fighting Blight, Providing Nursery School, Varied Activities for Young and Old

By Mary Kimbrough

IN a sturdy stone building on St. Louis's near north side, once the center of a rich German culture, yesterday's echoes of old world songs and good talk have faded before the squeals and shouts of today's children.

This is Neighborhood Association, whose story threads back across the years nearly three-quarters of a century to the era of Self-Culture Hall and the North Broadway Social Settlement. In the changing neighborhood patterns of a growing city, their paths crossed and their parallel programs combined.

From this heritage came Neighborhood Association, now a 1150-member agency with an official eye to clean, wholesome streets and homes, as well as to the development of character among the boys and girls who live in those homes. Twenty-three years ago, during the depression, Neighborhood Association built Neighborhood Gardens, one of the country's first low rent housing projects. Recently, it organized the Park Place Improvement Association, a group of business and professional men, housewives and property owners, to consider ways of chasing blight from the agency's backyard.

In addition, inside the big stone building at 2930 North Twenty-first street, there is a busy, complex program going on almost continuously, serving those from two to 82—or older if they want to come. And just 60 miles away from the clogged city streets is its camp, Skullbone-in-the-Woods, offering below-cost vacations for city boys and girls.

"It's a matter of meeting the needs where we see them," said J. A. Wolf, balding, bespectacled, energetic director of the agency. "Because board members in the early days of Neighborhood Association felt it was essential for working mothers to have a place where their children could be cared for during the day, they started a nursery school. Last year, it took in $8200 in fees. We decided that young people who spend their time on city streets needed to get out in the country, so we organized our camp.

"Back in the early '30s, we found that housing—good housing—was the most serious problem facing many of our people, so we built Neighborhood Gardens. Now, we're making an intensive study of the whole area around here with the cooperation of the City Plan Commission, to see if we can't keep it from deteriorating."

In fact, it was recognition of a need that led the agency to its present quarters 13 years ago. Formally established with the combination of Self-Culture Hall and the North Broadway Social Settlement in 1911, it occupied several north side locations before moving into a building of its own at Nineteenth and Cole streets.

"But we began to feel that the need might be greater right here," said Wolf, "So we started casting around. We wanted to be sure, so first we rented a store building up the way, then we moved into a remodeled residence and our membership kept growing all the time. That's when we decided this was where we were needed."

THE Cole street property was deeded to the city which operates it as a community center. Its nursery, however, is being continued in the Pruitt Housing Project, 2328 Biddle street.

The agency's roots are planted in north St. Louis, for it was there that the Ethical Society, led by Walter L. Sheldon, established Self-Culture Hall in 1888 to furnish "opportunities for recreation and education to working men and women and to assist in neighborhood improvement." Eight years later, the Education Section of the Wednesday Club established a social center in a dingy store building at 1225 North Broadway.

Names of prominent St. Louis families are woven into the history of the two parent organizations. Mrs. W. E. Fischel for many years directed the Self-Culture Hall's homemaking department and on the agency board were Charles Nagel, George Oliver Carpenter, Hanford Crawford, I. W. Morton, Gen. John W. Noble and Dr. William Taussig.

Miss Susan Beeson was the prime power behind establishment of the Wednesday Club project and among the volunteers were Mrs. John B. Shapleigh, Mrs. George H. Shields, Mrs. W. A. Hardaway, Mrs. Frank Henderson and Mrs. Wyman Cushman. Among the younger group were four collegians who directed a boys' club: Dwight Davis, Lionberger Davis, Edmund Brown and Arthur Lovejoy.

WHEN the two agencies, after a series of moves, found themselves just two blocks apart, they decided to merge and it was in that merger that Neighborhood Association came about.

The large building, into which it moved in 1943, had once served as a community center for the German population of that area. As tangible evidence of the culture and fun it had known, the new tenants when they took over found three concert grand pianos, a handsome and valuable German library and three barrooms. The concert grands have since given way to less expensive but utilitarian uprights. Most of the German library has been disposed of. The barrooms have become offices, nurseries, playrooms, gymnasiums.

Every morning at Neighborhood Association, the doors are opened early as young mothers, on their way to work, bring their children for nursery school. This is no mere baby-sitting program. It is an accredited center, approved by the Social Planning Council, and directed by professional staff members. A fee is charged working mothers for the privilege of leaving their children there during the day.

In another part of the building in the afternoon are the older children, and at night, the teen-agers. There are crafts shops, a well-equipped kitchen for cooking classes, rooms for dancing. There is a wood-working area, clubrooms, a corner to learn millinery or beadwork or furniture repair. There's a hall with a stage for dramatics and parents' night programs. Across the street is a park where young Neighborhood Association members play ball or engage in other outdoor recreation.

Those who can afford it pay a fee and it's so low—$2 a year—that practically everyone pulls a part of his weight.

"It's a matter of pride and self-respect," said Wolf. "We think it's important for them to have the right to share the costs. Of course, that membership fee doesn't nearly meet our costs, any more than the $7.85 for a five-day vacation at camp. The difference is paid by the United Fund."

It's easy to see what a bargain people of the area are buying for their modest fee. At home there are recreational activities, a chance to meet friends, arts and crafts, clubs and dancing. At camp, boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 13 are given a balanced activity diet of swimming, sports, ceramics, copper enameling, woodcraft, nature lore, music and dancing. Girls are at camp this year from June 18 to July 9, with boys invited for week-long stays between July 16 and Aug. 6.

CAMP Skullbone-in-the-Woods was another of Neighborhood Association's pioneer moves to help its members. Like Neighborhood Gardens, it was started during the depression and has been operated continuously, except during the late '40s when major improvements were necessary.

But Wolf and his program director, Ray L. Crabdree, aren't letting themselves look so happily at the successes of the past and present that they forget the hazards of the future.

"We must keep asking ourselves, are we really needed in this neighborhood?" said Wolf. "Have industry and commerce crowded out the people? Right now the answer is no, indeed. Just the opposite is true. There is more need. During the past three years we have had an ever-increasing demand for help from the 6- to 12-year-old group. We have accepted as many as possible, but due to the lack of trained and mature leadership our program has lacked certain factors which we consider essential. It is useless to accept children unless they can be helped.

"We can't really measure what help we have been. It would be foolish to say that because we are here all the behavior problems of our young people have been erased. But we do feel that perhaps our greatest contribution to better citizenship is made through the organized clubs, classes and other groups where the youngsters learn to think for themselves and to co-operate for the common good.

"There must be a lessening of the tendency to do wrong through the simple opportunity we offer them to associate with decent people."

SENATOR SOAPER.

Experienced

Meeting the Press in Spain

By Art Buchwald

MADRID.

CARY GRANT, who is making "The Pride and The Passion" in Spain, estimates he has been interviewed 1346 times since he arrived in Europe. Having also made "To Catch a Thief," on the Riviera, he feels he has had a great deal of experience in dealing with the European press and, as a public service to the Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood, Grant is distributing, at his own expense, a form interview which can save time and money for every actor and actress coming over here to make a movie.

By switching names and countries but sticking close to the following script an actor fulfills his obligation to the publicity department as well as the press and everyone is happy.

This is the type of interview Grant warns the Hollywood star to expect.

"Senor Grant, is this your first time in Spain?"

"Si." (When answering yes or no always speak in the language of the country.)

"What are your impressions of Spain?"

"I cannot say enough about Spain."

"But how does Spain compare with other countries you have visited?"

"Why would one want to compare Spain with any other country?"

"What do you think of Frank Sinatra?"

"There is only one Frank Sinatra."

"What do you think of Sophia Loren?"

"There is only one Sophia Loren."

"WHAT WAS the best film you made?"

(At this point Grant recommends that the star plug the picture he has a piece of. If there are several he should plug them all.)

"What do you think of European women?"

"America will never be able to pay the debt it owes to European women."

"What do you think of Marilyn Monroe?"

"There is only one Marilyn Monroe."

"What do you look for first in a woman?"

"Intelligence, beauty, charm, kindness and usually I look to see if the seams of her stockings are straight."

"What does a woman look for in a man?"

"His tie. When a woman is in love with a man she is afraid to show it, so she looks at his tie. When she isn't in love with him she doesn't care to look at him so she looks at his tie."

"WHAT IS your favorite dish?"

"Paella."

(Unless you have stock in some food company, Grant recommends you mention the national dish of the country.)

"If you weren't Cary Grant, who would you like to be?"

"A brave Spanish bullfighter."

"What country has the worst movie industry?"

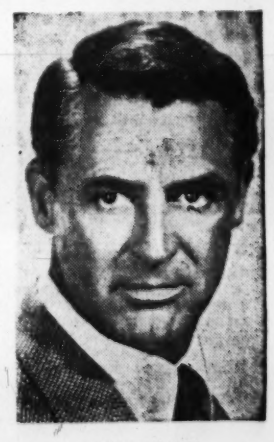

"I would not like to answer that question."

"What are your favorite books?"

"The Spanish classics."

"What is your favorite music?"

"Spanish music has always been my favorite. I am a great admirer of Manuel de Falla."

"Do you have a bad temper?"

"Only when I see a bad bullfight."

"What makes you happiest?"

"To see a good bullfight."

"WHAT IS the most moving thing you remember?"

"The first time I saw Spain from the air."

"What is your favorite animal?"

"The Spanish burro. I have always admired the strength, the tenacity and the kindness of the Spanish burro. To me he represents all the finest qualities of a beast of burden."

"What do you think of the Spanish press?"

"There is only one Spanish press."

Brahms and Faure Requiems

By Thomas B. Sherman

A PERFORMANCE of the Brahms "German Requiem" that does full justice to its tenderness and nobility of feeling has been recorded by the Choir of St. Hedwig's Cathedral in Berlin and the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra with Fritz Lehmann conducting. The soprano soloist, Maria Stader, enters deeply into the compassionate mood of her single important aria and Otto Wiener is almost equally effective. The particular distinction of this recording, however, is in the choral singing which is closely integrated, mellow in quality and beautifully sustained in executing the broad, soaring phrases. Aside from considerable surface crackle the reproduction is excellent. (Decca, Two 12-inch LPs).

MORE CHORAL: In comparison with Brahms, the Faure "Requiem" seems muted in its deliberate avoidance of dramatic emphasis. Its simple eloquence, however, can be poignantly touching as in the delicately shaded performance by L'Union Chorale de la Tour de Peilz and L'Orchetre de la Suisse Romande, conducted by Ernest Ansermet. Suzanne Danco, soprano and Gerard Souzay, baritone are the well qualified soloists. Acoustically the recording is clear and excellent in tone quality all the way through. (London, One 12-inch LP).

VIOLIN AND PIANO: Angel Records has come up with another first rank Russian virtuoso in the person of Leonid Kogan, a young violinist who has won several prize competitions in and out of Russia. Kogan has a rich, mellow and warm tone in his performances of two Brahms Sonatas — G Major, Opus 78 and A Major Opus 100 —for Violin and Piano. His phrasing, however, is a little stiff. A supple and expressive pianist, Andrei Mitnik, is his partner in this enterprise. The violin tone comes through in all its beauty. (Angel, One 12-inch LP).

CONCERTO: The now world famous Russian virtuoso, David Oistrakh, may be heard in another version of Chausson's "Poeme," and under another imprint, with the State Orchestra of the U.S.S.R. conducted by Kiril Kondrashin. As in all his records Oistrakh is magnificently secure and finished and the "Poeme" is presented with an unrelenting ardor. On the same record Ravel's "Tzigane," a technical feat of the first order, and Kabalevsky's animated Violin Concerto with the composer directing. Glazounow's "Mazurka-Oberst" for Piano and Orchestra is thrown in for good measure. (Westminster, one 12-inch LP.)

Eugene Istomin and the Philadelphia Orchestra with Eugene Ormandy conducting give a performance of Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2 in C Minor that should satisfy the many devotees of this work. Istomin makes as much as possible out of the purple passages, but even poetic license does not quite allow the striking of one hand before the other as in the portentous opening chords. The Philadelphia Orchestra sounds as lush as ever. (Columbia, one 12-inch LP.)

The best of recent recordings by Yehudi Menuhin has this violinist teamed with the Philharmonic Orchestra of London, John Pritchard conducting, in Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 in D Major and No. 5 in A Major. Brilliance of tone and excellent control are prevalent in both concertos; and through these both the soloist and the orchestra disclose faithfully a sunny exuberance and grace that by some miracle seem both youthful and mature. (RCA-Victor, one 12-inch LP.)

ORCHESTRAL: Two provocative American works — "The Minotaur" by Elliot Carter and "Tabuh - Tabuhan" by Colin McPhee — are handsomely played by the Eastman-Rochester Orchestra with Howard Hanson conducting. "The Minotaur" is a ballet score which comes off unusually well even when detached from the stage action. Strong rhythms, vivid coloring and an interesting melodic content give it an arresting impact. McPhee's work — a toccata for orchestra — undertakes successfully to combine the Western idiom with that of Balinese music. An imitation of the gamelan orchestra, produced by the standard percussion instruments, is worked into the texture; and a quaintly beautiful Balinese flute melody which the composer uses intact makes up the substance of the slow movement. Reproduction is first rate. (Mercury, One 12-inch LP.)

PIANO: Under the title of "The Unabashed Virtuso" the pianist Stephen Kovacs offers a program which permits some fancy finger work—good but not exceptional—in executing some fancy music — exceptional but not good. The list of works performed includes Liszt's "La Campanella," "Rigoletto" paraphrase and Hungarian Rhpasody No. 2 (Elektra, One 12-inch LP.)

BEST SELLERS: Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2, see review above; Tschaikowsky's "Swan Lake," complete, played by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra with Antal Dorati, conducting. (Mercury, Three 12-inch LPs in album.)

Municipal Opera to Have 'Hit the Deck'

PRINCIPALS FOR MUNICIPAL OPERA'S FOURTH PRODUCTION OF VINCENT YOUMANS'S MUSICAL COMEDY, "HIT THE DECK," WHICH OPENS TOMORROW NIGHT. FROM LEFT, HORACE McMAHON AS BAT, LOU WILLS JR. AS JUNIOR, BETTY KEAN AS LAVINIA, AND MARK DAWSON AS BILGE SMITH.

"HIT THE DECK," the 1927 musical comedy by composer Vincent Youmans, will open tomorrow night at Municipal Opera as the fourth attraction of the season.

The revised book, used before at the Forest Park theater in 1942, 1944 and 1948 will be used. The original book by Herbert Fields has two acts rewritten. Looloo, the girl owner of a Newport coffee-house, has a yen for a sailor named Bilge Smith, and pursues him all over the world on a freighter she buys. The China setting in one act is changed to a Central American dive. The settings include the deck of a battleship, and that of a yacht in the South Seas. Lavinia, originally a Negro mammy, is now a white comedienne.

As in 1948, when only four of the 13 numbers used were from the original show, there will be interpolations from other shows. All will be Youmans's songs, however. The two big original hits, "Hallelujah," and "Sometimes I'm Happy" will be used along with four other originals. Others added will be "Time on My Hands," from "Smiles," Anchors Aweigh," and "Through the Years," from the show of the same name.

Dancing comedienne Betty Kean tops the cast as Lavinia. A member with Jane Kean of a famous sister act which for the past five years has starred in night clubs and on TV, they were starred last year in the controversial Broadway musical "Ankles Aweigh," in which Walter Winchell and other columnists battled to offset the negative verdict of the critics.

Mark Dawson, baritone who played Frank Butler in this season's opening show, "Annie Get Your Gun," will be Bilge. Paula Stewart, the Kathie of the current "The Student Prince," will be Looloo.

Horace McMahon, character actor who played in more than 100 movies, will be Bilge's sidekick, Bat. McMahon may be best remembered for his role of the lieutenant in "Detective Story" on stage and screen. His other recent pictures have been "Blackboard Jungle," "My Sister Eileen" and "Susan Slept Here."

Lou Wills, Jr., comedian who made his Broadway debut at the age of 14 in "Best Foot Forward," and has also played in "One Touch of Venus," "Are You With It," "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," and "Make Mine Manhattan," will be Junior.

Some familiar faces in the cast will be Oliver Cliff as Lt. Clarke, Susan Shaute as Charlotte Payne, Emile Renan as Sloppy Robert, Camila Ashland as Rita, Robert Cosden as Matt, Ruth Schumacher as Toddy Gale, Joseph Cusanelli as the Chief Petty Officer, Roy Urhausen as Bunny, Vince Vernon as Donkey, and Gene Varonne as Dinty.

M'Kay and Charles will be specialty dancers. They are actually Mary Martinet who appeared in "Brigadoon" and "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on Broadway, and Charles Basile, former ice-skater with Sonja Henie.

The final performance of Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "The Student Prince," will be given at 8:30 o'clock tonight. Jim Hawthorne, Miss Stewart and Edwin Steffe are featured.

GINA LOLLOBRIGIDA AND BURT LANCASTER IN THE CIRCUS DRAMA, "TRAPEZE," IN CINEMASCOPE AT LOEW'S STATE.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

TRAPEZE—Director Carol Reed, shooting at the musty old Cirque D'Hiver in Paris, has captured completely the circus atmosphere, filling his wide CinemaScope screen with tumultuous, teeming action and gaudy color. The elemental triangle among an aerialist team on which he focuses is completely absorbing. Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis and Gina Lollobrigida, as the disturbing member of the trio, are nicely cast. The trapeze shots and all of Robert Krasker's other camera work are thrilling. LOEW'S STATE.

THAT CERTAIN FEELING—Bob Hope continues his change of pace with an adaptation of the Broadway comedy, "The King of Hearts" by Producer-Director-Writers Panama and Frank, about a mousy assistant to a comic strip star. Unfortunately it's weak until the final wild farcical climax. But Eva Marie Saint is enchanting and the VistaVision is perfect. ST. LOUIS.

THE CREATURE WALKS AMONG US—Universal's Gill Man is back for his third epic, and, believe me, it's enough. With Jeff Morrow as the scientist. MISSOURI.

THE YEARLING and THE WIZARD OF OZ—A really fine reissue program. The first is the tender and affecting story of a boy in the Florida backwoods, with Gregory Peck and Jane Wyman. The second is the classic fantasy with Judy Garland at her peak, plus Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley. ORPHEUM.

MARTY and SUMMERTIME—Another really good reissue bill. Ernest Borgnine in his Oscar-winning role as the homely Bronx butcher who finds a sweetheart, is starred in the first. Katharine Hepburn is a lonely spinster who finds love and wisdom in a beautifully photographed Venice in the second. RICHMOND.

MISTER ROBERTS and REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE—Another reissue double bill in a rash of reissues. The first is the famous comedy about life on a worn out naval freighter, with Henry Fonda. Funny, although not quite as hilarious as the stage show. The second makes heroes of some well-to-do high school delinquents. With the late James Dean in a jittery performance. FOX.

THE ANIMAL WORLD—Some interesting shots of marine life, dinosaur fights (staged with puppets, of course), and African animals, but as a history of animal life from its inception it has gaping holes, neatly sidestepping evolution, the heart of the matter, among other things. PAGEANT.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD—In spite of the Cinerama depth process and air shots, this is still mostly a pedestrian travelogue. AMBASSADOR.

Malcolm Frager Little Symphony Piano Soloist

THE third Little Symphony concert of the season will be given at 8:45 p.m. Friday in the Washington University Quadrangle, with Malcolm Frager, 21-year-old St. Louis pianist, as soloist, and Jascha Horenstein conducting.

Frager will play Mozart's Piano Concerto in B Flat, K. 595. He began studying music at the age of 4 years, made his first public appearance at 6, and was soloist with the Little Symphony at the age of 10. When 14 he went to New York to study under the late Carl Friedberg, who had been a pupil of Clara Schumann and Johannes Brahms. He made his Town Hall debut in New York in 1952 at the age of 17. In the same year he received the Prix d'Excellence at the Conservatoire of Fontainebleau. He received a prize this year at the International Music Competition in Geneva, and appeared as soloist with orchestras in France, Switzerland and Germany. He is now a junior at Columbia University.

The all-orchestral pieces will be Haydn's "Military" Symphony No. 100, Beethoven's German Dances, and Simple Symphony for Strings by Britten.

'The Drunkard' in Twenty-fourth Year

LOS ANGELES, June 30—"The Drunkard," the melodrama first produced in Boston in 1843, will next Friday start upon its twenty-fourth year of continuous playing at the Theater Mart here. The occasion will mark the 8456th performance, far outstripping "Life With Father," holder of the New York record with 3218 performances.

Since 1953, a musical version of the melodrama with the same script and flavor, with original music by Lorne Huycke and lyrics by Bill Howe added, and called "The Wayward Way," has been alternating with the dramatic version. Close to 3,000,000 persons have seen the show, it is claimed.

Add a can of minced clams (including the juice) to a thick potato soup. Mix in the clams just before serving and heat without boiling. Sprinkle with minced chives or parsley before serving.

'Paisan' Reshowing

The 1948 Italian film, "Paisan," directed by Roberto Rossellini, in English, Italian and German, will be shown in the Y.M.H.A. summer film festival Wednesday evening, July 11. There are six episodes about the Allied invasion of Italy.

Highlands Act

Forest Park Highlands this week will feature Patine and Rosa, a novelty acrobatic act, on its outdoor stage. The act includes fast tumbling, head stands, a daring head-slide by Patine down a narrow incline, and Rosa's Spanish web stunt. Frank Miller's orchestra also is featured on the outdoor stage in free band concerts.

Dead Men Do Tell Tales—in Film Biographies

HOLLYWOOD, June 30 (UP). DIRECTOR WILLIAM DIETERLE says he can't go along with eighteenth century author John Dryden who coined the phrase "dead men tell no tales." He's made a career of bringing their stories to the screen.

Maker of such bell-ringers as "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," Dieterle figures dead men tell better tales than live fiction writers.

The Zola picture won an Oscar for best movie of 1937, and Paul Muni copped best actor award for "Pasteur" in 1936.

Dieterle is at it again. He recently filmed "Magic Fire"—a biopic of composer Richard Wagner—in Germany, and now is busy on Paramount's "Loves of Omar Khayyam."

"My theory of telling real life stories is not a cradle-to-grave epic," he said. "I take the most dramatic or revealing part of a great person's life and magnify it.

"I believe every man who ever lived has a dramatic element in his life that would make a great or important story. At one time or other each human being faces up to at least one moment of great drama.

"Some day I will take such a story from the life of a man who was not famous. That has been in my mind for many years."

Dieterle, director of 75 movies in 25 years, is a vanishing member of the movie director prototype. A huge man (6 feet, 4 inches tall) with a flamboyant air, he epitomizes the old-time director complete to battered felt hat, white gloves, foreign accent (German) and knotted silk scarf.

BEFORE EMBARKING on his career of biographical flickers, he set some Hollywood standards with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Devil and Daniel Webster."

Numbered among his top biographies are the lives of Florence Nightingale, President Andrew Johnson and Juarez.

"The trend toward biographies and reality is here to stay," he explained. "Look at magazines. Ten years ago they ran fiction and short stories two to one over articles. Now it's just the reverse.

"The same is true of book stores. Novels can't compete with non-fiction. Actual happenings are more entertaining and informative.

"But this is not just my idea," Dieterle grinned. "The public shows its preference at the box office for pictures like 'Alexander the Great,' 'A Man Called Peter,' 'I'll Cry Tomorrow' and others.

"That's why my next picture will be the life of John Paul Jones, father of the American navy. I say dead men tell the best stories ever told."

This Week in Radio

Independence Day Observance Slated

IN observance of Independence day, KSD at 9:30 Wednesday night will carry a special NBC musical program devoted to Randall Thompson's composition, "Testament of Freedom." The work, a setting of four passages from the writings of Thomas Jefferson, will be performed by the Eastman - Rochester Symphony Orchestra and Chorus under the direction of Howard Hanson.

LEONARD WARREN... GUEST OF VOORHEES ORCHESTRA ON KSD AT 8 TOMORROW NIGHT.

Victor Young will conduct the second of two broadcasts on "The Best in Music" on KMOX at 6:30 this evening. He will feature some of his own compositions and a medley of songs by George M. Cohan. Guests will be singers Fran Warren, Richard Hayes, Lois Hunt and Earl Wrightson.

A new series, "The Story of Birth," on NBC's "Weekday" program, will be heard on KSD at 10:35 each morning, Monday through Friday, beginning tomorrow. "Weekday" features "Ask Weekday," "Family Forum" and "Helen Hayes and Her Stories" will be heard between 2 and 2:45 each afternoon.

"The Eternal Joan," a study of contrasting ways in which writers in the past 200 years have portrayed Joan of Arc, will be heard on "Radio Workshop" on KMOX at 12:30 this afternoon.

Program Changes

Program changes on St. Louis radio stations this week: KSD will carry the serial, "Doctor's Wife" at 2:45 p.m. weekdays and "Woman in My House" at 3. Another "Carl McIntire Show" segment will be added from 3:15 to 5 p.m. On KMOX, "Aunt Jenny" will be heard at 12:15, "Right to Happiness" at 1:05, "Second Mrs. Burton" at 1:15 and "Just Entertainment with Pat Buttram, at 1:45. KMOX will add a Bill Downs newscast at 1 p.m., Monday through Friday. A new disc jockey show, featuring Bill Crable, will be heard on KXOK from 8:05 to 10 p.m. Mondays, 7:30 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, and from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Saturdays.

Religious singing at Grandfather Mountain, N.C., will be heard on "Monitor" on KSD at 10:05 this morning. At 7:05 tonight, there will be an interview with Betty Ford, American bull fighter, in Mexico.

A talk by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. of Missouri will be heard on KWK at 10:15 tonight.

Week's Concerts

The second broadcast from the Ojai Festival in California will be heard on "World Music Festivals" on KMOX at 10:35 this evening. Italo-Hungarian soprano Magda Laszlo will be the soloist.

Baritone Leonard Warren will be the soloist when the Donald Voorhees orchestra salutes Independence day on KSD at 8 tomorrow night. Warren will sing Mana-Zucca's "I Love Life" and Ball's "Love Me and the World is Mine."

Dramatic soprano Rose Bampton and tenor Eugene Conley will appear on the Howard Barlow broadcast on KXOK at 7:30 tomorrow night. They will sing one duet, "Home to Our Mountains" from Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

KSD at 8:30 tomorrow night will broadcast another transcription of the series of concerts by the Washington University Little Symphony.

Public Affairs Discussions

The Yugoslav ambassador to the United States, Leo Mates, will be the guest on "Meet the Press" on KSD at 5:35 this afternoon. Other public affairs programs on radio this week:

TV's Father of the Year

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, June 30.

ROBERT YOUNG of "Father Knows Best" has been selected National Television Father of the Year, a title which entitles him—with the payment of only a trifling 15 cents—to ride the subway all the way to the end of the line.

Still, this year it was a tough race and the National Father's Day Committee, after wrestling with its judgment and its conscience, came up with a sound choice. Ozzie Nelson has charm. Leon Ames ("Life with Father") has a certain Victorian nostalgia. Danny Thomas has personality plus a whole bag of show business tricks.

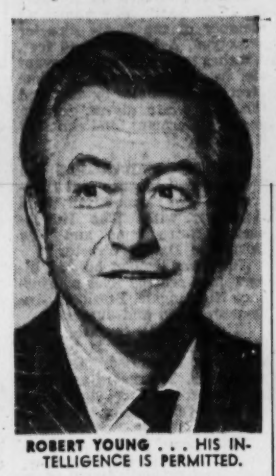

But Young has most of the above qualities, plus intelligence. In fact, Young may be the first intelligent father permitted on either radio or television since they invented the thing. Radio and TV fathers have been permitted to possess charm, sweetness, character, integrity, courage, fortitude and infinite patience—but never intelligence. In the intelligence department, they have always been stumble bums with the little woman of the house getting them out of one scrape after another.

YOUNG FREQUENTLY does the thinking in his own house. He is, in short, a father's father. He's the kind of guy you like to think you are in your own home — witty, tolerant, wise and greatly beloved and respected by all the other members of the household. It's quite possible Young has already elevated the standards of fatherhood all over the nation, and fathers everywhere are being witty, tolerant and all other things out of simple admiration. Even Bill Bendix might have learned—well, no, not Bendix.

"Father Knows Best," (KSD-TV Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m.) is in the best sense of the word, a wholesome show. Now, wholesome is one of those words that is largely suspect when applied to a television show. When you have a show that doesn't offend the Catholics, the Protestants or the Jews (and doesn't, on the other hand, interest any of them either), when a program is referred to as "for the whole family," because it drives the whole household to the movies (thereby restoring family unity), then it is considered a wholesome show.

"Father Knows Best" has restored wholesomeness to its former high estate. The problems Young deals with concerning his three children—two of them teen-agers and one a girl of about 8—are hilarious but entirely probable. In fact, you have probably dealt with the same problems with your own brood, though conceivably not as deftly.

ROBERT YOUNG . . . HIS INTELLIGENCE IS PERMITTED.

A recent typical example was about his teen-age boy applying for his first job. In his job application the lad tells quite a few fibs and gets a sharp lecture from father about honesty. Consequently, another boy, who is not nearly so scrupulous, gets the job and Young's son is thoroughly disillusioned, at least temporarily, in honesty as a practical working policy. However, he is won over to honesty in the end. Now, to make so simple a homily funny, human and touching is quite a task in practical showmanship and the writers did their best.

IN EACH SITUATION, the writers take the gag just so far and then pull up short before it lapses into absurdity. Young, an old pro, is that kind of actor; he knows all the tricks but he also knows when to stop pulling them and play it for real. The three kids, played by Lauren Chapin, Billy Gray and Elinor Donahue, are as attractive as any you will find in show business or anywhere else. Also they are very good at acting.

And, of course, Jane Wyatt as the mother is no small asset either. Beautiful, kindly, witty, and efficient, she's a girl any guy would be proud to claim as his mother. Or, if that position isn't open, any other vacancy in her affections would do just fine, too.

10 Years of Arguing

They're Friendless Because of Husband

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I'VE been married 10 years. Our first trouble came just three weeks after our wedding and there have never been three weeks since without a violent argument. We've tried to talk things out but it always ends the same way.

We both read all we can find to help solve our problem. I am 33 and my husband is 43. For months at a time the only people I talk to are clerks where I shop. We have no children, no friends, no neighbors and we lock the doors and hide from relatives. My husband says relatives only want favors. He doesn't like friends because his best friend stole his first wife. He doesn't like neighbors because he says they're gossips. I'm not allowed to join any clubs because he used to go out with a married woman who used her club as an excuse to go and therefore he says all women do the same. At 33 I'm as gray as my mother, who reared four children alone. My husband hates everyone and thinks I should, too, but so far I have never seen a person I didn't like. Will this ever change? NOBODY.

With both of you recognizing that there is a real problem and reading all you can in search of a solution, I don't see why things wouldn't change. But all the talking and reading in the world won't help unless you actually try to apply it to your own situation. If your husband is willing to look at the problem objectively, there is hope. He must, however, change his attitude so that he won't be afraid everyone is out to cheat him or hurt him or pry into his affairs. It's natural for a person who has been victimized by a so-called "good friend" to shy away from trusting anyone else, but you and he just can't live in an isolated ivory tower the rest of your lives. And why blame women's clubs just because one woman used that as an excuse to get away from home and meet him? Why was he seeing a married woman anyway? Perhaps he'd better turn the spotlight on himself before assuming everyone else is in the wrong. Put those theories into practice. The next time you start to talk something out, make up your mind that it won't end in a violent quarrel. He can't argue if you won't argue back. Make sure you keep your own temper in check and at least that particular problem will be solved. See if he won't go with you to a professional counselor. If he really wants a good marriage he should be willing to go a step beyond those books and seek personal help.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 14 and very desperate. I have a boy friend I like very much. My father always runs all my boy friends off. My mother allows me to date if the boys come to my home, but when they do my father curses them and runs them off. My mother says for me to have them meet me away from the house so my father won't insult them. Should I do as she says if I want to keep on dating boys? JOYCE.

It's far better, of course, for your date to pick you up at home and bring you to your door than to meet him somewhere else, but even more important in this case is the matter of having to deceive or appease your father. It seems to me that your mother should insist on his treating the boys with courtesy rather than accepting his bad temper and encouraging you to avoid it by meeting your dates away from home. They should agree on what is best for you. Perhaps your father has good reason for objecting to certain of the boys—although running them away isn't the answer—but even as young as you are you can try to point out to both parents that you want to go with the right kind of boys, that you want them to call for you as a matter of courtesy and you feel you should have their help. If your father doesn't like a particular boy, find out why and listen carefully. He could be right. I realize I haven't given you a direct answer to your question but that's hard to do under the circumstances. Your mother may have tried to reason with your father and, failing that, suggested this other as the only alternative. She must use her best judgment in doing what is right for you.

Dear Martha:

● I AM A WOMAN 26 years old with a son 15 months old. My husband and I have been married for two years and have been together just nine months of that time. He drinks a lot, spends his money on other women and never stays home. Seven months ago he was involved in a hit-and-run accident and was in jail for six months. I have been staying with my parents. He is out now and is living alone and working. He asked for another chance for the sake of our son. He says he still loves me but I don't know whether to believe him or not because of the past. I can't forget that he kicked our son and me out of the house. I don't believe in divorce but what can I do? He doesn't get along with my parents. I have never gone out with anyone else. My parents have been supporting our son and me and I don't think that's right. I offered to get a job to help out but my husband refused. He acts like a child. Martha, please help me. I still love him but not as much as on our wedding day. DESPERATE.

If he's sincere in asking for a second chance, maybe you can make a go of your marriage, even though he apparently hasn't thought enough of his family up to this time to act like a responsible human being. It must be your decision whether or not to go back, but if you do, have a thorough understanding in advance that you are not willing to stand for a repetition of his drinking and running around and his complete lack of concern for his wife and son. Professional counseling will help you decide what will be best. Ask him to go with you, as proof that he really means what he says.

Dear Martha:

● THIS CONCERNS a neighbor of mine who comes into my place with her son, a little fellow who is just starting to walk. He is a wonderful child but when he touches little things standing around his mother hits him so hard it isn't funny. She has a terrible temper. Is there something I can do? READER.

You can stand up for him without appearing to interfere too much with her ideas of discipline—although it would be a good idea if some would tell her the difference between correction and downright abuse. Tell her that he isn't harming anything and ask her to let him play as he wishes, as long as he isn't destructive. Perhaps with that, you can lead into a discussion of how children should be treated. One of these days the boy will start hitting back and then she will have real trouble on her hands.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

Prints Are Cool and Fashionable for Summer

Sheath Dress With Bolero Jacket Is a Favorite Theme—Velvet Accents Provide a Hint of Autumn

By Sylvia Stiles

IF SUMMER in St. Louis is proving disastrous for an early-purchased hot-weather wardrobe, invest in a new printed dress and look both cool and fashionable throughout July and August. Although the printed vogue has been with us since the springtime, some of the prettiest costumes available in the stores are made of patterned materials.

The majority of these midsummer dresses combine black and white, but there are other color alliances equally attractive. Brown and white, for example, is considered very smart this season while brown with turquoise and combinations of brown and green are refreshing. Multicolored floral designs in cool color schemes are also gay additions to the wardrobe. There is a revival, too, of tricolor patterns especially in striped effects. Emerald green, royal blue, and a golden shade blend together well as do dark red, copper and olive green mixtures.

The dress that serves a multiple of purposes and is equally as satisfactory for a vacation wardrobe as it is for wear in St. Louis has its matching jacket. Favorite theme of the summer—and still available at moderate prices—is the sheath with a bolero jacket. Modification of the slender lines is noted in a slight swing at the back of the skirt, or in the panels that hide deep pleats that flare below the knees and provide flattering fullness at the hemline.

It is difficult to determine this summer the actual content of the fibers of these printed fashions. Pure silks are plentiful, and unusual interest has been shown in tie-printed surah and in silk broadcloth. The broadcloth is striking in the two- and three-tone striped patterns as well as the plain colors. The popularity of stripes is increasing, many of the advance fall fabrics featuring the stripes that range from fine lines to blazer boldness. Paris stressed striped and ribbed effects so extensively in the last collections that the American fabric market has given them varied interpretations.

In choosing a material for wear throughout late summer, the shopper need not hesitate to be gay in her color scheme. A dashing theme, achieved by the use of black with white, or a blending of several unusual shades, is in keeping with the general trend of fashions. Vibrant shades are scheduled for general popularity during the fall. Red, for example, is a strong contender for top honors. It looks arresting for summer in dotted patterns of silk broadcloth and in all-over floral designs on voile or chiffon. Blues that range from a true, bright medium tone to sapphire also are forerunners of the autumn season. Prints that combine the clear blues with black are distinctive and suitable for wear during any season.

Both the slim and the softly pleated skirts are liked in the printed fabrics. Many of the dresses in the mid-season collections have wrapped and rising waistlines, regardless of the silhouette of the skirt. The shirtwaist dress is new-looking with its bloused back, gently rolling collar, and skirt that has soft gathers or unpressed pleats at the waistline.

A hint of autumn is noted in the general use of velvet accents for printed costumes. Jackets have velvet collars. A velvet bow adorns the low neckline of a dress, or there may be a velvet band outlining the entire decolletage. High waistlines are circled with narrow velvet ribbon tied with long streamer ends at the back. One full-skirted dress that has the Empire silhouette has rows of very narrow ribbon trimming the fitted midriff.

Daytime dresses made of summer prints look most flattering when a wide-brimmed hat is worn. Black velvet cartwheels and wide-brimmed sailors are appearing in the stores. The black Milan hat with drooping brim is a perennial favorite, and especially popular this year when the larger millinery styles are fashionable. Open pumps or sandals made of black patent leather or the various plastic materials and sleek bags to harmonize complete a midsummer costume suitable for many occasions.

BLACK AND WHITE, TRADITIONALLY OUTSTANDING FOR SUMMER, IS PATTERNED IN A WINDOW PANE DESIGN FOR A ONE-PIECE DRESS. SEMI-FULL SKIRT HAS FLAT, UNPRESSED PLEATS.

A VERSATILE THREE-PIECE OUTFIT BY ADELE SIMPSON ILLUSTRATES THE POPULARITY OF PRINTED FABRICS. THIS MODEL IS OF BROWN AND WHITE CHECKED COTTON.

A WATER-COLOR PRINT MADE OF SHEER DACRON AND COTTON IS USED FOR THIS DRESS WITH SUNBURST-PLEATED SKIRT.

A MANY-PURPOSE DRESS OF BLACK AND WHITE COTTON BY BRANELL HAS A BRIEF BOLERO LINED IN BLACK. SLIM DRESS HAS BLACK SILK ORGANZA TOP EDGED WITH BLACK VELVET. LARGE HAT IS BY EMME.

Simple White Dress

The simple white dress that may be laundered easily is one of the popular fashions this summer. Pique and eyelet embroidered cotton are two materials used extensively. Dresses that have comparatively full skirts and that button from neckline to hemline are examples of the trend. Many of the dresses are accented with black. A black patent leather belt, for example, suggests the addition of black patent bag and shoes.

Some Factors In Furnishing Living Room

By Dorothy Brainerd

MRS. M.C.L. asks a question which, frankly, we think she would be unhappy if we answered. As a matter of fact, we don't think that any one should attempt to answer it for her, and believe that she will agree when she thinks it over a bit.

Mrs. L. tells us that she is moving into another house, and sends along a diagram of the living room with doors, windows, and fireplace sketched in place. She writes that she is considering buying sectional furniture and asks, "Will you please tell me just what pieces I will need, and where they should be placed in the room?"

We are more than willing, Mrs. L., but not able to answer that request, and it is our firm conviction that no one should without knowing a great many facts about you and your family.

Do you intend to use any pieces at all that you now own? Do you entertain frequently, or live quietly? Do you play cards often? Will you want to eat in front of that fireplace on dreary winter evenings? (We hope so.) Do you own, or intend to buy, a TV set which will be placed in the room? A piano? Have you many books that will require a book shelf, or many book shelves? How many members are there in your family? How many customarily sit in the living room at one time?

The answers to each and every one of those questions have a direct bearing upon what pieces you should buy, and how they should be arranged.

If you intend to eat in front of fireplace, you will want a king-size coffee table. The location of the TV set will affect the arrangement of other furniture. If you play cards or games regularly and the room is large enough, you may want to have a table which is left in place permanently. If you entertain large groups regularly, you must consider how many persons can be seated in the room and where you can place additional chairs brought in from the dining or recreation room.

Before you buy one single piece of furniture you will be wise to think through these questions, Mrs. L., and keep the answers firmly in mind when you go shopping.

We realize that this answer is disappointing to you, and we are sorry—but we would rather risk your temporary irritation with us than to give you an answer which might influence you to invest in furniture which you would find was not suited to your way of life.

EVERY MOTHER of a teenager will sympathize with Mrs. H. F., who writes: "My daughter got some bubble gum on her pajamas. Can you tell me how to remove it?"

Try rubbing it with ice, then scrape and rub the hardened gum out of the cloth. If this doesn't work, soften the gum stain with egg white, and then wash the garment. If all else fails, soak the stain in a commercial cleaning fluid, then wash in warm, soapy water.

FROM ALTON, ILL., Mrs. W. W. sends us this note: "I have a solution for the reader who couldn't get the wrinkles out of her nylon curtains. I had the same trouble with my nylon panels. Now I wash them and hang them up without wringing them and when they dry I take them down, sprinkle them, roll them up and put them in the refrigerator for an hour or so. That cool dampness does the trick. Then I press them double lengthwise several times, and it really works. Good luck to Mrs. B. H. with my solution."

Thanks, Mrs. W. It is a little ironic to have to go through all of this with a fabric which is claimed to need little or no ironing. But judging from the letters which reach this desk it sometimes is necessary, especially if the curtains have been spun dry so vigorously that wrinkles have "set" in them. We are sure that many homemakers will be trying Mrs. W.'s suggestion.

MRS. M. W. has an aluminum pan which has had hard water boiled in it until there is a white encrustation on the bottom. She has tried some pretty drastic remedies, but hasn't effected a cure.

Of course the condition may be so severe that it is beyond redemption, but if the pan hasn't been neglected too long this should work. And two tablespoons of cream of tartar to each quart of water that it takes to fill the pan. Boil this solution in the utensil for five to eight minutes. This should remove the discoloration, but it probably will leave the pan dull. So to restore its brightness, shine the inside with a steel wool pad.

"MOLLY K." wants to know how to make the flake rolls and soft hamburger buns which she purchases in the bakeries, but for which she has been unable to find the recipes.

We have them for you, Molly, but they are too lengthy to print in this column. Send along a stamped, self-addressed envelope and they are yours — courtesy of the Wheat Flour Institute which furnished them to us with the notation, "These are not bakery formulas. They are our own recipes, developed for household use."

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Clutch Bags

Clutch bags made of linen or of colorful cottons are attractive additions to the summer wardrobe. Many of these bags are washable. A favorite style is made like a fold-over envelope so that it may be expanded if additional space is required.

'Li'l Abner' to Be A Stage Musical

NEW YORK, June 30—Norman Panama, Melvin Frank and Michael Kidd have joined forces to present an original musical comedy for the Broadway stage entitled "Li'l Abner," based on the characters created by Al Capp.

"Li'l Abner" will have a book by Panama and Frank. Kidd will attend to the direction as well as the choreography. The lyrics are by Johnny Mercer and the music by Gene dePaul. Rehearsals are scheduled to get underway in August with the New York premiere scheduled for late October. The producers intend to film the musical following its New York engagement and subsequent road tour.

"Li'l Abner" represents the first Broadway venture for Panama and Frank, screen producers, writers and directors. Their most recent film is "That Certain feeling," starring Bob Hope and Eva Marie Saint. They also wrote, produced and directed the Danny Kaye movies "The Court Jester" and "Knock on Wood."

On Chase Roof

MONIQUE VAN VOOREN, BELGIAN VOCALIST, OPENS AT THE STARLIGHT ROOF FRIDAY.

The Night Spots

STARLIGHT ROOF—Monique Van Vooren, tall, blond and beautiful Belgian songstress, opens Friday with her repertory of half-French, half-English songs. Her delivery is gay, gamin-like, but also subtle. She has played New York's St. Regis Maisonette and Las Vegas's Thunderbird. Chico-Relli's orchestra will back the show. Arthur Ellen, "the $100,000 hypnotist" remains through Thursday.

ZODIAC—Sid Tomack, movie and TV comedian, will reopen this Chase spot July 13 for four weeks.

GOURMET ROOM—The Jack Denett Trio plays dinner music.

MERRY-GO ROUND—The Jack Denett Trio for dancing.

STEEPLECHASE TERRACE—Bobby Swain's music. Chico-Relli's orchestra from 5 to 7 o'clock Thursdays and Fridays. Harry Fender's broadcast interviews.

STATLER LOUNGE—Art Edinger at the piano and organ.

TOWN AND COUNTRY—The Inkspots, featuring Deek Watson, open tomorrow night.

TIC TOC TAP—The Cardinale Trio offers progressive jazz. Sammy Gardner thumps out Dixieland on Saturday matinees.

FOREST PARK HIGHLANDS—Buddy Kay's orchestra Friday, Saturday and next Sunday in the ballroom.

STEAMER ADMIRAL—Johnny Polzin's orchestra for the night and Saturday matinee cruises. Hal Havird's band for the day trips.

SPORTSMEN'S INN—Lovely Beverly Paradise with songs and chatter at the piano.

ROSE AND CROWN—The Del Staton Trio.

CRYSTAL PALACE—Tommy Wolf at the piano.

MURAL ROOM—The Joe Huls Trio.

RENDEZVOUS—Dick Balsano at the piano bar and organ.

CLARIDGE LOUNGE—Dave "Nose" Bold, the bright boy at the piano.

STARDUST ROOM—Carmen LeFave's Trio.

CROWN ROOM—Ernie Young's orchestra, with vocals by Pat Sherry and Ken Barry.

THE EMBERS—Three Men and a Maid.

PETIT PIGALLE—Joe Bakalor's violin makes mood music along with Pete Flander's piano.

WINDERMERE LOUNGE—Sammy Gardner and his Mound City Six belt out Dixieland.

OPERA LOUNGE—The Original Three.

SORRENTO'S—The Rudy Schulz and Paul Stanis duo.

KEY ROOM—Barney Green at the piano.

WALNUT ROOM—Joe Wray at the piano, Maureen McCormick at the organ.

PEACOCK ALLEY—Lurlean Hunter, jazz contralto, and the Al Belletto Sextet.

Wendy Hiller Cast in 'Somethiing of Value'

HOLLYWOOD, June 30—Wendy Hiller, the English actress who played the Cockney flower girl in the memorable, "Pygmalion," will end her retirement to play a starring role as the wife of an African farmer in Metro's "Something Of Value." Miss Hiller's last films were "Pygmalion" and "Major Barbara." "Something Of Value" is Robert Rourkes's fictional version of the Mau Mau terrorism in Kenya.

'New Faces' a Bright, Breezy Group of Finds

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 30.

QUITE early in the new "New Faces," which opened at the Barrymore recently, there's one of those picture-frame numbers, in which a resplendent lady stands at the head of an insanely tilting table surveying the perfect world that is hers. First thing you know, though, things are slipping away on her: the wineglass out of her hand, the food right off the table, the musician at her elbow smack through the floor.

On the whole, I felt more or less as the lady did about Leonard Sillman's entry for 1956. The world that surrounds some 18 or 19 smiling young performers is just about perfect. Designer Peter Larkin has shown his hand—and handsomely.

And the bright, breezy, emphatically commanding company that inhabits so much casual splendor has a perfect right to be confident. They're authentic professionals, every last one of them. I never really expected to be regaled by a first-rate female impersonator again, but a fellow named T. C. Jones has caught the precise mesh of Tallulah Bankhead's teeth, tongue and collapsible cheeks, and the results are spectacularly funny.

There are other enormously secure vaudevillians. Billie Hayes, for instances, is a diminutive powerhouse with a sort of platinum blonde crewcut. She has the uninhibited freshness of a real find.

JANE CONNELL, another blonde with a bulldog enthusiasm, is sometimes forced to bash away at her material to make it stand up and fight. But I'd say she has the stamina to do it.

Virginia Martin may have the loudest voice yet heard outside a ball park and she makes a jest called "Talent" seem winning indeed. Suzanne Bernard is a lovely gamin in a sidewalk cafe bit, and John Reardon, Johnny Haymer, Jimmy Sisco and Ann Henry are a few of the others who asserted their coming-of-age.

If things do seem to slip away before "New Faces" is done with its cavorting, it may be because there are so many eager claimants to a share in the spoils that no one of them ever quite breaks through into star focus. I suspect further that the sketches and lyrics just aren't firm enough to anchor all this good will snugly in harbor.

As a quick survey of the latest Broadway crop, "New Faces of 1956" is encouraging. It's the old hands behind the typewriters that keep pulling the rug out from under—just a little too often.

Gregory Peck to Play a Criminal

HOLLYWOOD, June 30—Melville Productions, the independent film company owned by Gregory Peck and Sy Bartlett, has chosen "Thieves' Market" as its first film to be released through United Artists.

The Liam O'Brian-Vincent Evans original suspense drama will be one of two Melville productions that United Artists will distribute under an agreement signed last February.

In the story of romantic international intrigue, Peck will play a criminal. Fay and Michael Kanin will write the scenario to take advantage of Spanish sites where the film will be photographed next fall.

Fred Zinnemann Quits 'Old Man and the Sea'

HOLLYWOOD, June 30—Warner Bros. confirmed that Fred Zinnemann had withdrawn as director of "The Old Man and the Sea" following "a difference of opinion over concepts of physical completion of the picture." The adaptation of the Ernest Hemingway story is nearing the end of its location work in the Cuba area. The studio added that Spencer Tracy, who plays "The Old Man," had completed his role and was returning to Hollywood. There was no indication who would be appointed to finish the joint Leland Hayward-Warner Bros. production.

Tony Curtis in Suspense Picture

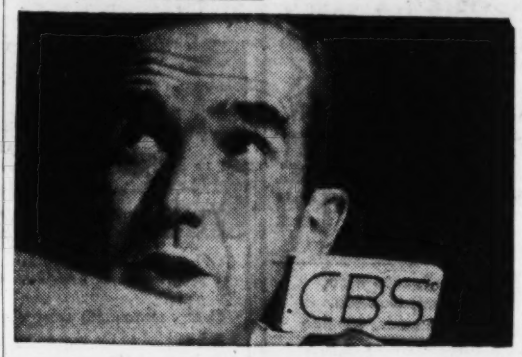

HOLLYWOOD, June 30—Tony Curtis will star in "The Eyes of Father Tomasino" for universal. The suspense story was adapted for the screen by John Robinson and Edwin Blum from the latter's television play. Curtis will portray a young San Francisco policeman who quit the force to give his full time to tracking down the killer of a priest. The picture will be started the middle of next month with Joseph Pevney as the director. At present Curtis is starring as a Chicago gambler for the studio in "Mister Cory."

Mel Ferrer Film

HOLLYWOOD, June 30—Mel Ferrer will be playing the romantic lead in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Vintage," which the studio hopes to start filming in the south of France in August. Pier Angeli will be the focal point of Ferrer's emotion difficulties.

"The Vintage" will be Jeffrey Hayden's first motion picture director assignment at Metro. He learned his craft in television and is the husband of Eva Marie Saint. Edwin A. Knopf will produce the story, based on a novel by Ursula Keir.

Enjoy a vacation every weekend instead of just once a year!

BUY AND BUILD ON BEAUTIFUL VALLE LAKE

A Rustic Ozark Retreat with every modern convenience. Only an hour's drive from St. Louis

SALE OF LOTS BEGINS TODAY!

Crystal clear Valle Lake is nestled among 513 acres of rolling Ozark Hills. Its approximately 100 acres of water are fed by springs with a daily flow of one million gallons. The lake is stocked with bass, crappie, blue gill and channel catfish.

Never before have pleasure-loving people in St. Louis been offered the vacation facilities and natural beauty to be found at Valle Lake. The lake is full . . . the dam strong and tight. Lots are 50x150 ft. (minimum) and are fronted by streets. All roads leading to lake site are paved with either blacktop or concrete. There will be no extra expense of drilling a well and maintaining a water system. The installation of a central water system bringing water directly to each lot is included in the cost of the lot.

You Can Afford It!

You and your family can have years of enjoyment on beautiful Valle Lake for a down payment that probably costs less than last year's vacation. Swim, fish and have fun every weekend throughout the summer and fall.

Prices range from $750 up
Down payment as low as $250
Monthly payments as low as $20

Only an Hour's Drive from St. Louis

Long before the Civil War, early settlers powered a grist mill with the same stream that now feeds Valle Lake. The spring-fed stream flows as strong today as it did over a century ago: One million gallons a day.

Valle Lake is only 45 miles south of St. Louis. Two routes are available and equally convenient:

1. Take highway 61-67, 13 miles south of Festus-Crystal City to Valles Mines. Turn right at Valles Mines on V and go one mile to Valle Lake.

2. Take Highway 21 south past Hillsboro to junction of 21-110. Follow 110 to De-Soto and Route V from DeSoto to Valle Lake. Both routes are well posted with directional signs.

SEE VALLE LAKE TODAY. A representative of the Politte Realty Co. will be at the Lake entrance to greet you today or any day. He will be pleased to show you around the lake and to answer your questions.

Carrier to Hold 'Open House'

One of the United States Navy's huge aircraft carriers such as this will hold "open house" at the North Island Naval Air Station at Coronado during the city's "Fiesta week" July 20-28. Visitors may go aboard the carrier and other naval craft as well as witness naval amphibious landing maneuvers on the Silver Strand south of Coronado. The activities are a part of Coronado's celebration in connection with San Diego county's Fiesta del Pacifico.

Coronado's Fiesta Activities To Include Navy Maneuvers

Coronado, the "Crown City" across the bay from San Diego, will be one of California's most colorful communities during the month-long Fiesta del Pacificio scheduled for the Southern California area July 18 through Aug. 19.

Although Coronado's Fiesta activities, sponsored by the special Coronado Fiesta Committee, will be concentrated between July 20 and 28, many other attractions will entertain visitors and residents alike throughout the summer.

Coronado's Fiesta program will open July 25 with a beach party on the broad, mile-long beach. The beach party will open at 7 p.m., with street dancing near the "del" at 9 p.m.

One of the highlights of the entire Fiesta period will take place in Coronado on July 26 and 27 when personnel of the United States Naval Amphibious Base stage a full-scale maneuvers on the Silver Strand just south of Coronado, between San Diego Bay and the Pacific Ocean. Thousands of Navy and Marine Corps battle-garbed fighters and hundreds of Navy craft will take part. The maneuvers will feature amphibious landings through the surf, underwater demolition and ship-to-shore communications, all carried out with Navy fighter plane and helicopter providing cover. Accommodations will be available for the public to view the exercises.

July 28 and 29 Coronado, which numbers among its residents more retired military officers of flag rank than possibly any other community, will offer visitors an unusual "On Board" open house at which a submarine, two large aircraft carriers and a destroyer will be open for public visitations at the North Island Naval Air Station. The ships will be open from 1 to 4 p.m. daily through Aug. 4.

Coronado will conclude its Fiesta program on Aug. 5 when members of the San Diego Speed Boat Club will move into picturesque Glorietta Bay for a series of speed races. A helicopter air-sea rescue demonstration, performed by units from the nearby San Diego Coast Guard Air Station, will be an added feature.

One of the most attractive residential cities on San Diego Bay Coronado is reached from San Diego by ferryboat. Its broad, tree-lined streets, miles of ocean beach, frequent sailing regattas, plus the fine facilities of Silver Strand State Park, make it one of San Diego County's most popular vacation spots.

WISCONSIN DELLS PLANS CENTENNIAL THIS SUMMER

The little town of Wisconsin Dells is celebrating its 100th anniversary this summer.

The weirdly beautiful rock formations on the Wisconsin river and the Indian ceremonials at Stand Rock Natural Amphitheater are still unchanged. The scenic beauty that nature created thousands of years ago, and the picturesque folklore that the American Indians originated centuries ago will attract nearly 1,000,000 visitors during the next four months.

The Upper and Lower Dells are a fantastic area. Thousands of years ago water from the melting of a great glacial ice sheet cut its way through sandstone rock. Gradually, with the aid of the wind, this water erosion created curious rock formations, majestic bluffs and deep, cool canyons. Today it is a spot of beauty where the broad waters of the Wisconsin river are narrowed and rush through deep, narrow channels hemmed by cliffs and pine covered hills.

Around this natural phenomena has grown a major resort area development that cares for the creature comforts, entertainment and recreational needs of vacation seekers.

Therefore, instead of rusticating over past history, this lively community started its second century with the dedication on June 16 of a new $1,000,000 bridge at the entrance to the city. Other appropriate events are slated throughout the summer.

TROPICAL FRUITS

Keeping the preserve shelf filled is easy at Miami Beach where fruits for jelly and jam making flourish in most yards.

Among these are surinam cherries, carissa, calamondines and kumquats, as well as oranges, grapefruit and limes.

Perching Prettily

—City of Miami.

The rigging of a sailing vessel serves as a perch for this attractive visitor.

TOURISTS ABROAD MAY MAIL GIFTS HOME DUTY FREE

Applies Only If Value Is Not More Than Ten Dollars

With the annual summer tourist rush to Europe well under way, many a transatlantic vacationist is making the happy discovery that he can mail back gifts to friends and relatives duty free.

United States customs regulations now permit citizens who are abroad to send home gifts valued at not more than ten dollars to as many persons as they wish, free of duty. These purchases may consist of any type of bona-fide gift item except perfume, alcoholic beverages and tobacco and, surprisingly enough, they need not be included in the returning tourist's $500 duty exemption. Thus the vacationist who mails most of his gifts home enjoys a double benefit. He not only avoids the bother of toting packages with him wherever he goes, but can also save most of his duty exemption for his own personal purchases.

According to the European Travel Commission, three simple precautions should be kept in mind when mailing gifts back to the States.

Firstly, each purchase sent directly from a shop abroad should include a gift card or note from the donor as evidence that the merchandise is a bona-fide gift and not a commercial order. Secondly, the outside of the package should be clearly marked "Gift Enclosed." Finally, the traveler should remember that no person in the United States may receive more than ten dollars worth of duty-free gifts in any one day since additional items will be dutiable. It is, however, perfectly proper to send several gifts in the "$10-or-less" category to someone in the States over a period of time.

Wherever possible, says the commission, gifts in this price range should be sent by mail, since they will then be delivered directly to the homes of the recipients without unnecessary expense or complications. Transatlantic sea and air parcel post service is reported to be excellent, and insurance rates are low.

EUROPEAN EVENTS

A handy "tip sheet" for those planning autumn vacations in Europe this year is a new folder entitled "Europe, Major Events in the Fall," recently published by the European Travel Commission.

The folder is designed to give travelers taking advantage of the "Thrift Season" a sampling of the many outstanding attractions scheduled from September through November in the 21 countries comprising the commission. The booklet is available without charge from travel agents.

No Siesta.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, is one of the few tropical cities where all business does not stop for siesta after lunch. Almost all offices open at 8 in the morning and close at 5 in the afternoon.

SUMMER GOOD TIME FOR TAMPA VACATION

With an average summer temperature actually lower than many northern cities and a variety of interesting things to see and do, Tampa is playing host to an ever increasing number of summer visitors.

Historical sites, famed Spanish restaurants, romantic harbor scenes, excellent fishing and water sports and beautiful parks and picnic grounds combine to offer the summer vacationer activity and fun.

Historical spots, such as the DeSoto Oak where Spanish explorer Hernando DeSoto bargained with the Indians in 1539, are always a favorite for the sightseer.

Tampa's deepwater harbor—a year-round beehive of activity—has daily arrivals of colorful boats bearing bananas and other tropical fruits destined for northern markets. The shrimp fleet, with its picturesque wooden boats, is a mecca for the sea-minded visitor. And summertime is the season to visit the turtle-crawls — to watch huge monsters of the sea being imported and prepared for shipment throughout the country.

The famed Spanish restaurants of Tampa's Latin quarter, Ybor City, feature special seasonal dishes in addition to the regular Spanish treats.

Tarpon fishing hits its peak in the summer. This year, thousands of fishermen from around the world will vie for more than $10,000 in prizes during the Ninth Annual Tampa Tarpon Tournament which opened June 16 and will continue through Aug. 12. Fishing facilities, such as a new 8000 foot fishing catwalk under the new span of Gandy Bridge over Tampa bay, offer elbow room for thousands of anglers within the city limits.

Natural beauty is at its peak, with brilliantly hued flowers and bright green tropical foliage in abundance at the many public parks and picnic areas in the Tampa area. Swimming and boating activities jump to a high point as residents join in the fun.

And, as ever, Tampa is a sightseeing center, with most of Florida's major attractions within a comfortable one-day drive. Sightseeing busses conduct daily tours to all parts of central and West Coast Florida, returning to Tampa each night.

Feeding Your Family Is a Many-Fold Project

By Dorothy Brainerd

Feeding your family wisely and well is, of course, one of your major responsibilities as a homemaker. There is little doubt that cooking those 1095 meals every year is quite a project—but it is only one part of the picture. Prudent planning, shrewd shopping and proper preservation in refrigerator or freezer must all precede the cooking of the food if the goals of good nutrition and economy are to be attained.

The preparation of food is simplified by the many excellent recipes available to you in the newspaper and over the air. But authentic information on planning, purchasing and preservation is not so easily obtainable.

We therefore have assembled in this section advice from some of the most authoritative sources in the country. The material has been planned to comprise a sort of food primer for the home which may serve as a guide for the young homemaker and a reminder for the more experienced.

It is our hope that you will find it so helpful that it may earn a permanent place in your kitchen library, right beside your favorite cookbooks.

To Market, To Market--- But Plan Before You Go

THE first step toward feeding your family wisely is taken before you buy any food. Literally, it isn't a step at all—it is a matter of seating yourself comfortably at your work center with pad and pencil (and perhaps a cup of coffee) to work out menus which measure up to the yardstick of good nutrition, which are economical, and which have enough eye and taste appeal to keep your family happy.

Don't, whatever you do, underestimate that last phrase. You have defeated your whole purpose if the meals you serve are a constant source of family arguments and turn the table conversation into a discourse on "what's good for you."

There is no reason why they should be. Happily, the foods that are "good for you" also can be mighty good to eat if they are skillfully worked into the menu, are properly prepared and attractively served.

Planning your menus is an individual matter; there is no one set rule that will work for every family. In general, it is wiser to plan by the week than by the day. In this way you can use leftovers (or "planned overs," as home economists prefer to say) to better advantage.

Speaking before the annual national meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Washington, D.C. last Wednesday Dr. Helen Cate, head of the Department of Food and Nutrition at the Florida State University where a course is offered in family meal planning, stated:

"Students are encouraged to think in blocks of time rather than by the day or meal. After they can visualize the fitting together of the whole week's meals, they work on meals for single days, and vary meal plans to suit nutritional needs of the various members of a family group.

"As an undercurrent running through all laboratory experiences, we stress the fact that food must be enjoyed. Students analyze such factors as color, texture, flavor, temperature and palatability.

Storage All-Important.

Your meal planning will very definitely be affected by your storage facilities. It is important that you have adequate refrigerator and freezer space if you are to take advantage of special food sales which are advertised in the newspaper.

It is a common mistake to purchase an electric refrigerator or freezer which is too small for such long-range planning. The difference in cost between one model and the size larger may be negligible compared to the difference in convenience and in savings possible on foods purchased over a period of time.

If you do most of your purchasing once a week, it will be well worth your while to make a thorough study of the amount of food your family needs based upon good nutrition; then check your shelf, refrigerator and freezer space to see how the two compare.

It also will be well worth your while to study the food advertisements carefully.

The Thursday food page of this newspaper carries a weekly report on which foods are in good supply and are being offered at reasonable prices. The information is current and is based upon the St. Louis market, not upon reports issued on a national basis which vary in different localities. This is a service which can be of real help to you with your weekend marketing.

It is, of course, all very well to advise you as a homemaker to plan your menus so that you are sure you are feeding your family the foods they should have for good nutrition, but this isn't of much practical help unless you know just what they do need to be well nourished and how to work these requirements into your daily scheme of living. So where do you start?

Start with the famous "basic seven" — the seven groups of foods we all need daily. These are:

1. Green and yellow vegetables. (One large serving.)
2. Oranges, tomatoes, grapefruit (or raw cabbage or raw greens). (One serving.)
3. Potatoes, other vegetables and fruits. (One or more potatoes and two servings of others.)
4. Milk and milk products. (Children, three-fourths to one quart. Adults, one pint.)
5. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs. (One serving meat, poultry or fish.) (One egg, at least four a week.) (Dried beans, peas, nuts or peanut butter.)
6. Bread, flour and cereals, enriched or whole grain. (Two slices of bread or its equivalent at each meal.)
7. Butter and fortified margarine with added vitamin A. (Two to three level tablespoons.)

Helpful Literature.

If you would like practical advice on planning, marketing and menu-making, there are a number of helpful books or pamphlets which are available to you. Your needs will vary with your family—whether the group includes small children, aged persons, etc.

In order that you may judge which of these booklets may best suit your individual needs, a brief description of the contents follows the name of each:

Family Fare, Food Management and Recipes. United States Department of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 1.

Basic information on nutrition, buying and storing, measures and temperatures, substitutions, recipes.

Available without charge upon request to Food Marketing Program, 422 Merchants Exchange Bldg., 315 Chestnut street, St. Louis (2), Mo.

Food for the Family With Young Children. United States Department of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 5.

A week's menus for a family of four, including two children under the age of six. Tips on planning meals for such a family group. Advice for the expectant mother.

Available without charge from Food Marketing Progam office (see above.)

Food for Families with school Children. U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 13.

Same general type of information as in Food for Family with Young Children. A weekly plan for a family of six with two adults, two teen-agers and two younger school children.

Available from Food Marketing Program (see above).

Vegetables for you. University of Missouri Agriculture Extension Service Circular No. 627.

A GOOD SALAD DEPENDS UPON CARE OF GREENS

Summer days are salad days—and the secret of a good salad is crisp greens. Salad greens should be washed briefly when they are brought home, advises the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

The best practice is to hold them, core or butt up, under the faucet for first washing. This removes outer grit and sand, but keeps the water from soaking into the inner leaves.

Water, if allowed to stay on the leaves, will rust them during storage. The greens should be shaken and dried as thoroughly as possible, then wrapped and placed in the refrigerator. Ventilated plastic bags or hydrators are especially effective for this storage.

Just before using the greens, wash them again. This time, if using the entire head at once, cut out the core or butt end. Hold it under the faucet until the force of the water (with the help of your fingers) has separated and thoroughly washed the leaves.

Shake off as much water as possible. Break off and discard the thick lower parts of midribs if desired. Then dry gently between paper or cloth towels, making sure the greens are dried thoroughly.

A Home Freezer Prevents Mealtime Crises

A home food freezer is an investment in peace of mind for the homemaker. If it is well stocked, there is no danger of those "crises" which arise when the delivery boy is late with the grocery order, or when unexpected guests arrive just before dinner. There is ample storage space to take advantage of seasonal "best buys" when the kitchen is equipped with both a freezer and a refrigerator. Smaller families may find a combination refrigerator-freezer quite satisfactory.

Safe Storage, Cooking Procedures for Poultry

Poultry may be purchased in several forms, but whichever type you may choose it is most important that it be cared for properly.

The Poultry and Egg National Board suggests the proper methods for home care.

Ready-to-cook poultry (not frozen) should be cleaned, wrapped loosely in wax paper, foil or moisture-proof paper and refrigerated. Remove from refrigerator when ready to prepare and cook.

Frozen poultry should be kept frozen in the freezer until ready to thaw and cook. Follow package directions for thawing, or one of these suggested methods: (1) Place frozen poultry, in its original wrap, on the shelf in the refrigerator. Allow two to four days to thaw large turkeys; one or two days for smaller turkeys and large chickens. Small poultry will thaw in the refrigerator within a day. (2) If rapid thawing is necessary, place poultry, still in original wrap, under cold running water. Allow six hours for large turkeys, one or more hours for small sizes of poultry.

Prompt cooking after thawing is preferable. Follow procedures for handling thawed frozen poultry that you use for fresh poultry.

It is important not to refreeze frozen poultry once it has thawed or partially thawed.

When preparing roast poultry, do not place stuffing (if used) into the cavity of the bird until just before roasting. Combine stuffing ingredients just before stuffing cavity, if possible.

Poultry, broth, stuffing or gravy should not remain out of the refrigerator after the meal is served. It is not necessary to allow hot poultry foods to cool before placing in the refrigerator.

Leftover stuffing should be removed from the cavity of the poultry and refrigerated separately in a covered dish. Wrap cooked poultry well, or place in covered dish, when placed in refrigerator.

Gizzards, hearts and livers should be cooked promptly after being removed and cleaned. They should be cooked until tender in seasoned simmering water before added to gravy or stuffing.

PICNIC ANY TIME IF SANDWICHES ARE IN FREEZER

A variety of sandwiches in your freezer can mean a picnic on short notice.

Most sandwiches can be stored two or three weeks. Since they thaw in three to four hours, you can take them out of the freezer, drive to the picnic site, and place them right on the picnic table.

All varieties of bread will freeze well, so you have an opportunity to provide a choice. Just be sure to spread the bread generously with butter or margarine so that fillings will not soak through, warns the Wheat Flour Institute.

Most fillings freeze well, with a few exceptions such as egg salad (the white of the egg tends to toughen), jelly, and lettuce and tomatoes.

Fillings which do freeze satisfactorily include sliced and ground meat, poultry, sea foods and peanut butter.

Freeze the sandwiches away from the sides and bottom of the freezer in order to avoid ice crystals. Wrap individually in moisture-vaporproof packages, and don't forget to label.

SERVE IT COLD

Milk as a beverage is usually most enjoyed when served cold, right from the refrigerator.

To get the same amount of calcium as in one glass of milk, you can substitute one serving (one and one-quarter ounces) cheese, or two servings (one-sixth quart each) ice cream, or three one-half cup servings of cottage cheese. Keep this in mind as you plan your own meals to be sure you get enough calcium each day.

MACARONI DISHES

Freezing macaroni main dishes can be a big time-saver in busy households. Always remember to mark the freezer labels with the date of freezing.

Plan your freezing and use of pre-cooked main dishes so that they will be in the freezer no longer than two or three months. Quality of cooked main dishes tends to deteriorate if stored longer.

STORAGE TABLES FOR DIFFERENT KINDS OF POULTRY

What is the safe length of time to keep poultry in refrigerator or freezer?

Here is the Poultry and Egg National Board's advice on the subject:

Fresh Whole Poultry: On refrigerator shelves, two to three days. In freezer, six months.

Poultry Stuffing: On refrigerator shelves, one day. Do not store in freezer.

Fresh Poultry Cut in Pieces: On refrigerator shelves, two to three days. In freezer, six months.

Cooked Poultry: On refrigerator shelves, two to three days. In freezer, six months.

Chicken or Turkey Salad: On refrigerator shelves, one day. Do not freeze.

Frozen Poultry: On refrigerator shelves, two to three days after defrosting. In freezer, six months.

The above information is based upon temperatures of 35 to 40 degrees F. on refrigerator shelves; 0 degrees or below in freezer.

Helpful Trick.

Remember to wash rubber food scrapers thoroughly with warm soap or detergent suds immediately after use because fat or grease left on will soften the rubber.

Be Sure to Buy Fresh Eggs, Then Handle With Care

Proper refrigeration is important to maintain the original quality of eggs. Humidity of about 85 per cent is optimum to prevent a loss of moisture from the egg by evaporation during the storage period. Refrigerator manufacturers see to it that this condition is present.

Eggs freeze at temperatures below 28 degrees F. Because the temperature in most home refrigerators is between 35 and 45 degrees F., good quality eggs can be stored successfully in these refrigerators for several weeks. It is wise to buy eggs from dealers who keep them refrigerated, and in clean cartons.

Careful handling to prevent unnecessary movement of the egg contents is omportant. Keep the eggs with the large end at the top. Eggs may be covered or uncovered when refrigerated; however, because eggs absorb odors, those foods that have strong odors should be covered well when refrigerated. When using eggs, remove only the number needed at one time from the refrigerator.

When a recipe requires the separation of egg white from the yolk, this step can be performed most easily if the eggs are at room temperature. Therefore remove only the needed number of eggs from the refrigerator about 45 minutes before separating whites and yolks to allow them to warm up to room temperature. (Egg white will beat up faster and to a larger volume at this temperature.)

If you have leftover whites or yolks, refrigerate them promptly in a tightly covered jar. Cover the yolks with a layer of cold water. Whites will keep successfully for a week to 10 days; the yolks should be used with three days.

Additional points of information concerning eggs are:

Shell color has nothing to do with the contents of an egg. The color of the shell is determined by the breed of chicken.

The color of the shell is no indication of the yolk color. The color of the yolk is determined largely by the feed.

The cooking performance, quality and nutritive value of small eggs are equal to that of larger eggs

(The above story is based upon material from the Poultry and Egg National Board.)

Crisp Salad for Warm Day

Can you imagine summer without cool, crisp salads—those wonderful mainstays of hot-weather luncheons and suppers?

But they must be very crisp if they are to be good; nothing is quite so sad as a bowl of wilted greens. And that is where the right kind of care and refrigeration enter into the picture.

Elsewhere in this section you will find instructions for the proper storage of salad greens, of the vegetables, the meats, poultry and eggs shown on the tempting platter above. Read and heed this advice if you want your summer salads to be perfect.

The type of salad shown above is delightful for buffet meals. Put any combination of crisp mixed salad greens in a large bowl. On a separate tray arrange a good selection of other ingredients, such as onion and green pepper rings, tomato wedges, cucumber slices, sliced hard-cooked eggs, raw carrot slices, cheese strips, olive slices.

BOOKLETS GIVE EXPERT ADVICE ON USING FREEZER

This is the time of year to make full use of your home freezer by freezing the fresh fruits and vegetables while they are in season, and by freezing main , dishes when you have a little free time so that they will be ready

You probably received an instruction booklet giving directions for preparing frozen foods when you purchased your home freezer.

But if you would like some additions to your kitchen library, here are several you may find useful:

Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables. U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 10.

Freezing Combination Main Dishes. U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 40.

Freezing Meat, Fish and Poultry for Family Meals. University of Missouri Circular No. 643.

All of these booklets may be obtained without charge upon request to the Food Marketing Program, Merchants Exchange Building, 315 Chestnut Street, St. Louis 2, Missouri.

Answers to Some Questions Asked About Frozen Foods

Frozen foods are an important part of our modern way of life; their proper handling continues to puzzle many homemakers because new foods inevitably bring new questions.

Here are the answers to the questions most frequently asked the National Association of Frozen Food Packers:

Q. How long can I safely store frozen food?

A. As a rule of thumb, commercially packed frozen food, stored at zero degrees temperature or below, will be satisfactory after these periods.

Vegetables, fruits and juices: 18 months.

Prepared foods: 12 months.

Pork and Lamb: six to eight months.

Beef: 12 to 18 months.

Fish: six to eight months.

Q. Can frozen foods be cooked and then stored in the refrigerator a day or two?

A. Yes. Frozen foods that have been cooked should be treated the same as any cooked food.

Q. Why are we instructed not to re-freeze frozen foods once they are thawed?

A. Spoilage and loss of color, flavor, texture, tenderness and other pleasing factors of once-frozen foods may have started before the re-freezing process is begun.

Q. Why do package directions on frozen vegetables specify a small amount of water for cooking?

A. It is a standard principle of all vegetable cookery to cook in as small an amount of water as possible.

Q. What should I do with a package of frozen vegetables that happens to become defrosted before cooking?

A. If the package is still cold to the touch, the vegetables probably can be cooked and served. Do not re-freeze the vegetables. When you open the package, check for a wholesome odor. If the package passes both of these tests cook the food immediately, but cook it a shorter time than you would if cooking from the frozen state.

Here Is How to Be A Smart Food Shopper

Elsewhere in this section is a story suggesting aids for the important business of planning your menus. The next step in feeding your family wisely is, of course, purchasing. The modern homemaker takes her responsibility as family food buyer seriously, knowing that the money she spends for groceries represents a sizable part of the family income.

As in the case of planning, there are helps available to her if she will take advantage of them.

Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, suggests three distinct steps for the woman who is in earnest about becoming a smart food buyer. They are:

1 Be in the know. Read food articles and food advertising in the newspaper, listen to food information on the radio, look at food programs on television, talk about foods with your friends. In this way you will be informed about new food products on the market, discover new uses of familiar products, learn about new recipes developed in the efficient test kitchens of manufacturers, have a basic knowledge about supply and demand and the effect they have on prices.

2. Shop with a keen, observant eye. Today's food stores are planned so that the displays are accessible to the shopper. Walk right up to the packages, take them in your hand, study them at close range. There are more than 3000 different products in the average grocery store today; why not make it a habit to learn about some new ones every time you go into a food store?

Taking a little time to become acquainted with products which are not familiar to you also will provide new inspiration for meal planning, and add interest to the preparation of them.

Make your own "consumer survey" of new food packages. New packaging materials are constantly being introduced. There are new shapes in food packages, adopted for any one of several reasons. Perhaps they are easier for you to handle, perhaps they take less storage room in your kitchen.

A buyer for a business or industry would give serious consideration to such points. You are the buyer for your family, and it is just as important for you to be informed and weigh the advantages and disadvantages of the products for which you spend your money.

Are you getting the most for that money—the most in quality, convenience and nutrition?

3. Read the Labels. This is a point which has been stressed frequently in the food pages of this newspaper; it is a point which cannot be stressed too often.

Every time you shop you receive valuable dividends from your modern grocery basket. There is the convenience of having so much work done in the manufacturers' kitchens.

There is better nutrition as the result of research by food processors (on-the-spot processing at a perfect stage of ripeness or maturity, for example).

There is greater selection of grocery products in the stores, which simplifies your meal planning.

There is constant improvement in packaging, as discussed above.

There is high uniform quality, as the result of careful laboratory control.

There is the tremendous saving of time in the ready-to-serve foods which take only a few minutes' preparation. Not so very long ago it took five and one-half hours a day to prepare meals for a family of four. Today, comparable menus of heat-and-serve foods can be prepared in about one and one-half hours, a saving of approximately four hours a day.

All of these advantages are yours as a result of co-operation in every segment of the chain along the "Life Line of America"—producers, researchers, processors, transporters, wholesalers and retailers have all had a hand in improving and broadening the total market for food in this country and in bringing the consumer foods which suit her every need.

But, in order to take advantage of all of these developments you must choose the foods which serve your purpose, and prepare them in the proper manner (this applies especially to the new "convenience" foods in which it is of extreme importance to follow directions exactly).

And this brings us right back to the importance of studying those labels. All of the important facts about a product appear on a good descriptive label. Besides reference to ingredients, color, size, net contents, directions for use and storage, a good label often tells the story of unusual nutritive values, gives menu suggestions, perhaps a new recipe.

Labeling and packaging are two important steps in the long line of processes and services between the field and your dinner table, the "Life Line of America" that makes us such a well nourished nation.

Do take advantage of them by studying them carefully, with an eye to how they can best serve your individual needs.

Use It Wisely for Best Results

Modern electric refrigerators have become so much a part of daily living that the homemaker is inclined to take the appliance for granted. Lack of appreciation may cause the homemaker to overlook the possibilities of full use.

Do use a system to organize the foods which you place in your refrigerator. Special racks, boxes, et cetera are provided for storing certain foods; make a practice of using them for the purposes for which they are intended.

Those small items for which no special provision has been made may be collected in a basket, so they won't become lost in the depths of the refrigerator. Experts report that the waste of foods in refrigerators is staggering. Some is lost because it is not stored properly and so spoils before it can be used. Much of it is literally "lost" because it is pushed to the back of the box and forgotten until too late.

Refrigerators and refrigerator-freezers require similar care. A few general suggestions can be made, but it is always wise to follow the manufacturer's instructions implicity in the care of any electrical appliance.

Here are a few tips on care and use:

After defrosting, always dry the freezer compartment before resetting the control to normal position.

The interior of the cabinet should be cleaned weekly. Spilled food should be wiped up promptly before it hardens and becomes difficult to remove. The interior should be washed with warm water to which baking soda has been added in the proportion of one teaspoon baking soda to one quart of warm water. Rinse and dry thoroughly. (Don't forget shelves, vegetable crispers, meat and ice cube trays when washing the inside of the box.)

The exterior finish should be wiped daily with a clean damp cloth. An occasional application of kitchen wax will help preserve the luster of the finish, but be sure the surface is clean and dry before applying.

To secure maximum refrigeration at minimum operating cost, defrost regularly if this is not taken care of automatically. Do not open the door unnecessarily.

Plan what foods are to be removed when preparing a meal, replaced after dinner, and organize them so that one opening of the door will suffice.

Protect the latch by not slamming the door. Crowding overworks the mechanism, so do not refrigerate foods which do not require cold. Cool most foods before storing; hot foods make greater demands on the refrigerator.

Use leftover foods promptly; plan menus so these foods can be utilized while still fresh.

TIPS ON POPULAR ROTISSERIE COOKERY

Rotisserie cooking is steadily gaining in popularity because of the excellent flavor of foods prepared in this manner and because it is ideal for casual entertaining. It fits right into the relaxed feeling which is part of today's luxurious living.

With this method of cooking meats on a spit that revolves below heat, so little juice is lost that all flavor and food value is sealed inside. Many variations in flavor can be achieved when using this cookery method by adding herbs and other seasonings to the sauces used in the basting process and to those served with the meat.

Here are some points to keep in mind.

Lean meat and poultry should be brushed with fat.

Seasonings can be used for variety.

Food must be centered on the spit so that it is balanced and will rotate for even browning.

Buy roasts, steaks and poultry to fit your rotisserie.

Select tender cuts that will cook quickly.

Cooking time for meats and poultry are slightly reduced when cooking on a rotisserie. The following will be a guide in roasting times:

	Ready-to-Cook Weight	Time
Meat
Beef roast	5 lb.	1¼ to 1¾ hrs.
Veal roast	5 lb.	1½ to 1¾ hrs.
Pork roast	5 lb.	1½ to 1¾ hrs.
Lamb roast	5 lb.	1¼ to 1½ hrs.
Spare ribs	4 lb.	1 to 1½ hrs.
Chicken	5 lb.	1 to 1¼ hrs.
Duck	5 to 6 lb.	1½ to 1¾ hrs.

Who Minds Cooking in Summer?

Warm-weather cooking no longer holds any dread for the modern homemaker. The fully insulated and thermostatically-controlled ovens, the speed in cooking, the outstanding new features make it a cool and easy chore to feed her family even when the thermometer climbs right to the top of the column.

The 1956 range features are functional, not just gadgets. For instance, the rotisserie shown above, turns roasts, fowl or seafood, under searing electric heat, to self-basted gourmet perfection.

Much of the homemaker's cooking, from heating the baby's bottle quickly to the slow simmering of a rich stew, is done on the surface of the range. An automatic unit in the center of the left rear surface unit converts any pot or pan into an automatic frying pan, casserole or Dutch oven. A raisable left rear unit also converts into a deep fat French-fryer.

Other convenience features include plug-in surface griddle, automatic timers and raisable broiler rack.

Some ranges are equipped with meat thermometers designed to assure perfect roasting of meats and poultry. This is particularly helpful in cooking these foods since it is difficult to judge their exact degree of doneness by time and appearance alone. The meat thermometer is inserted in the meat and the plug inserted into an outlet at the side of the oven. A glance at the easy-to-read scale on the back panel of the range tells you the progress of the cooking.

With convenience features such as these on her electric range, why should any woman mind cooking in hot weather?

PACKAGING FOODS FOR HOME FREEZER

Among the many benefits of electrical living is this paradoxical one; the family can live better and still save money—provided that the home freezer is used wisely.

The homemaker can save much time and extra work by preparing the food properly for freezing. Here are some suggestions.

Two pieces of paper should be placed between individual servings of meat so they can be separated easily while still frozen.

Even the most efficient freezers cannot properly preserve food that has been incorrectly wrapped. Poorly packaged foods will dry out in the freezer. To guard against this, moisture-vapor-proof inner wrappings should be used such as aluminum foil, pliofilm, polyethylene, cellophane or laminated papers.

Sealing the wrapping paper is an important step in the freezing preparation. First smooth the wrapping material taut. Bring the edges together and fold over and downward to form a "lock seal." If the wrapping material can be heat-sealed, used a medium hot iron. If not, a special low-temperature gummed tape should be used for sealing. Ordinary pressure-sensitive household tape usually will not hold at low temperatures.

After the food to be frozen is properly wrapped and sealed, an identification card or label should be attached.

One word of warning. Do not put unfrozen foods next to food already frozen; it may cause partial thawing.

Sound Advice on ABC's Of Proper Bread Storage

Bread deserves good treatment; it is a perishable food and how it is stored affects its good eating qualities. Wrapping and storage conditions are factors in maintaining freshness. As it stales it loses flavor and aroma, increases in firmness and crumbliness, and develops a harsh texture.

For your guidance, here is advice from the American Institute of Baking on home care.

Always Wrap at the Start.

In the modern bakery, bread is scientifically wrapped in moisture-resistant material. This is the best procedure for maintaining freshness because it keeps the bread in an ideal humid atmosphere. Wrapped bread or packaged rolls should be left in original wrappers when placed in storage units.

Bread or rolls which may be purchased unwrapped can be kept satisfactorily if wrapped in moisture-vapor proof papers or if placed in a moisture-resistant bag before storing. Exceptions are the hard or crisp crusted breads and rolls. These products are best when eaten fresh.

Be Wise About Storage Areas.

Refrigerator Storage: Bread may be stored in the refrigerator to retard mold growth, especially during hot weather, but the longer the refrigeration period, the firmer bread becomes. Refrigeration temperatures step up staling. Use of wrappers or special containers does not offset the affects of cool temperature on bread freshness.

Freezer Storage: Bread should be stored in frozen food cabinets at 0 degrees F or lower. These temperatures keep the flavor, freshness, original moisture and aroma of bread intact if it is wrapped securely in moisture-vapor proof material beforehand. Bread, thawed or fresh, stales at the same rate under like storage conditions.

Fresh hard or crisp crusted breads or rolls should be wrapped loosely in kraft paper. To use, unwrap and thaw bread at room temperature. Heat, uncovered, in a hot oven for about five minutes and serve immediately. Freezing stale or partially stale bread will not restore its freshness.

Bread Box Storage: Properly wrapped bread may be stored satisfactorily at room temperature in a clean, dry, ventilated storage unit, container or drawer. Increased ventilation of the unit should be allowed for during hot weather. Such units should be placed away from all heat-producing equipment such as ranges, refrigeration units, radiators, water heaters or clothes driers. Temperatures above 80 degrees foster mold growth.

Cleanliness, Above All.

Clean, dry containers are an unquestionable necessity for giving bread the care that it deserves. All storage containers should be thoroughly washed weekly. Baking soda dissolved in warm water is the preferred agent for odorless cleaning. The unit should be dried well, including all joinings, and it should be free of crumbs. Any remaining moisture or crumbs may favor mold growth.

Recommended Storage Table For All Meats

When you start to plan a meal, where do you begin? With the meat, in all probability. This is just one indication of what an important role meats play in our menus. The American homemaker is fortunate indeed in that she can purchase meat of fine quality at her local store. The nation's great meat industry is joining with the United States Department of Agriculture in commemorating the golden anniversary of the federal meat inspection service this summer.

With this assurance of clean and wholesome meat in her market basket, it then becomes her responsibility to care for it at home in such a manner that it will retain its good quality.

Here is the advice of the American Meat Institute to help her accomplish this goal.

Storage of Meat in the Home Refrigerator.

To insure meat as fresh at serving time as it was when purchased, wise homemakers will follow a few simple handling procedures. Meat is a perishable food and deserves the utmost care to preserve its fine flavor, juciness and nutrients.

General Storage Suggestions.

1. Refrigerate fresh and smoked meats as soon as possible after purchase.

2. Store meats in the coldest part of the refrigerator or in the meat storage compartment of the refrigerator. If meats are not to be used within a few days, they should be wrapped for freezing and quick-frozen at sub-zero temperatures. The ice cube compartment of home refrigerators is not cold enough for quick freezing of meat.

3. Fresh meats which are wrapped in market paper may be stored in the original wrapping, though tight-fitting wraps on meats not planned for use on day of purchase are best loosened to allow free circulation of air. Cured or smoked meat and sausage prepackaged by meat packer should be refrigerated in the original package. Vacuum-packed meats should be stored without breaking the vacuum.

4. Do not wash meats before storing in refrigerator. (Wiping with a damp cloth is sufficient "washing" for meat, and should be done just before cooking.) Meats keep better if the surface is not too moist.

5. All canned meats may be stored on the pantry or cupboard shelf with the exception of canned hams and picnics weighing three pounds or more. The larger canned hams may be kept for weeks, if necessary, in the refrigerator. All canned meats, once opened, should be treated as fresh meat and stored accordingly.

Recommended Storage Times.

The length of time fresh and smoked meats will maintain their good flavor and aroma in the home refrigerator depends upon a number of things: the freshness of the meat when purchased, the condition of the home refrigerator, and methods of handling after purchase. Generally large cuts of meat will keep fresh longer than small ones. Ground meat and the variety meats are perishable and should be used within a day or so.

The following recommended refrigerator storage times for fresh meats, compiled by the American Meat Institute, are based upon refrigerators maintaining temperatures between 36 and 40 degrees F.

Maximum No. of Days for Best Flavor.

Beef.

Standing Rib Roast	Eight
Steaks	Five
Pot Roasts	Six
Stew Meat	Two
Ground Beef	Two

Pork.

Roasts	Six
Chops	Three
Spareribs	Three
Pork Sausage	Three
Ground Pork	One

Lamb.

Roasts	Five
Chops	Three
Riblets	Two
Ground Lamb	Two

Veal.

Roasts	Six
Chops	Four

Cured and Smoked Meats.

Sliced Bacon	Seven
Corned Beef	Seven
Whole or half ham or picnic	Seven
Ham Slices	Three
Tongue	Seven

Variety Meats.

Liver, Hearts, Kidneys, Brains	Two
Sweetbreads (precooked before storing)	One

Cold Cuts, Franks.

Franks	Five
Sliced Luncheon Meats,	Three
Liver Sausage, uncut	Six
Bologna, unsliced	Six
Dry and semi-dry sausage, (summer sausage, salami, cervelat) uncut,	Three weeks

Quick-and-Easy Meal for a Summer's Day

Meat makes the meal, and in warm weather it is smart to choose a meat that can be prepared quickly and easily. Just be sure that perishable meats are properly cared for, as outlined in the accompanying story. Fresh pork sausage should be used within two or three days of purchase for best flavor. Here the sausage meat is used as stuffing for peach halves and mushroom caps, while the links are served in green pepper rings.

STORAGE OF MEATS IN HOME FREEZER

How to Package Properly, Freeze Quickly; Storage Table.

More families today than ever before own home freezers and are freezing fresh foods at home. To assure the best quality in frozen meats, certain recommendations have been made by the American Meat Institute, trade association of the meat packing industry, for selecting meats, wrapping them, and storing them in the home freezer.

Selection of Meats.

For freezer storage, select meat which is fresh and in good condition. An inferior product should not be used.

Wrapping and Packaging.

One of the most important points in the freezing of meats is the wrapping. To insure proper protection of frozen meat carefully seal it in a moisture-vapor-proof bag or wrap. Use a laminated wrap or any one of the special freezer wraps. (Waxed paper is not satisfactory as it is not moisture-vapor-proof). For easy handling later, separate individual servings of meat such as steaks, chops or ground beef patties with double sheets of an inner wrap.

When packaging, press the wrap close to the meat to exclude as much air as possible. Seal the edges carefully with freezer tape or fold ends over at least twice and tie securely. For easy selection later, label each package with the kind and amount of meat and the date of storage.

Freeze Quickly.

As soon as the meat is wrapped, place it in the freezer, allowing space for air to circulate between the packages which are being frozen. It is never good to place large quantities of unfrozen food into a freezer at one time; this overloads the refrigeration unit and may result in a slow-frozen product of inferior quality. Sub-zero temperatures are best for the quick freezing of meats.

Storing Meat.

The length of storage time in the home freezer depends upon the storage temperature as well as the condition of the original meat and the wrap used. In all cases, frozen meat should be stored at 0 degrees Fahrenheit or lower with as little fluctuation in storage temperature as possible.

For the best quality of meat, the following maximum storage times should be followed. These times are for 0 degrees F. or lower and apply to home freezers (or lockers) and to refrigerator compartments capable of maintaining 0 degrees F.

PRODUCT	Recommened Maximum Storage Time
Beef	6 to 8 months.
Fresh Pork and Veal	3 to 4 months.
Lamb	6 to 7 months.
Ground Beef	3 to 4 months.
Variety Meats (liver, heart, tongue, etc.)	3 to 4 months
*Smoked Hams, Picnic and Slab Bacon	Not to exceed 60 days.
Other Cured and Smoked Meats	Not to exceed 60 days.
Sliced Bacon	Not recommended for freezing.
Bologna, Frankfurters	Not recommended for freezing.
Fresh Pork Sausage	Not recommended for freezing.
Canned Hams (three pounds and over)	Not recommended for freezing.

(*Cured and smoked meats and fresh pork sausage deteriorate rapidly in flavor when frozen.

Meats stored for longer periods than these recommended above frequently show loss in flavor, color, texture or appearance. It is not advisable to re-freeze meat after thawing because of loss of juices during thawing and the possible deterioration of the meat between the time of thawing and refreezing.

FRESH VEGETABLES REQUIRE RIGHT CARE

Fresh vegetables will retain their crispness, their natural flavor and color longer if stored under conditions best suited to each type.

Remember that the ripening process continues after harvesting unless checked by proper storage conditions, the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association points out. This process impairs the flavor, due to the transformation of sugar into starch by enzyme action. Food value and crispness are decreased by exposure to air and light, and by loss of moisture.

Vegetables consist largely of water, hence evaporation must be kept to a minimum to keep them crisp and palatable. This can be done (1) by storing them at a low temperature; and (2) by keeping them in closed containers of metal, plastic or film.

Vegetables may be classed as perishable, semi-perishable and staple. The first two should be refrigerated as soon as possible after thorough but quick washing (Do Not Soak). Since dirt and bruises hasten spoilage, trim away all questionable parts.

Put vegetables into crisping pans (hydrators) or cellophane bags that permit a little air to circulate. Do not peel or chop until just before using. Pod vegetables, such as young peas and fresh lima beans, retain their freshness and nutrients longer if stored in the pod. If they must be shelled in advance, keep them in tightly covered jars.

(The above story is based upon material from the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.)

Dairy Foods Should Be Treated With Respect

Those dairy foods that add so much to our good health are highly perishable, and deserve to be treated with respect if they are to retain their health-giving properties and their delicate flavor.

Here are excerpts from the American Dairy Association's booklet, "Home Care of Dairy Foods," for your guidance.

Milk.

(Fluid, Skim, Flavored, (Cream, Whipping Cream.)

Milk and cream when received in the home should be refrigerated immediately. A storage temperature of 40 degrees F. is most desirable to protect flavor and food value.

A partially emptied container should be resealed with the closure provided. Exposed products may pick up flavors of other foods. Unused milk or cream should be returned to the refrigerator promptly. To insure top flavor and quality, milk and cream should be used within three to four days. Milk and cream should be kept out of strong light to protect the riboflavin, one of milk's important vitamins.

Canned Evaporated Milk is a sterile product. Unopened cans of evaporated milk keep for periods well over a year with no marked physical changes in the milk when stored in a dry ventilated place at temperatures below 60 degrees F.

Pantry shelf or cupboard storage in the home usually does not meet this low temperature requirement. For that reason it is recommended that evaporated milk be purchased more frequently for home use, that is, a two weeks' or a month's supply, then replaced as used.

An opened can of evaporated milk should be given the same care in the home as pasteurized milk—that is, it should be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Its keeping time depends upon the temperature of storage, but it is recommended that the contents be consumed within four or five days.

If no refrigeration is available, because evaporated milk is sterile an opened can may be kept in a clean, cool place safely for a period somewhat longer than pasteurized milk.

Cottage Cheese.

Refrigerator Storage: Cottage cheese will absorb odors of other foods and should be kept tightly covered. Creamed cottage cheese, with its sweet, delicate flavor, should be used soon after purchase to insure maximum flavor quality, preferably within three or four days.

Cheese.

Refrigerator Storage: Because cheese is a perishable food it should not be kept outside the refrigerator for any length of time. It should be covered while in the refrigerator to keep it fresh and moist. Waxed paper, plastic film, aluminum foil and plastic bags are all satisfactory.

The recommended temperature at which to keep all kinds of cheese in the home refrigerator for day to day use is 40 to 45 degrees F.

(The above story is based upon material from the American Dairy Association).

BEST WAYS TO KEEP ICE CREAM AT HOME

Ice cream, that all-American favorite, has come into even wider use with better methods of home refrigeration. Here is what the American Dairy Association has to say about its home storage:

Freezer Storage: Ice cream may be kept satisfactorily for one month if stored at 0 degrees F. or below. Fruit ice cream and high butter fat ice cream should be stored at the lower end of the temperature range, preferably two or five degrees below zero.

Packaging is important for ice cream that is to be kept more than a week. If the original container has a tight fitting lid and is made moisture-proof with a plastic coating no additional wrapping is necessary. If the original container is not made of this material, either place the original carton in a plastic bag and seal tightly, overwrap the carton with moisture-proof wrapping material, or transfer the ice cream to a moisture-proof container.

Refrigerator Storage:

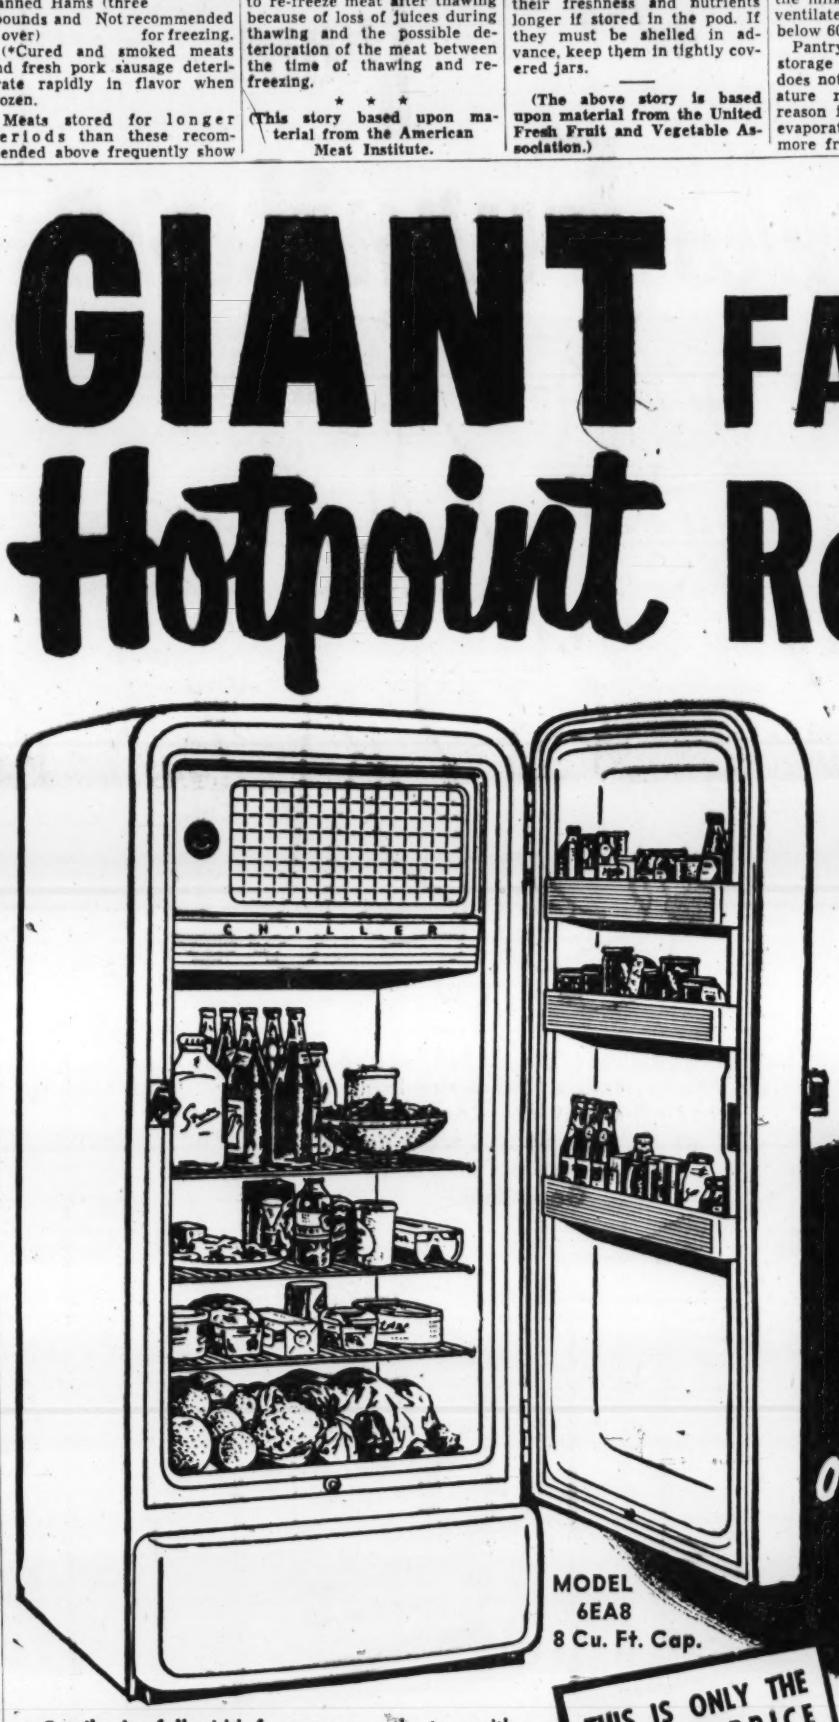

The recommended method of holding ice cream in a refrigerator that has a cold compartment not maintaining a zero degree temperature is as follows: Remove the ice cream from the carton and place in an ice cube tray. Cover the tray tightly with waxed paper or aluminum foil. Store in the part of the freezing unit contacted by coils and turn temperature control to "cold" setting. Ice cream that must be held at this temperature is best when kept only a few hours.

Cooking Frozen Pork Loin

A fresh pork loin roast can be stored in a home freezer for a maximum of three to four months. This cooked loin roast was baked from the frozen state and the meat thermometer was inserted when the roast was half-done. To guarantee the complete doneness of pork, internal temperature should reach 185 degrees F. on the meat thermometer. Bake in a 325-degree oven.

Gay Calypso Theme Emphasized At Annual Bachelor Club Ball

A BACHELORS' ball with a calypso theme Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club climaxed the 1955-56 social season and yesterday morning more than half a hundred debutantes considered themselves and their parents properly thanked for entertaining the men dozens of times since last year. The party was the seventeenth annual ball of the St. Louis Bachelor Club which is in the business of being nice to debutantes.

Dressed in their best party clothes and wearing the club's gifts, gold pins inscribed with their initials, and gardenia corsages thrown in for good measure, the girls, their escorts and sustaining members and their wives, arrived after 10 o'clock, some of them from dinner parties. They found a tropical jungle with a south seas native beating a bongo drum portrayed in the reception hall. The rest of the decorations and all of the entertainment were on the outdoor dance floor and adjoining terrace.

Fish nets, tropical birds and travel posters adorned the clubhouse walls and orange and yellow flowers such as are found on southern islands centered terrace tables.

At midnight dancing was interrupted for skits, which began at Bachelor Club parties back in the days when Philo Rockwell King Jr., was active and wrote special words to "South Pacific"

Susan Carr Is Married At Church

MISS SUSAN CARR, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Chambers Carr Jr., was married yesterday morning to Frank B. McMahon Jr., whose parents live across the street from the Carrs at 4537 Maryland avenue. The wedding took place at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel in Shrewsbury where a close friend of the bridegroom, the Rev. Harold H. Voelker, is assistant pastor. He performed the ceremony before simple arrangements of white summer flowers on the altar.

The bride appeared in a white summer gown of nylon tulle, a lace bertha accenting its off-shoulder neckline and forming brief sleeves. Her extremely full skirt and train was covered by transparent tulle held to a small crown of mixed flowers. Gardenias and ivy leaves composed her bouquet.

Soft blue cotton frocks were worn by Miss Cornelia Mc Mahon, the bridegroom's sister, who was maid of honor, and Miss Marie Vital Garesche and Miss Lexie Hill, bridesmaids. Designed with white dotted swiss yokes edged in lace, the gowns had bateau necklines, tight bodices and fairly full street-length skirts. They had sprays of white flowers attached to short veils in their hair and carried bouquets of white carnations.

The bridegroom, a petty officer in the Navy and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. McMahon, had as best man Second Lt. Edgar S. Stemmler, who came from his post at Fort Bliss, Tex. Serving as ushers were Frank W. Roth Jr. and Richard Kirschten.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Carr gave a reception at their home, 4542 Maryland avenue, where guests were received in the living room and served from a buffet table in the dining room which was centered with a large silver basket of summer blossoms. In the garden small tables were scattered over the lawn. Mrs. Carr wore a blue and black silk print dress with a small black straw hat and a corsage of white flowers. The bridegroom's mother chose a pale periwinkle blue linen costume with a cotton lace bodice. Her hat was a slim matching band with brief veiling and her flowers were white shattered carnations.

Out-of-town guests includ-

Schiele-Singer Home Wedding

THE garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Singer, 53 Picardy lane, Ladue, was transformed into a bridal setting last night for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Joan Carolyn Singer, to Air Force Lt. James Edwin Schiele. White marquees, held aloft by white pillars, covered the two brick terraces behind the house with an extension on the lower level sheltering an improvised altar before a wrought iron gate. Large arrangements of white summer flowers were massed about the brick posts at either side of the gate and candles flickered in tall hurricane lamps. Beyond the gate the free-form swimming pool, tinted green, was outlined with white standing Japanese lanterns and on the lawn nearby a buffet table, covered with a white marquee, was centered with a white cherub adorned with flowers. Only members of the families attended the ceremony, performed by Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, but additional guests arrived later to dance on a floor constructed over the tennis courts and covered with a white marquee.

The bride's attendants were Church Wedding For Miss Deuell, Robert T. Colson

ATTENDED by 12 friends, Miss Edith Carroll Deuell and Robert Thomas Colson were married yesterday morning at the Church of the Annunziata by Msgr. Charleville B. Faris. Huge basket bouquets of white flowers surrounded by woodwardia fern constituted simple altar decorations which were lighted by a few tall candles arranged at the sides. Bunches of white flowers tied with silk streamers marked every fourth pew down which the bridal party walked followed by the bride and her brother-in-law, Joeph E. Griesedieck, who gave her in marriage.

A luncheon and reception were held later at Mr. and Mrs. Griesedieck's home, 9851 Litzsinger road, Ladue, with whom the bride has lived for the last five years.

The five young women who attended the bride, Miss Donna Smith, maid of honor, and Miss Betty Hungerford, Miss Mary Pautler, Miss Joan Macken and the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Theo-

PROSPECTIVE BRIDES OF CURRENT SEASON

Hart-Adams Engagement Announced

MR. AND MRS. HOWELL ELLIOTT ADAMS, 3 Fairmont drive, Tuscaloosa, Ala., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lida Dabney Adams, to Michael Hart of Sherborne, Dorset, England, son of Mrs. Friedrich Carl Hardt of Cologne, Germany, and the late Dr. Hardt.

The prospective bride, whose mother was Miss Lida Crenshaw Waller of St. Louis, is the granddaughter of Mrs. L. A. C. Waller and the niece of Miss Elizabeth Dabney Waller, both of 5602 Enright avenue, and is the niece also of Mr. and Mrs. Dabney Waller of Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Adams is expected home in August from London, where for the past year she has been studying on a Fulbright scholarship for a Ph.D. in English. She did her undergraduate work at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga., and took her master's at Vanderbilt University.

Mr. Hart, a native of Wimbledon, England, is head of the history department at Sherborne School for Boys, Sherborne. He leaves Sherborne in September to become head of history at Shrewsbury School, Shropshire, England. He was educated at private schools in Berlin and at Oxford University.

Mr. Hart will go to Tuscaloosa to spend Christmas with his fiancee and her family and the wedding will take place there late in December.

MISS SARAH DEWEY HAINES, DAUGHTER OF MR. AND MRS. EDGAR S. HAINES OF BLANCHESTER, O. SHE WILL BE MARRIED AUG. 1 TO PFC. SAMUEL BROWNELL WESTLAKE III OF THE ARMY. THE PROSPECTIVE BRIDEGROOM IS THE SON OF MRS. JAMES A. HARNETT AND SAMUEL B. WESTLAKE JR.

ed the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morris (Patricia Carr) of Shaker Heights, O., and the bridegroom's grand mother, Mrs. Marion L. Klinefelter; his uncle, Marion L. Klinefelter Jr., and his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Zane White, all of Rolla, Mo.

The former Miss Carr, a member of old St. Louis families, was presented to society in 1954 by her paternal grandfather, Alfred C. Carr, at St. Louis Country Club. She is a graduate of Community and John Burroughs schools, attended Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg, Va., for a year and St. Louis University and before her marriage, was a kindergarten teacher at Community. Her other sister is Mrs. John J. Sheehan (Ann Yeatman Carr).

Mr. McMahon was graduated from St. Louis University High School and attended Boston College and St. Louis University, which he left for Navy duty. He and his bride will go immediately to San Francisco, where he will be stationed for the next two months, and then to San Diego until he completes his tour of duty next December.

Dorothy Swanson Becomes Bride Of J. S. Smith III

MISS DOROTHY ANN SWANSON became the bride yesterday of James Sheppard Smith III at St. Patrick's Catholic Church which was decorated for the occasion with large arrangements of white summer flowers. The Rev. John J. Gilsenan performed the ceremony after which the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest John Swanson, 8 Anfred Walk, University City, gave a reception at Le Chateau.

The bride wore a white Italian silk gown with short sleeves, an elongated bodice and a full skirt forming a bustle. Lace trimmed the V neckline and train. A lace veil brought from Dublin, Ireland, by Mrs. C. J. Haggerty of Los Angeles, aunt of the bride, was worn madonna fashion over her hair. Her flowers, white roses and pale pink orchids were arranged in a round bouquet.

Miss Sunie Cabanne Smith, sister of the bridegroom, served as maid of honor and Miss Lois Ann Mentzer, Boston, the bride's cousin; Miss Orlean Bick and Mrs. Robert Lee Capps were bridesmaids. They were in white lace gowns with short sleeves and scalloped necklines. Aqua ribbons were laced through the bouffant skirts tying in back in bows. On their hair they wore aqua hats, sparkling with rhinestones and trimmed with circular veils. Miss Smith held a bouquet of pink garnet roses while the bridesmaids carried similar bouquets of red roses.

Mr. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elsworth F. Smith, 5273 Westminster place, had his brother, Elsworth Reyburn Smith, as best man. Ushers were Dr. Ronald Tonsi, Joseph Matthews, Louis J. Liebermann Jr., and two of the bridegroom's cousins, Thomas C. Birdsall Jr. and Pierre Benoist.

Mrs. Swanson greeted her guests at the reception wearing an aqua lace sheath with a draped chiffon neckline. With it she wore a large matching hairbraid hat. Her flowers, pinned to her purse, were pink orchids. The bridegroom's mother was in a pink linen dress and a small pink hat trimmed with velvet ribbon. She wore a corsage of pink orchids.

Mr. Smith and his bride will travel south on their wedding trip visiting New Orleans and Florida resorts. They will live at 7912 Kingsbury avenue, Clayton.

Here from Los Angeles for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Haggerty.

Miss Nellie McColl Commager Becomes Bride of Robert C. Lasch

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Williamsville, Vt., June 30.

THE marriage here of Miss Nellie Thomas McColl Commager to Robert Christopher Lasch took place here this afternoon at the summer home of her parents, Prof. and Mrs. Henry Steele Commager of New York. In Williamsville for the ceremony were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lasch, 9797 Litzsinger road, Ladue, and his sister, Miss Catherine Lasch.

The ceremony was performed by President Seelye Bixler of Colby Junior College, New London, N. H., assisted by Col (ret.) Clifford Lore Miller, an Army chaplain, of Camden, S. C.

The former Miss Commager was graduated from Rye (N.Y.) Country Day School and attended Lady Margaret Hall at Oxford, England, and Swarthmore College. She was graduated this month from Barnard College, New York. Her father, who has been on the faculty at Columbia University, will be associated with Amherst College in the autumn.

The bridegroom was graduated in 1954 from Harvard College where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Now a graduate student at Columbia University, he and his bride will live in New York until he completes his studies. His father is an editorial writer for the Post-Dispatch.

Miss Sally Kent Married at Home

THE garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. King Kent, 15 Fleetwood drive, Ladue, in which roses and other pink and white flowers are in bloom, was the scene late yesterday afternoon of the wedding of the Kents' elder daughter, Miss Sally Margaret Kent, to Peter Zimmerman.

Mr. Kent and the bride, preceded by her sister, Miss Carol Ann Kent, maid of honor, crossed the patio and ascended a series of brick steps into the garden where they passed down an aisle marked by garlands of smilax held by six of the bride's former Mary Institute classmates, all debutantes of the new season. In one corner a low white iron gate was set between white wrought iron flower boxes, planted with blossoming pink geraniums and ivy, as a background for the ceremony, performed by Trent-Ratcliff June Wedding In Jasper, Tex.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JASPER, Tex., June 30.

MISS VIRGINIA RATCLIFF was married to William Franklin Trent of St. Louis tonight in First Methodist Church of Jasper. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Stewart Ratcliff; the bridegroom, who lives at the Montclair apartments, 18 South Kingshighway, St. Louis, is the son of Mrs. William Franklin Trent of Knoxville, Tenn., and the late Mr. Trent.

Two ministers, Dr. Franc L. McCluer, president of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo., of which the bride is a graduate, and the Rev. Clyde L. Woodward, performed the ceremony. White roses and peonies against a background of greenery decorated the sanctuary, which was lighted by many candles. Pews were marked by white stock and foliage tied on with white satin ribbon, and the center aisle was lined with seven-branch candelabra holding tall tapers.

Mr. Ratcliff gave his daughter in marriage. She wore white imported French chantilly lace with a scalloped portrait neckline embroidered with seed pearls; long fitted sleeves and a bouffant skirt with cascading bands of lace and tulle tiers forming a train. A small beaded headpiece held the bride's long tulle veil. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Stewart Mason Ratcliff, the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor; Miss Dorothy McIntosh, Brownwood, Tex., was maid of honor and Miss Ann Buchanan and Mrs. Howard David Burkhardt, Dallas; Miss Foree Peterson, Marlin, Tex.; Miss Josie Champion, Austin, Tex.; Miss Martha McMillan, San Angelo, Tex., and Miss Sara Lou Mays, Jasper, Tex., were bridesmaids.

They wore identical gowns of petal pink silk with long bodices and bouffant skirts and carried pink delight roses. Fleurs d'amour were added to the bouquets of the honor attendants. Junior bridesmaids were Betty Ware Stamps and Jacqueline Kerr, the bride's cousins, who wore replicas of the bridesmaids' gowns and carried miniature pink rose bouquets to match the bandeaux in their hair.

In addition there were two flower girls, Sheila Christine Ratcliff, the bride's niece, and Elizabeth Mellow Trent, niece of the bridegroom, who were dressed alike in white organdy frocks over pink taffeta, had tiny pink flower bandeaux and carried net bas-

Wedding in East For Miss Knapp, C. M. Driemeyer

MR. AND MRS. G. FREDERICK DRIEMEYER, 6 Southmoor, Clayton, have returned from Washington where on June 16 they attended the wedding of Miss Joyce Knapp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Swinney Knapp of Baltimore, to their son, Clark McAdams Driemeyer, a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy.

The ceremony took place shortly after noon in Christ Episcopal Church, Georgetown, the Rev. Dr. John R. Anschutz officiating. Mrs. John B. Sangster of Alexandria, Va., was matron of honor, and Derick Lord Driemeyer, a June graduate of Princeton University, was his brother's best man. Lt. (j. g.) John Pierson of Kansas City, Mo., and Lt. Sangster showed the guests to their places.

The bride wore a well-fitted gown of white cotton lace molded to the hipline, where it flared into a ballerina skirt. Her veil was short and her flowers, gardenias, were arranged in a spray bouquet. The Navy men were in white uniforms and Mrs. Sangster wore yellow and white cotton eyelet embroidery and carried yellow daisies to match those in her hair.

A luncheon at Pierre's in Washington followed the ceremony.

Lt. and Mrs. Driemeyer are spending their honeymoon in Canada. They will have an apartment at 210 Eighty-eighth street, Virginia Beach, Va., until September, when he will matriculate at Harvard Business School. A for-

Marjorie Lang, C. A. Scott Jr. Are Married

(Picture on Page 1L)

THE marriage of Miss Marjorie Taussig Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Samuel Lang Jr. to Campbell Scott Jr., took place Friday night at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Webster Groves. Bouquets of white summer flowers and lighted tapers at the altar and along the aisle provided decoration for the ceremony performed by the Rev. Alfred B. Seccombe.

The former Miss Lang wore a white embroidered net gown with a molded bodice, a square neckline and full skirt scalloped at the hemline. A white lace cap, jeweled with pearls and iridescent sequins, secured her veil and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley. A pearl and diamond necklace which had belonged to her great aunt, the late Mrs. Amadee J. Taussig, was her jewelry.

Miss Adelaide Ellen Lang was her sister's maid of honor while bridesmaids were Miss Susan Frances Denty, Mrs. Dennis L. Armstrong, Miss Elizabeth Dennison Stone and Miss Shirley Jean Maness. They were in nile green tissue taffeta gowns, cut on princess lines, and matching headpieces decorated with pearls. Their flowers, white daisies, were arranged with ivy and the honor attendant's bouquet was distinguished by the addition of blue cornflowers.

Mr. Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Alden Scott, 318 East Swon avenue, Webster Groves, had Barrie Scott, his brother, as best man. Ushers were Larsen Evans Scott, another brother; Robert Stephen Lang, the bride's brother; Donald Paul Buerecklin, Richard R. Clemens and Norman Stoecker. Mary Lynn Drescher, a cousin of the bride served as flower girl.

The reception was given at the Lang home, 5 Marshall Place, Webster Groves. White flowers and blue cornflowers adorned the house and Japanese lanterns in the garden were suspended from the trees and hurricane lamps arranged about the lawn.

The couple will go to Minnesota on their wedding trip. He will be a junior next year at Washington University School of Architecture. The former Miss Lang is a granddaughter of Benjamin S. Lang and the late Mrs. Lang and of Robert D. Drescher and the late Mrs. Drescher, who have homes in Cabanne place, and a great-granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hubert P. Taussig.

Miss Nelson Becomes Bride

MISS ELIZABETH VINCENTIA NELSON and Eugene James Savard were preceded to the altar of Our Lady of Lourdes Church by 18 attendants at their wedding yesterday morning. Large bouquets of white gladiolas and stock decorated the candlelighted main altar and were arranged on the side altars. The center aisle was set off by candles garlanded with greenery and tied with white satin bows. Msgr. Edward A. Rogers performed the ceremony.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Everett Nelson, 7316 Pershing avenue, University City, and the late Mr. Nelson, was given in marriage by her uncle, Victor Paul Nelson. Miss Maureen Dempsey was maid of honor; Mrs. Edward J. Desmond was matron of honor, and Miss Katherine Homer, Miss Harriet Switzer, Miss Ann Mueller, Miss Judith Ann Sullivan and Miss Mary Elizabeth Maloney were bridesmaids. All are former classmates of the bride at Villa Duchesne. Her nieces, Margaret Mary and Anne Nelson Russell, were junior bridesmaid and flower girl, respectively.

Robert E. Hannegan Jr. was best man for Mr. Savard, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O. Savard, 7113 Whitworth drive Affton. Ushers were Donald F. Burnes, Edward P. Gormley, John A. Gunn Jr., Frederick James McKenna II, William C. Sullivan, Frank E. Retkowski, Jerome G. Leber and John J. Steuby.

The wedding gown was white French chantilly lace and taffeta styled with a molded bodice with long tight sleeves and a scoop neckline embroidered with seed pearls. The bouffant skirt featured a taffeta apron, appliqued on the lace, and two taffeta panels flowing from a small pouf into a chapel train. The bride wore a veil held in place by a pearl-trimmed taffeta cap. She carried a small taffeta fan covered with lilies of the valley and stephanotis.

With the exception of the flower girl, all the bride's attendants were in waltz-length dresses of pastel blue taffeta. Wide alencon lace bands defined the hiplines and terminated in large poufs. The young women wore matching picture hats and carried small Mexican wicker baskets from which cascaded carnations, deep pink for the honor attendants and pale pink for the others. The flower girl was in a long blue taffeta frock with a white organdy overskirt and an embroidered blue taffeta sash which tied in a bow. She wore pink blossoms in her hair and held a nosegay of the flowers.

After the ceremony Mrs. Nelson entertained the bridal party and the families at breakfast at the Congress Hotel. She wore a navy blue taffeta and lace sheath dress and a white feather hat.

Mr. Savard and his bride will live in St. Louis when they return from their wedding trip to Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Miss Glenda Fay McCutchen Is Married At Church to Richard Manning Doub

ST. PETER'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH was the scene Friday afternoon of the marriage of Miss Glenda Fay McCutchen to Richard Manning Doub of Evanston, Ill. Bouquets of summer flowers adorned the altar for the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. William H. Laird and witnessed by members of the families and close friends.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Lex Glin McCutchen, 7369 Pershing avenue, University City, and the late Dr. McCutchen, was given in marriage by an uncle, Herman I. McCutchen. Her sister, Mrs. Clarke M. Rainey (Virginia McCutchen) served as matron of honor while Lyndon Whitlock III, Evanston, was best man. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Cyrus L. Doub of Evanston and the late Mr. Doub.

A chantilly lace and tulle gown was worn by the bride. The lace bodice, was molded to the hipline, where it met the full tulle skirt. A lace headpiece embroidered with pearls secured the bride's veil. She carried white stephanotis and moth orchids arranged in a cascade. Mrs. Rainey was in pale green organdy over taffeta. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and feathered white carnations matching the cluster of blossoms in her hair.

Mrs. McCutchen chose a pale blue cotton lace gown over taffeta while the bridegroom's mother was in white cotton embroidered in pink. Both wore corsages of pink garnet roses.

Wedding guests attended a reception at Mrs. McCutchen's home, which was decorated with pink and white flowers. Mr. Doub and his bride will motor to Maine on their wedding trip. They will live in Evanston.

Candlelight Wedding For Susan Selle, Edmund H. Blum Jr.

THE wedding of Miss Susan Ethel Selle, daughter of Mrs. Oliver F. Selle, 848 South Meramec avenue, Clayton, and the late Mr. Selle, to Edmund Harry Blum Jr. took place last night at Bethel Lutheran Church, with the Rev. George Loose officiating at the candlelight ceremony. Mrs. Selle gave a garden reception afterward at her home.

The bridal gown had a chantilly lace bodice from which a full tulle skirt, banded with similar lace, drifted into a cathedral train. The tulle veil was gathered to a seed pearl crown of leaves and the bride carried white stephanotis centered with an orchid. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Frederick Schmoll.

Pale pink embroidered organdy with pink satin cummerbunds were worn by the bride's sister, Mrs. Robert B. Stahlhut, matron of honor, and Mrs. David Kelce and Mrs. James Rogers, bridesmaids. She carried pink split carnations.

Mr. Blum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Blum, 7563 Buckingham drive, Clayton, had Mr. Stahlhut as best man and Gerald Selle, the bride's brother; Donald Schmoll, her cousin; Richard Zeppenfeld and John Graham, ushers.

Mr. Blum and his bride will take a trip to Chicago and afterward live in Manhasset Village.

Barbara Cutter Becomes Bride

ARRANGEMENTS of daisies, calladium leaves and woodwardia fern provided decoration at University Methodist Church for the marriage June 22 of Miss Barbara Wanglin Cutter to George W. Von Hoffmann Jr. The Rev. Jesse Thomas officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Osburn Cutter, 233 Crandon drive, Clayton. For her wedding she wore a chantilly lace gown with long sleeves, a scalloped neckline and a full skirt. Her veil was gathered to a tiny lace cap. A lace fan which had belonged to her grandmother, the late Mrs. C. E. Burford, was carried by the bride. Attached to it with antique satin ribbon was a cluster of orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Ann Katherine Cutter, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Edgar Burford Cutter, their sister-in-law, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Carol Von Hoffmann. They were in white cotton lace sheaths over coral taffeta. More of the taffeta formed bows at back extending in streamers below the hemline. Coral net encircled with flowers in the same shade and studded with pearls formed their hats. They carried sprays of periwinkle blue lilies of the Nile.

Mr. Von Hoffmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Von Hoffmann, 304 West Jackson road, Webster Groves, had a cousin, Donald Hicks, as best man. Ushers were Forrest Hamilton, Dr. Edgar B. Cutter and Ralph E. Sheets.

The reception was given at the University Club. Guests were seated at tables centered with red garnet roses in crystal bowls while the U-shaped bridal table was adorned with red roses and white lilies of the Nile.

Mr. Von Hoffmann and his bride will spend their honeymoon in Eagle River, Wis. They will live on Lanyard lane, Kirkwood.

Randolph-Groff Home Wedding In Late June

MISS MURIEL CELESTE GROFF became the bride of Eston Randolph Jr. in a private ceremony performed by the Rev. Clarence F. Stolz, rector of St. Augustine's Episcopal Church, yesterday afternoon at the bride's home, 7252 Clayton road, Richmond Heights.

Greenery and white summer flowers banked the living room mantel for the ceremony. The bride, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William C. Groff, was given in marriage by her brother, Richard T. Groff. She was gowned in ballerina-length white taffeta, accented by alencon lace and pearls at the neckline and on the skirt. Her veil of illusion and lace was gathered to a pill box headdress. She carried stephanotis and white orchids.

Miss Marian Groff served her sister as maid of honor in a pale pink taffeta frock with a matching cap, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Randolph, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eston Randolph, live at 405 Royal avenue, Ferguson, was attended by Robert L. Tiemann of Westfield, N. J., as best man.

After the wedding, a dinner was served at Rose and Crown Restaurant. Among those attending were the bride's sister, Miss Jane Groff; the bridegroom's uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Potter and Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Bull; Mrs. Elizabeth Crawford Skinner of Kansas City, and Mrs. Tiemann.

A small number of relatives and close friends attended an early evening reception at the Groff home.

After a wedding trip to the Ozarks, the newly-married couple will live in Richmond Heights.

The bride is a graduate of Maplewood-Richmond Heights High School. Mr. Randolph, whose maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Voluntine C. Turner, is related to old St. Louis families. An alumnus of St. Louis University, he served three years with the Army during World War II.

JoAnne Marion Hall, The Rev. W. R. Voelkel Married at Church

MISS JOANNE MARION HALL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Hall, 8 Cardigan drive, Ferguson, and the Rev. William Richard Voelkel were married yesterday afternoon at First Presbyterian Church of Ferguson by the Rev. Robert I. Long Jr., pastor, and the Rev. Dr. Elmer E. Voelkel of Fort Wayne, Ind., the bridegroom's father.

White summer flowers were arranged in bouquets before a background of greenery at the altar. The aisles were marked by white and pink daisy clusters.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned of filmy jusi material, imported from the Philippines where the Halls lived for several years. A matching cap secured her finger-tip length veil. She carried white daisies and lilies of the valley.

Miss Barbara Hall, her sister's maid of honor, wore a light blue frock with matching hat and carried a cascade of pink roses and daisies.

Robert Voelkel of New York was his brother's best man. Ushers were the Rev. Robert West, St. Clair's Shores, Mich.; the Rev. Robert Johnson, Evansville, Ind.; Carl Jones, Chicago.

The bride's mother received the guests at the reception given afterward at the Hall home in a shell pink lace dress, with which she wore stephanotis. Mrs. Voelkel, who accompanied her husband here, wore a light blue chiffon with stephanotis for her son's wedding.

After a Florida honeymoon, the newly married couple will live in Cleveland.

The bride is a graduate of Goucher College, Baltimore. Her husband is a graduate of Wooster (O.) College and Union Theological Seminary, New York.

Visiting in Florida.

Mrs. George Staats, 7004 Sutherland avenue, has departed to spend two months in Miami Beach, Fla., as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Helen Donahue.

Miss Susan Levy Becomes Bride

A BRIDE of last Sunday was Miss Susan Levy, whose marriage to Benjamin Uchitelle of Great Neck, L.I., took place in the garden at the home of her mother, Mrs. Moe D. Levy, 85 Arundel place, Clayton. Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman performed the ceremony.

The former Miss Levy wore a white silk gown heavily encrusted over the top of the bodice and short sleeves with silver embroidery and pearls. A cap fashioned from heirloom rosepoint lace belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Sam Weil, secured her veil. Lilies of the valley and a white orchid adorned the lace-covered Bible, also Mrs. Weil's, which she carried.

Miss Madge Lawrence of Ann Arbor, Mich., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Ann Eisendrath, St. Louis; Miss Elizabeth Mayer, Glencoe, Ill., and Miss Elizabeth Uchitelle, Great Neck, sister of the bridegroom. They were gowned in pink taffeta and held nosegays of pink sweetheart roses.

Mr. Uchitelle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Uchitelle of Great Neck. His mother is the former Miss Alice Cronbach of St. Louis and he is the grandson of Lee Cronbach, 46 Washington terrace. His best man was his brother, Louis Uchitelle, and his ushers were Leonard Drabkin, New Haven, Conn.; Joel and Jeremy Harris, St. Louis, and another brother, Robert Uchitelle, Chicago.

The former Miss Levy was graduated last week from the University of Michigan. Her husband, a student at Harvard University School of Law, was graduated last year with honors from Michigan University where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He and his bride will live in Cambridge, Mass., in the autumn. During the summer they will serve as counselors at a camp in Merrill, N.Y.

Bachelor Club Ball Is Late June Event

ones. Both young men and women took part and both were coached by Russ David, whose orchestra, in colorful costumes, played.

The girls led off with their series, and the assembled guests sat on the grass. In Bermuda shorts and straw hats the following sang "Man Smart, Woman Smarter," which was also the title of the show: Miss Jean Alexander, Miss Almira Baldwin, Miss Barbara Burton, Miss Carol Clarkson, Miss Anne Collins, Miss Talbot Leland and Miss Nancy Vogel. "Trouble With Bachelors," followed with Miss Clarkson, Miss Vogel and Miss Audrey Wallace starring.

Paper cleaners' bags painted with boy and girl figures and having holes for heads and arms, served as costumes for the next number "We Can Do Anything Better Than You." Participants were Miss Myrtle Boehmer, Miss Carol Jones, Miss Ann McCarthy, Miss Barbara Nixon, Miss Judy Olin, Miss Lucy Reuter, Miss Susan Spoehrer and Miss Esther Veron. Show-stoppers Miss Kate Borders, Miss Frances Brown, Miss Elizabeth Busch, Miss Mary Harms, Miss Vogel, Miss Vollmer and Miss Wallace, in cancan costumes with long black net stockings exclaimed "How Could You Believe Us" in the next song. In the finale, however, all the girls decided "There Are No Bachelors Like Our Bachelors."

The men called their phase of the entertainment "The Daze of a Bachelor," designed to depict the trials and tribulations of Henry the Typical Bachelor in St. Louis Society. The part of bashful Henry was taken by J. Vernon McCarthy, who opened the skits with "Another Party, Another Ball" and then shared with John Ring and John Otto in "I Think I'll Fall in Love Today." "The Cocktail Party" was the title of the next song sung by Mr. McCarthy, Mr. Ring, Mr. Otto and Vincent Flynn.

The next group pleaded "Dance with Me, Henry." The singers were John Wade, Jimmy Symington, Peter Muckerman, Otto Krebs, John Childress, James Lee Johnson Jr. and Loren Egley Jr.

In a number called "Reviewing the Troops," which had nothing to do with the Army, six bachelors reverted to typical types and, selecting Miss Shelley Bush from the audience, indicated their category as they danced with her. Oliver Parks Jr., was the freshman; Otto Krebs, the talker; John Wade, the Old Timer; Stephen Kelly, the Lover; William Flynn, who also wrote part of the show, the Drunk, and John Childress, the Rock and Roller.

Mr. Symington, playing his own guitar accompaniment, did a solo "Lord Got Tomatoes," and in the finale all the actors, in boater hats, sang a parody on "The Hostess with the Mostest on the Ball."

A bacon and egg breakfast in the dining room at 1:30 in the morning was served from a buffet decorated with fruit, flowers and a painted rooster.

happy vacations begin in a Chevy

CHEVROLET
America's largest selling car—2 million more owners than any other make!

You'll love to travel in it, because it loves to travel! When you get this Chevrolet out on the road, you'll want to keep going—and so will the whole family.

Of course, even in a Chevrolet the happiest vacations may involve one or two minor problems. Like fidgety small fry who want gallons of water and keep asking if you're almost there. The big things, though, are beautifully taken care of by this roomy Chevrolet's smooth and easy way of going.

The fact is, few cars at any price hold the road with a Chevy's grace. That idea about the best riding cars being great oversized affairs went out with the introduction of Chevrolet's outrigger rear springing and low, precisely balanced chassis design. With horsepower up to 225, the Chevrolet moves out like a whiplash, for safer passing. And with it you've always got that solid feeling of stability. Chevrolet's famous for its roadability and sureness of control. It set a new round-the-clock performance record at Darlington (S.C.) Raceway just so there wouldn't be any doubt about it!

Is it any wonder that more and more people who used to buy higher priced cars are changing to Chevrolet? You'll be happy to see how easy we're making it to start your vacation in a new Chevy. You've got 20 models to choose from. Stop by and pick your favorite.

MRS. ROBERT SCOTT GARDNER

Miss Susan Mitchell, Lt. Robert S. Gardner Married at Church

WHITE summer flowers decorated Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood, yesterday for the wedding of Miss Susan Jane Mitchell to Lt. Robert Scott Gardner, United States Air Force. The Rev. Charles Duell Kean of Washington, former rector of Grace Church, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Walter W. Witte Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Anne Hille Mitchell, 111 Cornelia avenue, Glendale, and Darragh McGirk Mitchell.

The bride was given in marriage by her great-uncle, Walter Lawrence Prehn of Dallas, Tex., who with Mrs. Prehn arrived from Europe yesterday morning. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Thomas Chenault Kingsley, who wore white over green organdy and carried white carnations and ivy. White organdy with an embroidered bodice was worn by the bride whose veil was held to a small cap. She carried carnations, roses and ivy.

Lt. Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Gardner II of Sedalia, Mo., who were here for the wedding, had James Millan as best man. Ushers were Leo E. Eickhoff Jr., Byron J. Masterson and Mr. Kingsley. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the parish house.

Both the bride and bridegroom are University of Missouri graduates, she this year with an education degree and he from the university and its law school, class of 1955. For the past year he has been stationed at Savannah, Ga., and after a wedding trip to the West Coast will embark on overseas duty in the Far East.

Miss Knapp Bride Of C. M. Driemeyer

mer student at St. Louis Country Day School, he is a graduate of Haverford School, Haverford, Pa., and Princeton, 1953. He is now attached to SACLANT Headquarters at the Naval Base in Norfolk, Va. Clark McAdams, his great-uncle, for whom he was named, was a former editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch. The new Mrs. Driemeyer is a graduate of the College of Notre Dame, Baltimore.

Miss Singer Bride Of Lt. J. E. Schiele

Miss Patricia MacArthur, Monsey, N.Y., maid of honor; Miss Anita Ehrman, New York, Miss Mary Prince, Paterson, N.J., Miss Katherine Stark, Louisiana, Mo., and Mrs. Robert Prosser, New London, Conn., bridesmaids, and Barbara Singer, sister of the bride, flower girl. They approached the altar along an aisle, marked with white standards of flowers, from the living room over the two terraces. Guests were seated on the lawn at either side while an organ placed outside provided music.

The young women wore white embroidered organdy gowns over icy mint green taffeta. The fitted bodices met wide green satin cummerbunds below which their skirts flared wide under panniers. They carried round bouquets of gardenias and green foliage. Barbara Singer was in white organdy tied with a green sash. She held a basket of white rose petals.

A simply designed white organdy gown was worn by the bride. Embroidered organdy roses and leaves outlined the round neckline. The cap-sleeved bodice was tightly fitted; the skirt was extremely bouffant. A band of the organdy roses over the bride's hair held her fingertip veil. She held a bouquet of white roses arranged in shower effect.

Lt. Schiele is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Schiele, 80 Arundel place, Clayton. His brother, Capt. Herbert S. Schiele Jr., an Air Force doctor, was his best man. Ushers were Lt. Rolf G. Thyrre, Greenwich, Conn.; Lt. Robert Bruce Aikens, Birmingham, Mich.; Daniel E. Singer, brother of the bride, and Peter C. Enslin and Marc A. Seldin, St. Louis.

Mrs. Singer chose for her daughter's wedding a cloud blue sheath of re-embroidered alencon lace with silk at the neckline flowing into a back panel. Her flowers were white orchids. Mrs. Schiele was in powder blue lace fashioned into a sheath gown. With it she wore purple orchids.

Lt. Schiele and his bride are flying to Jamaica on their wedding trip. They will live at Sumter, S.C., while he is stationed at Shaw Air Force Base there.

Carroll Deuell Bride Of Robert T. Colson

dore J. Weber, were dressed alike in pale yellow taffeta. The sleeveless bodices had V necklines in front and back and long torso lines banded at the hipline with wide gold taffeta caught to a bow at the back. Their ballet skirts were full and their slippers matched their gowns. In their hair they wore pale yellow half-hats with flat bows at the back and in their arms held bouquets of orange delight roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Griesedieck's three young daughters, Ellen, Ann and Judy, the first two as junior bridesmaids and the last as flower girl, wore short full frocks of pastel yellow organdy embroidered throughout in white flowers. The dresses had Peter Pan collars and brief sleeves and their headbands matched their small bouquets of yellow rose buds and white daisies.

The bride's gown was of ivory organzine featuring an elongated bodice with a wide square neckline and tiny sleeves of self folds. The simply designed skirt, set on at the hipline in pleated gores, swept into a chapel train, over which cascaded a full-length veil of Brussels lace, worn madonna style. Flowers for the bride were lilies of the valley and stephanotis.

Mr. Colson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur G. Colson, 6942 Dartmouth avnue, University City, was attended by Nicholas Piccone as best man. His six ushers were Donald Willoughby, Eugene Pautler, Edward S. Hock, Lawrence Sumner, Daniel McAuliffe and Thomas Deuell, the bride's brother.

Although the receiving line stood before the living room mantel, which was displayed with cornucopias of flowers and banked with greenery, the reception was held outdoors at the Griesedieck home, where a marquee extended over the spacious terrace and small tables, centered with flowers, were scattered over the lawn. Pots of white geraniums lined the terrace and white stock and roses decorated the long buffet table. Indoors the wedding party was seated together in the dining room where an abundance of orange delight roses, complementing the bridesmaids' bouquets, decorated the buffet and built-in shelves.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Williams of Milwaukee, long friends of the bride's family, were here for the wedding. The former Miss Deuell, who is called Carroll, is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Deuell of Chicago and the late Mr. Deuell. She attended the Girls Latin School, Chicago, was graduated from Emma Willard School, Troy, N.Y.

Mr. Colson is a law student at St. Louis University from which he previously was graduated. For their honeymoon the pair will go to New Orleans and Nassau. They will live in Manhasset Village.

Virginia Ratcliff, W. F. Trent Married

kets filled with flowers. Immediately preceding the bride and her father was her nephew, Terrance Patrick Ratcliff, ringbearer.

John Brabson Trent of St. Louis was best man for his brother. Ushers were another brother, Dr. Lucian Williams Trent, Knoxville; the bride's brother, Stewart Mason Ratcliff, Jasper, and the following St. Louisans: Richard Wesley Mellow Jr., James Kuhn Mellow, Lester J. Grigsby Jr., John Knox Nimock, Charles J. McMullin and Alan Cleve Schneeberger; Ward Winslow Markley and Robert James Sanders, Jasper, and Harold David Burkhardt, Dallas.

The reception after the ceremony was held in the garden at the Ratcliff home, where an orchestra played for dancing and hurricane lamps provided soft light. The receiving line formed before an arch of white ornamental iron, topped by pink roses and greenery, with tall wrought iron screens decorated with smilax and jade fern at either side. Small tables were decorated with pink carnations.

Mrs. Ratcliff wore coral chantilly lace and tulle with a matching tulle hat and white orchids. The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Darnall W. Morrison, Knoxville, was in ceil blue mousseline de soie and lace, a blue hat and orchids.

A large contingent of St. Louisans, not only members of the wedding party but Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wesley Mellow Sr.; Mrs. John Brabson Trent, Mrs. Franc McCluer and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Erickson, came to Jasper for the event. The John Trents will continue to Mexico for an early summer holiday.

Mr. Trent and his bride will sail on the Queen of Bermuda from New York to spend their honeymoon in Bermuda. They will live at the Montclair in St. Louis.

Miss Kent Married To Peter Zimmerman

James F. Hornback, leader of the Ethical Society.

Mr. Zimmerman was attended by his brother, Stephen Zimmerman, as best man. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Zimmerman of New York, who were here for the wedding.

The bride wore a white embroidered organdy gown designed with short sleeves and a low neckline sprinkled with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. A four-tier skirt was gathered to the long fitted bodice. Instead of a wedding veil, she wore a small seed pearl and iridescent crown. Her bouquet was white moth orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Carol Kent chose a white organdy dress over pale pink taffeta, the bodice of embroidered organdy and the full skirt of the plain fabric. She wore a band of pink daisies in her hair and carried a small pink umbrella basket filled with pink daisies and ivy.

The following young women, wearing summery dresses in pale pink, blue and yellow, held the smilax garlands: Miss Melissa Ann Hickey, Miss Elizabeth Barry Hobson, Miss Wanda Lea Bickel, Miss Leslie Camay Shepperson, Miss Katherine Tudor Thomas and Miss Sally Baird Dobson.

Immediately after the marriage service there was a reception, also in the garden. The refreshment table on the second patio, leading from the dining room, was decorated with pink carnations and huckleberry. Mrs. Kent wore a pink embroidered cotton sheath dress and the bridegroom's mother was in a light blue organza costume. Both had white orchid corsages.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman will go to San Clemente, Calif., on their wedding trip and will live in Los Angeles.

First Wing of $2,500,000 Shopping Center In Florissant

Perspective of first unit of the Florissant Meadows shopping center being erected at the southeast corner of U.S. Highway 140 and Lindsey lane for Jones Enterprises, Inc., owner. Arthur B. Rathert is the architect and R. K. & A. Jones, Inc., general contractor. Completion of this phase of the project is set for mid-November.

Shopping Center Is Started

Construction has been started by R. K. & A. Jones, Inc., general contractor, on the first phase of the proposed 15-acre, $2,500,000 Florissant Meadows shopping center at the southeast corner of U.S. Highway 140 and Lindsey lane, in the City of Florissant.

The first unit, containing eight air-conditioned stores, will have 33,000 square feet of floor space. It will be of modern design with exterior construction of buff-colored brick and a full-length, six-foot-wide overhanging canopy.

Tenants in the first wing, scheduled to be opened in mid-November, will be National Food, Gasen Drug, Ben Franklin, Ozark Paint, Kearn Baby shop, Goellner beauty salon, Knodel bakery and Excelsior-Leader laundry and dry cleaner.

Plans for the entire development are for 25 stores with parking facilities for more than 1300 cars. Arthur B. Rathert, architect, is preparing plans for the second unit and construction is expected to be started in September, with completion scheduled next summer.

Leases for space in the second unit have been signed by the W. T. Grant Co. for a 21,000 square-feet junior department store, Thom McAn and Mode O'Day.

All lease negotiations have been handled for Jones Enterprises, Inc., owner, by Jones Development, Inc.

Bought in Recently Opened Subdivision

The first home, built and sold in the Winston Park subdivision by the Parkchester Development Corporation, has been acquired by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Moritz. The home, of split-level design, is off Sulphur Springs road, in Manchester, Mo.

Designed for Multiple Use of All Areas

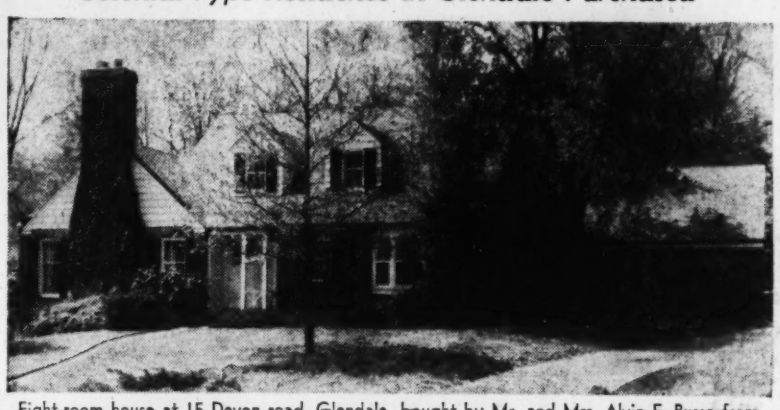

Scale model of residence under construction for Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Thias on Roosevelt drive, west of Lindbergh, across from the Thomas Jefferson School. The house, designed by Thias, an architect, is being erected by Joseph Gabriel & Son, general contractor.

Recreational Area Being Incorporated in 1200-Home Development

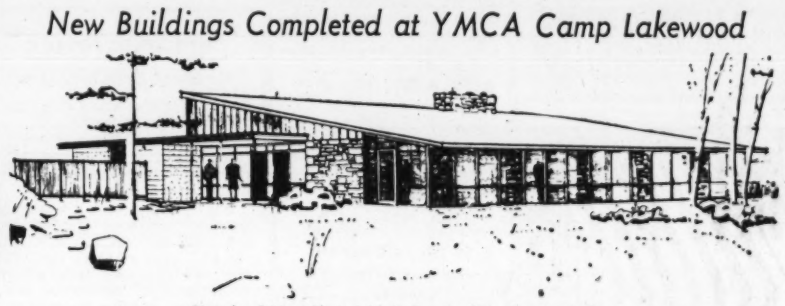

Architect's sketch showing part of recreational area planned for Carrollton, a $22,500,000 community project being developed by Fischer and Frichtel on a 410-acre tract on the north side of Natural Bridge road, just northeast of its junction with St. Charles Rock road. Community center building, bath house, and one of two possible fan-shaped swimming pools are shown. The center will include a park area with recreational facilities and children's play areas. Three churches, three schools and a 22½-acre shopping center are planned in the project.

Colonial-Type Residence in Glendale Purchased

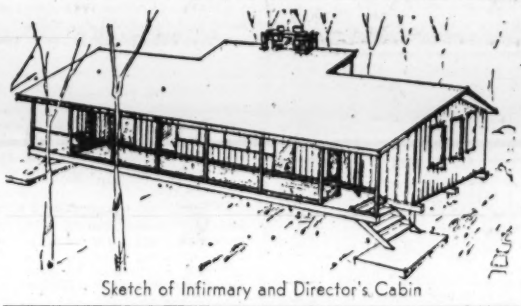

Eight-room house at 15 Devon road, Glendale, bought by Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Busse from Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heffernan. Mary Potter Love, Inc., represented the purchaser with the Dolan Co. acting for the seller. Busse is associated with the Ely-Walker Co. and Heffernan with the Lawton-Byrne-Bruner insurance agency.

New Buildings Completed at YMCA Camp Lakewood

Sketch of New Dining Hall Overlooking Sunnen Lake

Sketch of Infirmary and Director's Cabin

22½ Million Project Is UnderWay

A large community center building, complete with kitchen facilities, one (and possibly two) fan-shaped, olympic-size swimming pools with an adjacent bath house, a park area with barbecue pits and picnic tables, softball diamonds, children's play areas, tennis and badminton courts, are part of the features being incorporated into a new St. Louis county community being developed by Fischer and Frichtel, Inc.

Grading and excavating on a 410-acre tract are nearly completed and construction of the first of 1200 contemporary-styled homes is expected to be started next week. A display section is scheduled for completion August 19, when the $22,500,000 development, which has been in the planning stage for more than a year, will be formally opened to the public.

The development called Carrollton, is on the north side of Natural Bridge road, between Lindbergh boulevard and the junction with St. Charles Rock road.

Carrollton will be connected to Natural Bridge by a 100-foot divided parkway. The entrance will be marked by a flowing fountain, an off-center pylon and extensive stone fencing.

"Subdivision planners can no longer exist merely by building subdivisions. They must create communities, with all the facilities of a small town available to its residents," stated Edward F. Fischer, president of Fischer and Frichtel.

"The demand for middle-income housing still exists, but the attitude has changed markedly from the golden days of 1946. Today's buyer is searching not just for a house, but for a better way of living," he added.

The houses will be similar in design to those erected by the builder in his Barrett Brae, Kirkwood, and Frostwood, Berkeley, subdivisions.

Other plans available will offer a split-level style, a four-bedroom house, a three-bedroom version with an activity room, and an economy model with three bedrooms, one-and-a-half baths.

Many of the homes will come with a packaged set of plans, enabling the owner to add another room at a minimum of expense.

Nearly every home has been planned and oriented on its lot to accommodate an additional room. Radiant heat runs and electrical connections have been snubbed off along that portion of the homes so that the addition may be added at minimum expense. Construction is planned so that siding materials may be re-used on portions of the new addition.

Fischer stated, "The subdivision should have a neat, orderly look, and this one will. However, extensive land planning, calculated dispersal of the 11 variations of each of the four basic types of floor plans, plus the angulation of the buildings in relation to the lot lines and exposure to the sun, will give us the 'different' appearance we're trying to create in Carrollton."

Included in the over-all plan are three churches, public, Protestant and Catholic elementary schools, and a 22½-acre shopping center, which will act as a buffer zone be-

Church, School Buy Property Planned For Subdivisions

Plans for two separate residential developments have been changed due to purchase of one of the sites for a school and of part of the other by a church.

In the first development, property at 696 West Washington avenue, Kirkwood, consisting of 14 acres improved with a five-room house and a 12-room residence that had been used as a nursing home for a number of years, had been purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Schiereck for development into a subdivision.

Negotiations for the transfer were handled through the Harry Herring Co.

A few days after tenative approval of a residential development had been obtained from the Kirkwood Planning Commission, the R-7 School District voted to acquire the property for a future school site.

In the subsequent transfer of title, William L. Berthold, an attorney, represented the school board with the Harry Herring Co. acting for the seller.

In the second project, plans were for development of Wedgewood Terrace subdivision of duplexes by Edward Walker, Inc. and the Holland-Chamberlin Building & Construction Co. on a tract fronting on Laclede Station road and Big Bend boulevard.

The Church of the Nazarene of Maplewood became interested in the site and negotiated for the purchase at cost of the 358-foot frontage on Big Bend. Original plans for construction of 13 duplex necessarily were reduced to five.

Opens Subdivision

Opening of Juanita Terrace subdivision on Clover lane on the southside of U.S. Highway 66, in the City of Florissant, will be held today, it was reported by the Glen Ramsey Co., developer and agent for the development. Five three-bedroom houses of brick and redwood ranch-style construction have been completed and others are being erected.

'Hit-or-Miss' Land Planning On Way Out--New Method For Entire Communities

"Hit-or-miss" land planning is on the way out and is being replaced by modern subdividing methods which call for the building of entire communities with their own schools, churches, parks and shopping centers, according to a comprehensive study just released by the United States Savings and Loan League.

The 32-page booklet, entitled "Land Planning," was prepared in connection with the League's "Financing Better Communities" drive launched earlier in the year. The League, which is the nationwide trade organization for the 40-billion-dollar savings and loan business, launched the drive in an effort to upgrade the nation's new housing standards and prevent potential slums of the future.

According to Walter H. Dreier, League president, the basic objective of the booklet is to stimulate the upgrading of housing standards through sound, clearly illustrated principles of good residential land planning.

The study urges all savings associations to throw "their weight of influence on the side of value-protecting action for new residential neighborhoods in the planning stage."

"Today's land planning," the booklet states, "takes off from the basic truth that a house is not sufficient unto itself but is part of a neighborhood, which in turn, is part of a city or town. The enduring quality and value of that single property, therefore, depends as much on its surroundings as on its design and construction.

"The properly conceived subdivision is either a self-contained neighborhood in itself, or a part of such an entity. Its plan balances and integrates the needs of people housed in one area, so that the end result is a community of homes, schools, churches and other facilities."

Recommended Principles.

The booklet recommends, among other things, that land developers and builders observe the following general principles in starting new developments:

Select a site that has good natural drainage, that is near lines for water, sanitary and storm sewers, electricity and gas, and that is free from adverse environmental conditions.

Designate those sections of the site which are to be used for single-family dwellings, rental housing, schools and churches, parks and recreation, and shopping.

Establish a street pattern that is adequate for local driving purposes but which discourages through driving, such as one using curved streets opening up to through-traffic areas. Such a pattern creates "long" blocks which can be divided into well-shaped lots and pemits the siting of houses to create streets with pleasing variety. Strets should follow the natural topography.

Lay out residential lots so that they offer adequate drainage and useable land at front and rear for lawn and garden, and retain the best trees. Side lot lines should be at approximately right angles to the street or radial to a curved street and generally straight, while rear lot lines should be straight.

Average two-story houses should be on at least a 60-foot lot in the northern part of the U. S. and on a 70-foot lot in the south and west. Rambling ranch houses should be on a minimum 70-foot lot.

Vary the placement of individual houses on lots by increasing or decreasing the building setback and by making some variations in sideyards.

Planning Saves Money.

In installing utilities, run power lines poles down back of lots, with service lines brought underground into houses, put street light mains underground, and use a central sewer system in place of individual septic tanks, with storm sewers separated from the sanitary sewers.

The booklet emphasized that use of these land planning principles would lead to better communities and also result in substantial dollar-and-cents savings for home owner, lender and local government.

Benefits of good land planning include: Reduction of development costs, since fewer lineal feet of streets and curbing are required; elimination of the misuse of property; preserving the tax base by protecting property values, and the prevention of unnecessary municipal expenditures through the provision of suitable sites

Flexible Plan Features New County Home

Construction of a small house, designed for a limited budget, with flexibility of plan and multiple use of all areas, has been started for Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Thias on Roosevelt drive, west of Lindbergh boulevard, across from the Thomas Jefferson School.

Designed by Thias, an architect, the house will be on a two-acre tract of rolling and sloping terrain, overlooking a small valley. Preservation of the wooded setting was one of the prime design factors.

Bedroom, multi-purpose area and studio will be on the upper level with the southwest part of the building cantilevered over the lower level to give a view of the surrounding area. Roof framing will be exposed with all interior wall finishes of plywood on this level.

Living, dining and kitchen areas will be on a lower level visually extended to a terrace for outdoor activity. The lower level ceiling is plaster-furred for a lower portion over the dining area.

The house is to be constructed of wood on a concrete base with use of colorful porcelain enamel panels and redwood siding.

The butterfly-type roof is designed as a large folded plane caping the enclosed areas. Long overhangs on three sides of the house are partially pierced and were designed for sun control and changing patterns of shadows as the sun's rays penetrate the pierced part of the roof. Plans are for extensive use of large areas of glass except on the north side of the house.

The bathroom, heat room and storage closets will be the only areas inclosed with floor to ceiling walls. The lower level will contain a general living area with no wall separation between the kitchen, dining and living areas.

Joseph Gabriel & Son is general contractor.

New Subdivision Being Opened Today

Opening of a 15-acre subdivision in Bella Hills by the J. J. Kelly Realty Co., as builder and developer, is being held today. The tract is off Shepley drive, two blocks north of Bellefontaine and Chambers roads.

Houses will be of two-bedroom design with provisions for conversion to three-bedroom plans. Street lights, sanitary and storm sewers will be installed.

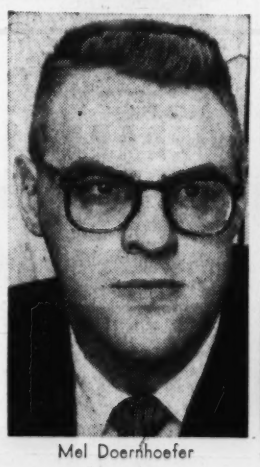

Sale of the acreage to the Kelly company was handled by the Dolan Co., sales and financing agent for the development.

Executive Leadership of Home Building Association Now Is Directed by Two Men

Full-time executive leadership of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, formerly directed by one executive secretary, has been divided between two men, one of whom has been with the association for three and a half years, according to an announcement by Gene Vescovo, president of the Home Builders Association.

"In addition, we are increasing activities within our organization and are participating in housing rehabilitation activities," Vescovo concluded.

Doernhoefer, a native of St. Louis, has served as Home Show manager for the past three Home Shows in addition to his duties as field representative. Educated in St. Louis public schools, he attended the University of Missouri from 1947 to 1950, after which he served two years in the United States Army.

Mel Doernhoefer

Robert J. DeSutter

A graduate of the American Society of Association Executives, he is a member of the St. Louis Council of Association Executives. He lives with his wife and son at 9536 Arban drive, Crestwood.

DeSutter, who has accounting and administrative experience, served since 1953 in the comptroller's office as chief accountant for the Ramsey Corp. A native of Minnesota, he came to St. Louis in 1949.

A 1943 graduate of Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn., DeSutter was awarded a bachelor of arts degree in business administration. He served with the United States Navy amphibious forces from 1943 to 1946. DeSutter is married and the father of four children. The family home is at 900 Woodbine drive.

YMCA Camp Dedication Set for Today

Official dedication of the new Y.M.C.A. Camp Lakewood is scheduled for this afternoon, according to Edmund C. Donk, camps chairman of the Metropolitan Young Men's Christian Association.

Ceremonies beginning at 3 o'clock will include a pageant, water sports and buffet supper.

Extensive expansion and improvement have been completed at Camp Lakewood, which is on Sunnen Lake, near Potosi, Mo. The program included construction of a new dining hall, two unit headquarters buildings for recreational purposes, a health lodge and a director's cabin. Fifteen camp cabins were moved to a new area nearer the lake front.

Y.M.C.A. officials estimate that approximately 680 campers will use the facilities during the summer.

Fabrics Store Moving From Easton Avenue To Space in Ferguson

Olian Fabrics, after more than 28 years in the 4400 and 4500 block of Easton, is moving to the new Hamiltonian Building at 207 North Florissant road, in Ferguson. Formal opening at the new location is planned for July 10.

The new and larger quarters include a basement store which will be used for additional display and sales space.

Other operations of the company will be continued at 107 West Jefferson, Kirkwood, and at 4476 Easton where the company has its Fabric Pound Shop which sells fabrics "by-the-pounr" as well as by the yard.

ALMOST CUSTOM-MADE BRICK RANCH HOMES AT MODERATE PRICES NOW POSSIBLE!

The sales on the second section of Reavis Gardens Subdivision are nearly completed now with only eight more houses to be sold out of the forty-six in the subdivision. A third section consisting of 103 homes is being planned now by M. Shapiro & Son, Inc., Developers & Contractors. David P. Leahy, acting as sales agent, completed sales on the first section of 55 houses, as well as the sales on the second section.

The subdivision is conveniently located on Reavis Barracks Road between 9500 Gravois Road and Union Road. It is only 20 minutes from downtown St. Louis and the bus runs on Reavis Barracks Road. The many shopping areas along Gravois Road are easily accessible to the subdivision.

All homes are brick ranch houses with full basement and attached garage. Quality construction and the variety of choices now possible by the owner present a nearly custom made house. The future owner has the choice of 6 different floor plans, 2 or 3 bedrooms, 1 or 1½ baths, basement door and picture window, large den; 2-car garage, and built-in stove and oven. The contractors are very proud of the large and efficient kitchen, with its many steel (or wood) cabinets, separate pantry, and eating area.

Quality construction is used from the foundation to the roof. All basements are poured concrete and reinforced with steel. In addition to quality, the house has been designed to require a minimum amount of maintenance. To accomplish this, brick wall construction is used along with aluminum windows, screens, and storm door, marble sills, genuine plaster walls, vinyl plastic tile floor in kitchen, clay tile walls in the kitchen and bath, copper water pipes and cast iron plumbing.

The subdivision is located in a high area and overlooks much of the surrounding territory. The standard lot size is 61'x125' and there are others which have larger frontage and larger depths, some up to 260' in depth. The subdivision boasts of concrete streets and full sanitary and storm sewers service. The adjoining areas consist of attractive and well kept brick ranch styled homes, assuring high property values for years to come.

To climax the theme of the variety of choices, the future owner has many price ranges to choose from. The houses begin to sell at $16,550 and go to $20,000. All homes are FHA financed and inspected, so minimum down payment is available, along with assurance of quality construction. To allow the future owners to give their houses the individual touch, all materials that require a choice of colors are selected by the owner. This includes the floor and clay tile colors, kitchen cabinets and formica top colors, interior and exterior wood trim colors, and of course, the brick and roof colors. The house is designed for the progressive home owner in all respects. The developers have found that at least half of their home buyers are previous home owners who needed larger living quarters; are looking for a newly built house with all the modern conveniences that are available today; or desire to live in a more beautiful and substantial neighborhood.

The completion of section Two of Reavis Gardens will bring the number of homes built by M. Shapiro and Sons, Inc., to over 300, and marks the sixth subdivision developed and built. The present company, represents the third generation of builders, (established 1892) who have built their reputation throughout the years on quality, value, and service to the home owner of North and South St. Louis. The company invites you to visit their furnished display house, and see for yourself the quality and value that is being offered.

New Branch For Savings And Loan Firm

The Jefferson Savings and Loan Association will open a branch office in Hampton Village shopping center Thursday, July 5, it was announced this week by G. J. Nooney & Co., operator and manager of the shopping center.

The branch will be at 42 Hampton Village Plaza, facing the main parking area of the center.

The new office, first branch operation of the Jefferson Savings and Loan Association, will feature unusual modern design and decor. The dominant decorative feature will be a sloping ceiling visible from the outside of the office. This ceiling, with an elevation dropping from 10 feet at the front to 8½ feet in the back, will have a checkerboard pattern created by rectangles of indirect fluorescent lighting alternated with colorful rectangular patterns of acoustical material.

Other design features will be in keeping with this contemporary theme, including walls, fixtures, and counters finished in natural cherry wood. The entrance will be constructed of aluminum and glass with the glass angled inward to prevent glare and reflection in order to afford clear visibility of the interior.

The office will contain approximately 2250 square feet of space.

Design and construction of the office were by the Don C. Musick Construction Co.

Jefferson Savings and Loan Association, with its headquarters at 3353 California avenue, was founded in 1939. Officers of the association are Lloyd D. Doerflinger, president; Andrew W. Kunneke Jr., executive vice president, and Robert W. Meyer, secretary.

Louis Alfeld, assistant vice president, will manage the branch office which will offer all of the services rendered at the main office.

Hampton Village shopping center is owned by Webb & Knapp, Inc., of New York, with St. Louis interests handled by G. J. Nooney & Co.

for schools and parks at a time when land costs are low.

"Finally," said the booklet, "the total effect of proper land planning is to take the speculation out of subdividing."

The greatest saving realized through proper subdivision planning and control, "lies in the avoidance of those difficulties and expenses with which home owners, taxpayers and even lenders have to struggle in later years, because the original plan failed to provide for adequate community needs.

"The overcrowding and inadequate sewer and water facilities, which today are creating a major crisis for so many communities, are essentially the result of little or no land planning in the first place, and of inadequate planning controls as new subdivisions have mushroomed.

"Ill-planned communities add up to tremendous economic waste and spell uncertainty for real estate investment. And on top of it all is beginning to be piled the fantastic costs of redeveloping the old urban areas which, having grown like Topsy, are now hopelessly engulfed in congestion and blight."

The booklet termed land planning as one of the most potent weapons against fast-moving obsolescence and neighborhood depreciation.

tween Natural Bridge road and homes in the community.

Lots in the development will average 75 feet by 125 feet. All streets will be concrete and curved. A divided parkway will have cedar rail fencing and rose hedges. Collector streets will be 36 feet wide and minor streets will be 26 feet. Sidewalks will be installed throughout the project.

The community center building, which will serve as a focal point for the community's activities, will provide facilities for dancing, banquets or small dining groups and meetings. Included in the building will be an office for the manager of all recreational properties.

"The home buyers will automatically become part owners of the real estate and other property comprising the recreational facilities of Carrollton," Fischer said. "Ownership will be limited to the home owners, with participation and use of the facilities available only to home owners and their guests."

Glaser Opens Self-Service Drug Store

Grand opening of Glaser Drug Company's new self-service store at Big Bend and Hoover, Richmond Heights, just two blocks south of the firm's former location at Big Bend and Clayton, was held the past week.

The move was made to acquire more space necessary for the self-service type of operation and additional parking facilities. The building, formerly used as a supermarket, was remodeled and modernized inside and out, including installation of a new front and air-conditioning.

Isadore Shank was the architect with Shulman Brothers Construction Co. as contractor.

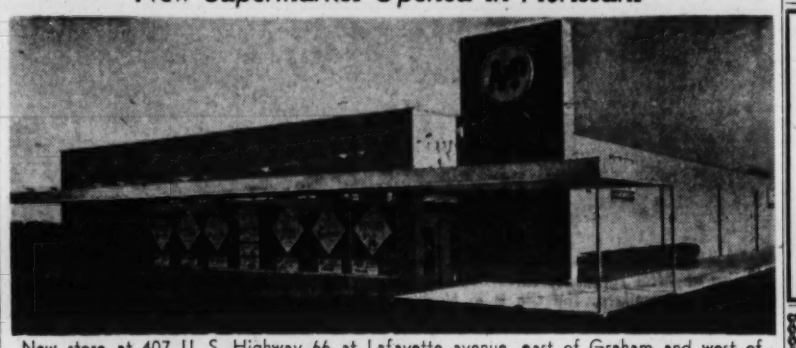

General offices and warehouse of the Glaser Drug Co., which was established 33 years age, are at 3949 Laclede avenue. In addition to the new location, the company has stores at Wydown and Hanley, McKnight at Delmar, North and South at Delmar, Kingsland at Delmar, Lockwood at Gore, Central and Forsyth, Hamilton at Delmar, DeBaliviere at McPherson, and 276 North Skinker.

Officers of the corporation are: Morris Glaser, president and treasurer; Herman Friedman, vice president; Samuel M. Glaser, vice president, and Doris C. Ehrhard, secretary.

Scale Model Houses.

Increasing numbers of builders are using model houses in their sales approach rather than selling from inventory.

New Supermarket Opened in Florissant

New store at 407 U. S. Highway 66 at Lafayette avenue, east of Graham and west of Florissant roads, opened Wednesday by the Great A&P Tea Co. The building was erected by Charles Vatterott with George Winkler and Frank L. Thompson as architects. Frank Finney is store manager.

Record High Volume In Contract Awards For Missouri in May

Contract awards for future construction in Missouri in May 1956 amounted to $60,032,000, a record high dollar volume for any May, according to F. W. Dodge reports.

The first five months cumulative total of contracts totaling $310,193,000 was down 4 per cent compared to the like period of 1955.

Individual May 1956 totals compared with May 1955 show: total building, $49,452,000, a 36 per cent increase and heavy engineering up 28 per cent at $10,580,000.

First five months individual totals compared with the like period of 1955 show: total building at $233,500,000, down 14 per cent and heavy engineering up 51 per cent at $76,693,000.

Libson Shops to Open Its Largest Store In Crestwood Plaza

Harry Lieberman, president of Libson Shops, reports that the largest of the firm's stores will be in the Crestwood Plaza shopping center, under construction on Highway 66 at Watson and Sappington roads.

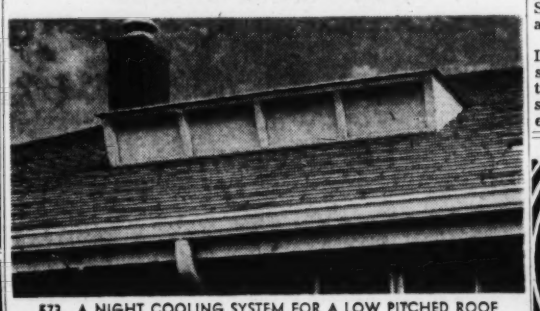

The shop will be similar in architecture and layout to the one opened by the company last September at No. 44 Northland shopping center. Shapiro and Tisdale are the architects.

Libson Shops, established in 1928, operate 19 stores from its St. Louis office and warehouse at 1209 Washington avenue.

The lease was negotiated by Louis I. and Milton L. Zorensky, owners and developers of the shopping center. The Millstone Construction Co. is general contractor for the project.

Air Cooling Your Home

573 A NIGHT COOLING SYSTEM FOR A LOW PITCHED ROOF

★ If your house has a roof with pitch too low to permit adding an attic room, the space beneath it may be utilized at least for a night cooling system. The photograph shows a successful installation, consisting of a ventilating dormer eight feet long with fan housed inside. Craft Pattern 573 shows how to add the dormer without making any structural changes in the roof that might affect its strength. It also shows the proper installation of the fan unit for an efficient cooling system. The dormer is built of exterior plywood and a 2-by-4. Its opening has a shutter for weather protection. The simple construction is shown and described step by step on the pattern.

574 AND 576 AN ATTIC FAN WITH LOUVERED HOUSING

★ The above sketch explains the system for cooling your home by opening windows to admit cool night air, and forcing out the warm air with an attic fan, through a louvered opening. Craft Pattern 574 shows how to build two forms of fans, one using an old auto fan. Craft Pattern 576 shows how to build the ventilating louvers in an attic gable, and how to install the homemade fan or a commercial fan.

★ Send 25 cents each for the Craft Patterns 573, 574 and 576; $1.25 each for the Bird House Packet (17 patterns), the Home Cabinets Packet (22 patterns), the Garden Furniture Packet (22 patterns), and the Senior Jig-saw Packet (21 patterns). Send 25 cents for new illustrated catalog of over 850 patterns available. (Copyright, 1956, by A. Neely Hall)

Seven-Room Residence in County Bought

House at 2466 Amesbury drive built by Robert H. Behlman and sold to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharamitaro. The site is in Northfield Gardens, a subdivision at 9500 Highway 67, just north of St. Cyr road. David P. Leahy was sales agent.

Optical Firm Expansion on Washington

The American Optical Co. has moved its St. Louis operations to expanded offices at 1709 Washington avenue. The company has maintained offices and laboratories for many years at 407 North Eighth street.

As part of its expansion program, the firm has installed new machinery for the prescription laboratory with provisions for future installation of additional special units.

The new quarters are air conditioned and provide for increased stocks, especially in industrial safety equipment.

James P. Townsley is manager of the St. Louis office and William G. Dickman, area zone manager of the area.

FHA Facts, Figures

The FHA has just released its new annual report (covering 1954, however) which shows that in 1954 the average buyer of a single-family house with an FHA section 203 load had an annual income of $5633. He bought a house valued at just about twice that amount ($11,024) and took out a mortgage for 82.6 per cent of the value. The house had 4.9 rooms, of which 2.7 were bedrooms. And the mortgage will run for 22 years, 10 months and 24 days.

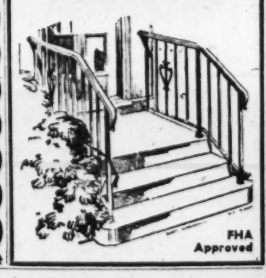

Motor Vehicle Production.
World motor vehicle production has totaled more than 200,000,000 units in the past 60 years. Of that total, over 156,000,000 were produced in the United States.

'Part-Time' Farm Prices May Increase

Whether it is the call of the great outdoors, or a desire of budget-conscious families to cut costs by raising some of their own food, the fact remains that the part-time farm continues to lure the city-dwellers of the nation.

This was disclosed yesterday when the National Association of Real Estate Boards announced that a part-time farm close to the city is expected to bring the same or higher prices in most areas during the next six months.

The association made this forecast on the basis of recently-tabulated returns from 220 real estate market areas of the nation. The semi-annual survey was conducted by N.A.R.E.B.'s division of research.

Currently, the migration of city folks to outlying farm properties is one of the factors that has made land increasingly difficult to buy around many cities and, where obtainable, "extremely costly," the survey found. Other factors in the land situation are the purchases by industrialists and builders of accessible land for plant and subdivision use. In some areas, the three parties—individuals, industrialists and builders—are engaged in brisk competition for available and suitable land.

In market areas in which part-time farms are available at all, the N.A.R.E.B. report found prices are the same as a year ago in 56 per cent of the communities, higher in 30 per cent and lower in only 14 per cent.

Sales volume of suburban "ranch spreads" also continued steady or advanced over this time last year. Increased sales were reported in 40 per cent of the country, the same volume in 51 per cent and lower sales rates in only nine per cent of the nation.

Looking ahead, realtors in 28 per cent of the nation expected the prices of part-time farms available to go up in the second half of this year. A continuation of present prices was forecast by 61 per cent, and only 11 per cent foresaw price drops.

LEAVES From a Gardener's NOTEBOOK

By Eleanor McClure

After so many years of continuous drouths, these fine summer rains are almost beyond belief. It is simply wonderful to have the landscape looking so fresh and green on the first day of July.

Deciduous shrubs have a buxom, happy look this summer and so do most of the evergreens. Hollies, azaleas and other broad-leaved evergreens have put out such a flush of glossy green leaves that the plants seem all of a sudden to be a full size larger.

Lilies and delphiniums have been making a wonderful show in perennial gardens, and this is the season for the blue and white cups of platycodon, the baloon flower. Correopsis and gaillardias make a splash of sunny yellow, while showy phlox provide white highlights, or masses of concentrated color in pink, red and purplish tones.

That drouth-defying flower, the day lily (or hemerocallis) is doubly handsome this year, when the plants are enjoying abundant moisture. In bloom this week are two of my special favorites—Evelyn Claar, a delightful flower in rosy pink, and Painted Lady, which has flamboyant 9-inch blooms in deep yellow, overlaid with bronzey tones.

Such lush growth and profuse bloom is a reminder that hardworking plants are now ready for a mid-summer snack. Perennials and roses, for example, may be fed with a balanced chemical fertilizer applied at the rate of about one pound per 100 square feet. Just scatter the fertilizer around the plants, and work it lightly into the top inch or fwo of soil.

As flowers are being fed, the beds may be tidied up, too. It is a good idea to cut back straggly stems, and to snip off spent blooms. When flowers are not allowed to go to seed, many perennials may be induced to stage a second blooming period. Spent tips of Canterbury bells should be pinched off.

Delphiniums often can be cut back to the ground. Hollyhocks and foxgloves may be cut to within a few inches of the ground.

Long season vegetable crops also respond very quickly when given a side dressing of balanced chemical fertilizer. The fertilizer may be scattered along rows of corn and beans, around hills of melons or squash, or beside individual plants of tomatoes and peppers.

Many gardeners in this area have been getting fine results from liquid fertilizer solutions, applied to the leaves. A quick-acting, shot-in-the-arm liquid fertilizer may be used at 10-day intervals on tomato plants and it may be added to insecticide sprays used for beans or cucumbers.

Generous feeding (but not over-feeding) pays big dividends in the vegetable garden, since it encourages plants to bear earlier and heavier crops. Vegetables that are speeded to rapid growth not only have a finer flavor, but they are more nutritious. Moreover, the well-fed plants tend to be more resistant to both insects and disease. For example, when tomatoes are given supplementary feeding during the growing season, the plants are less susceptible to "early blight," "late blight," leaf spot and other serious tomato diseases.

Since most of the short season vegetables have now passed their peak, old vines and plant remnants may be cleared away. Room may be made for seed for the fall crops or for a "green manure" cover crop of rye or winter vetch.

Fortunately, the soil is now in fine condition for planting. Corn, cucumbers and pole beans may be seeded this week and, if given a favorable break in the weather, should make a fine autumn harvest.

Summer-sown seeds germinate very quickly if they have plenty of water. One good way is to soak the seeds for an hour or two, and then plant them in a furrow that has been saturated with a generous application of fertilizer solution.

After the seeds have been covered in the usual way, they should be shaded with brush, layers of newspaper or an organic mulch, such as leaf compost. As a matter of fact, summer crops make much better growth when plants are protected with a heavy layer of grass clippings, spoiled hay, straw, or ground corn cobs or any similar organic waste. The vegetables should be watered, too, in hot dry weather. With just a little help they can get along until the autumn rains begin.

Among the vegetables that are especially fine in the fall are cauliflower and broccoli. The plants are delightfully tender and succulent in cooler weather, and at that season are less troubled by cabbage worms.

Mulching Saves Lots of Work

A heavy mulch saves a lot of work in the vegetable garden, virtually eliminating the chore of weeding and cultivating plants. Layers of organic materials, such as spoiled hay, straw, ground cobs or sawdust, also "insulate" the soil, keeping the ground cool and moist and encouraging plants to grow at top speed.

Garden Tips Suggested by County Agent

By PAUL M. BERNARD
St. Louis County Extension Agent.

By now most early vegetable plantings have been harvested or are being harvested and we should have all warm season vegetables planted. This leaves the maintenance jobs to be done. Actually these are the most important jobs in our garden program for if they are not successfully carried out, the previous time and expense put into the garden are wasted.

One of the more important maintenance jobs is cultivation. Don't let weeds rob your soil of moisture and nutrients which are needed for the growth of vegetables. However, do not cultivate deeply. Deep cultivation tears up the surface roots of the plants and is likely to cause considerable injury. Shallow cultivation, just deep enough to get rid of weeds, should be maintained throughout the remainder of the season.

Another maintenance job is the control of insects and diseases. We usually have plenty of insects every year, whether it is wet or dry. Diseases are usually more prevalent during periods of moist, humid weather.

We quite often have these periods about this time so it might be advisable to include a fungicide along with an insecticide, at least on tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and all the vine crops. Early blight and septoria leaf spot are the two most important foliage diseases on tomatoes, whereas anthracnose and angular leaf spot are the most important on vine crops.

Zineb or Captan are two materials which do a very good job of controlling the above mentioned diseases if they are used regularly, every 7 to 10 days. Remember, in controlling diseases, we must prevent the fungus from entering the leaf. To do this we must have the toxic material on the leaf to kill the fungus spore before it has a chance to enter.

Another garden chore which needs to be done about this time is the sidedressing of vegetables with nitrogen. Tomatoes should be sidedressed when the first tomatoes that set reach the size of a golf ball. At this time apply about a half-pound of ammonium nitrate or similar fertilizer for each 50 feet of row.

Apply the nitrogen in a band about 10 inches to the side of the stem or the spread of the branches. Cultivate the nitrogen in lightly. If you don't get a rain within a few days, water the nitrogen in so that it gets down around the root system where it can be taken up by the plant. Apply a second sidedressing of ammonium nitrate on your tomatoes about the time you pick the first fruit.

Cataloupes and cucumbers will respond to sidedressings of nitrogen when they begin blooming and again three to four weeks after the first application. Use a half-pound of ammonium nitrate per 50 feet of row applied in the same manner as suggested for tomatoes. Be careful not to get the ammonium nitrate on the foliage of the plant as it can burn.

Do not think that if a half pound is good, a pound is better. It may be enough to drop tomato blossoms or even kill the plant.

Appliance Company Named Distributor

General Electric Appliances Co. has been appointed distributor for General Electric television receivers, formerly distributed by the General Electric Supply Corp., effective immediately.

An all-new line of television sets was introduced to retail dealers June 28 and 29 in a preview meeting in the show room and warehouse offices of G.E. Appliances Co., 5021 Fyler avenue.

W. B. Frogue, manager, announced that A. E. Ellebracht, formerly with the Frigidaire Co., had been appointed sales manager for television sales in Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas and parts of Oklahoma.

3 New Distributors

Peter Hauptmann Co., Manhattan Distributing Co. and the Stickney-Hoelscher Co. were named distributors for the General Wine & Spirits Corporation, a subsidiary of the House of Seagram, at a meeting held Friday, according to Clyde Butler, sales manager.

Packard Sales Show Gain in St. Louis Area

L. W. Wheeler, zone manager of the Packard-Clipper division of the Studebaker - Packard Corp., announced that Packard sales in St. Louis and St. Louis county have shown a 57 per cent increase through June 10, over the corresponding period of 1955.

Further sales gains are anticipated as Packard salesmen in the St. Louis zone wind up a sales contest on July 9 with a barbecue dinner at the Waterloo, Illinois, Country Club.

Kovacs Gets Summer Show in Caesar Hour

SUMMER PROGRAM changes on St. Louis television stations this week will bring several new shows to the air. Among personalities who will have new shows of their own will be Ernie Kovacs, Charles Farrell, Russ Morgan, Vic Damone and Frank Lovejoy.

Ernie Kovacs

Kovacs, who has a weekday program on KSD-TV, will take over the Sid Caesar hour on KSD-TV at 7 p.m. Mondays for the summer. His wife, singer and comedienne Edie Adams, will be a regular member of the cast, and their daughters, Betty, 9, and Kippy, 7, will be seen from time to time. Among guests on the first show will be comedian Henry Lascoe and the duo-piano team of Ferrante and Teicher.

Charles Farrell's new show will start on KWK-TV at 8 p.m. Monday as the summer replacement for "I Love Lucy." Charles Winninger will play Farrell's father and others in feature roles will be Richard Deacon and Kathryn Card.

"The Russ Morgan Show," spotlighting both old and new hit tunes with Helen O'Connell as a regular member and with guest stars each week, will start on KWK-TV at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Hoagy Carmichael will be the guest star on the first show.

Ted Mack's "Amateur Hour" becomes a full-hour program on KSD-TV at 10:30 p.m. Sunday, moving from its former half-hour spot at 2.

"The John Huston Story," dealing with the career of the motion picture producer, will be presented on the Ed Sullivan show on KWK-TV at 7 p.m. Sunday.

VIC DAMONE will star in his own show on KWK-TV beginning at 8:30 p.m. Monday as a replacement for "December Bride." Spring Byington, star of "December Bride," Pier Angeli and Shirley Jones will be guests on the opening program.

"Man Against Crime," starring Frank Lovejoy, will start on KSD-TV at 9 p.m. Sunday as the summer replacement for the Loretta Young show.

Vic Damone

"Queen for a Day" on KSD-TV weekdays is changing time this week and will be a 45-minute show instead of a half hour. It will move from its former 3:30 spot to 3. "Modern Romances" will follow it at 3:45.

Brandon De Wilde

At 14, He's Been Actor For Half of His Life

By William Ewald

NEW YORK, June 30 (UP)—

BRANDON DE WILDE, who at 14 has seven years of acting behind him, wishes people would stop hanging the "brat" tag on child actors.

"People have the wrong idea about professional kids," he said as he squirmed in a hard-backed seat at a rehearsal hall. "They think we're just naturally brats because we're actors. The difference between kids in this business and grownups is that grownups get right down to business. Kids like to fool around for a little while. I think you might say," he added, "that kids are a little disorganized."

Brandon has few thespian worlds to conquer. He scored in such Broadway hits as "Member of the Wedding" and "Mrs. McThing," was praised for his role in the movie, "Shane," and has been seen in many TV dramatic shows. He also had his own TV series, "Jamie," for a while.

Many offers are turned down. "We say No more than Yes to the scripts we get," he said. "We get a lot of crummy scripts."

* * *

BY "WE" BRANDON means his parents, Fredric and Eugenia. His father is a stage manager. "When a script comes in," Brandon said, "first my parents read it and then if they like it, I read it. Then if I like it, everybody negotiates. They yak and yak and yak for a couple of months and then I may do it."

Brandon, who made his acting debut in a second-grade public school health play in which he played a carrot, attends a private school in Manhattan.

When he grows up, he said, he wants to be an actor-director-producer-writer. "There's also something else I can do when I get older—play juvenile leads in unsympathetic roles. That's something I'm really looking forward to."

Incidentally, Brandon's last name is pronounced Duh-will-duh.

Brandon DeWilde . . . Says professional children are not brats.

All St. Louis TV stations are now on Central Daylight Saving time. Listings of nearby cities are Central Standard Time except for KHQA-TV, WGEM, WTVP and WCIA-TV.

TV's Queen of the West

HOLLYWOOD, June 30

OUT OF THEIR television, movie, radio and rodeo activities, Dale Evans and her husband, Roy Rogers, with whom she co-stars, have an income estimated at $2,000,000 a year. But they also have a heavy outgo—they are known as extremely generous contributors to widespread religious and charitable causes.

One of their chief charities is to a foundation they themselves set up, out of their own heartbreak, to help crippled and retarded children. In 1952, Robin, the only child born to them, died at the age of two. She was a mentally retarded child. Dale, who like Roy is a deeply religious person, wrote a book, "Angel Unaware," about Robin and it was on the best-seller list for a long time. Income from this book and a later one, "My Spiritual Diary," goes into their foundation.

While they only had one child of their own, their big white stucco ranch house at Encino, Calif., is full of children. Roy had three of his own when his first wife died, and they have three adopted children.

Dale, who married Roy in 1947, was born in Uvalde, Tex., and went to school in Osceola, Ark. Her parents encouraged her to take piano, voice and dancing training and she made her first public appearance by singing in a church at the age of three. After school days, she worked as a stenographer in Memphis, and it was there that her career as a radio singer began. Later she was featured in an early-morning program originating in Dallas.

From Dallas she went to Chicago to become a singer with the Anson Weeks band, and out of this came NBC network employment as a singer and a movie contract. She appeared with Rogers in more than 30 pictures, and acquired the title "Queen of the West." Roy is known as "King of the Cowboys."

The Television Letter Box

Letters Intended For This Column Should Be Addressed To Television Editor, TV Magazine, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis 1, Mo.

TOO BAD Howdy Doody was transferred from a Monday-through-Friday show to Saturday. We mothers will miss that half hour of peace every day.

A MOTHER

I enjoy the Ted Mack program so much. Why isn't it on for a full hour, as it was before? And, please, not so loud music on western stories.

MRS. PEARL LIVINGSTON

(Ted Mack's "Amateur Hour" is now scheduled for a full hour, from 10:30 to 11:30 p.m. Sundays on KSD-TV.—Editor).

* * *

Thanks for the good news of the return of Lawrence Welk and his orchestra July 15. We enjoy his show and hope he will be on for many years to come.

E. L. MEYERS

I agree with the letter of the teen-agers from Arnold, Mo. There should be at least one program set aside for teen-agers, with singers like Fats Domino and Elvis Presley—especially Elvis Presley.

PEGI, Fenton, Mo.

Repeating "The Bamboo Cross" is one of the best decisions NBC or KSD-TV ever made. Too many repeated programs are not worth a second look, but this is one well worth watching a second time.

GRATEFUL

Studio Notes and Gossip

THE ANNUAL All-Star baseball game July 10 will be telecast by KSD-TV. . . . Actress Ethel Owen makes a living playing hateful mothers-in-law — as Jackie Gleason's mother-in-law in "Honeymooners" and as Grace Burton in radio's "Second Mrs. Burton." She says she "adores those parts — they give me a chance to get all the venom out of my system. . . . Robert Young of "Father Knows Best" has a complete collection of his old movies on 16mm film. . . . The Andrews Sisters have patched up their differences and are considering a number of TV offers, including a show of their own. . . . "Cisco Kid" and "Mr. District Attorney" have been sold to Japanese television interests for showing in Japan. . . . "I Love Lucy," now five years old, has grossed $20,000,000. . . . NBC-TV's "Producers' Showcase" will spend about $400,000 on each show next fall. . . . The U.S. has 450 TV stations in 300 cities with more than 36,000,000 TV sets. There are 124,000,000 radios. . . . Victor Riesel, columnist blinded by acid, has his own TV program on a New York station. . . . Walter Winchell probably will have a half-hour variety show on NBC-TV in the fall. . . . Eddie Cantor, at 64, says he will never return to a regular TV show. . . . Jack Benny, who made his TV debut in England recently, has been invited back for a return appearance.

Last year, 21,237 maternity cases represented one out of every 5 St. Louis Blue Cross Plan admissions. A total of $2,000,454, was paid for hospital care of Blue Cross mothers and babies and $435,500 was paid by Blue Shield for obstetrical service. Hospital care, made widely available by Blue Cross, and obstetrical service through Blue Shield, have been major factors in making childbirth safer and easier for both mother and child.

Most people join Blue Cross and Blue Shield through a group where they work. If your company doesn't have a Blue Cross - Blue Shield group, find out how you can help get one started.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

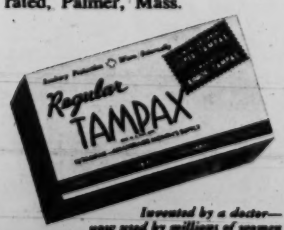

What's the "Princess" doing Saturday?

Starry-eyed, she's just slipped into her most divine dance dress. In the morning, she was swimming; in the afternoon, there was a picnic.

All of these activities were part of a wonderful week-end that could have so easily been trying and embarrassing. For every smart girl knows that you can't be at your best—you can't even do all the things you want to do—if your sanitary protection is a constant, bulky, cumbersome, frustrating reminder!

Internally-worn Tampax is both invisible and unfelt when in place. Prevents odor from forming. Is easy to carry, easy to insert and change, easy to dispose of. In fact, many girls insist cool, comfortable Tampax almost makes them forget when it's a "problem day" for them. Ask for your choice of 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior) at any drug or notion counter. Be at your best no matter what time of the month it is. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

I'll always remember . . .

JULY 4, 1919

by JACK DEMPSEY

Thirty-seven years ago this Wednesday, I fought Jess Willard for the World's Heavyweight Championship at Toledo, Ohio. It was a stiflingly hot day. It also was a day on which I saw a lifelong dream come true — and was left with a curious feeling of emptiness and disillusionment.

In the huge wooden ampitheater on the city's outskirts, the temperature hovered around 110 degrees. I was an almost unknown Salt Lake City fighter of 24, a 4-5 underdog who'd been laughed at all his youth for his stubborn ambition to become heavyweight champion. Outweighed by 65 pounds and topped by six inches, I surprised a lot of fight fans and writers by toppling the 245-pound, 6' 6" defender from a title he'd held for four years.

I can still see the look of bewildered disbelief spreading across Jess' broad face, as he went down seven successive times in the first round; his glazed eyes staring dazedly across the ring when his handlers threw in a towel to signify he couldn't start the fourth.

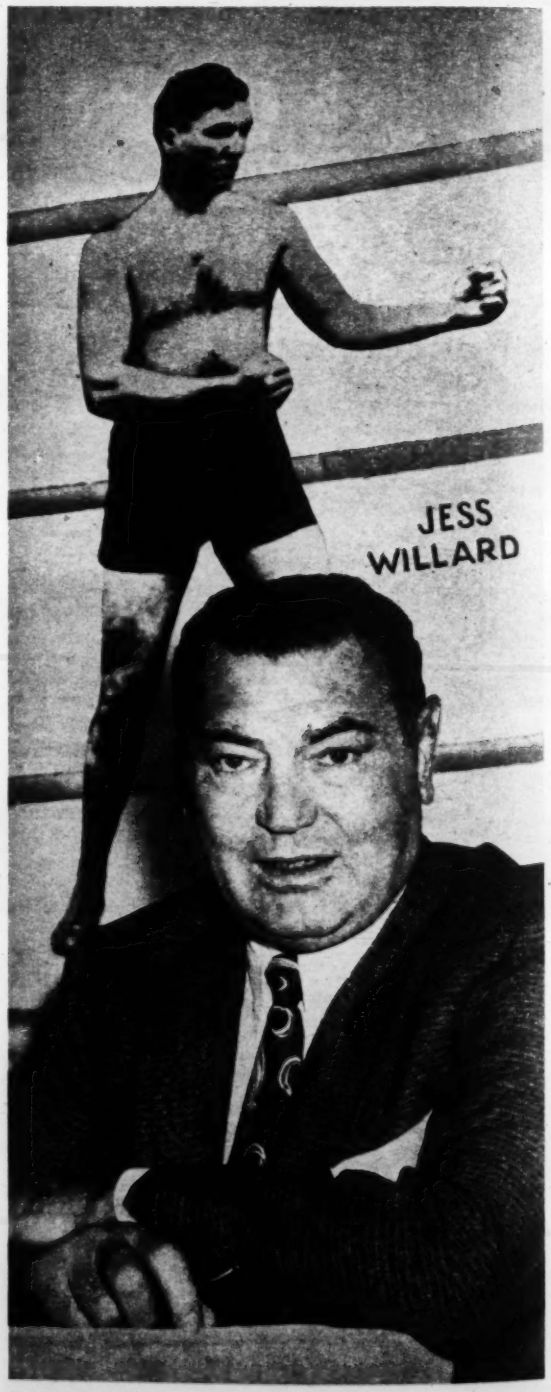

That night there was a big banquet in the Secor Hotel, with lots of toasts and speech-making. I finally got to bed around 2 a.m., dropped off to sleep almost at once, then awoke with a start. I'd had a strange, disturbing nightmare. I dreamed I'd been fighting and had just been knocked out.

I couldn't get back to sleep, so I dressed and went down to the street, where newsboys were still shouting their extras. I bought the papers and returned to my room.

Reading through accounts of the fight, I began to realize that success didn't taste the way I'd thought it would. I'd won a world's championship; so what? I'd spent so much of my life learning to fight that I'd barely absorbed enough schooling to spell my own name. At the banquet, I'd had to watch others to know which fork to use. At a time when everyone wanted to meet and talk to me, I was painfully aware that I'd never even heard of books they referred to, or developed any appreciation of art or music. All I could discuss intelligently was fighting!

My thoughts turned to Willard, and I found myself feeling genuinely sorry for big Cowboy Jess — sorry that success so often has to be achieved at the expense of someone else. And suddenly I began to wonder if any victory could be really complete — so complete that it wouldn't leave one with a vague sense of defeat.

Life has been good to me since then. But I still wonder. ■

180 BIRTHDAYS AGO . . . on July 4, 1776 . . . something new was born in the world. Its name: the United States of America. Today, every schoolboy knows that date — but not every American knows the true meaning of our country and what it stands for. To the confused, the doubting, the ignorant, a modest group called the American Heritage Council offers a fresh way to explore the Spirit of '76. The secret is almost laughably simple — people just sit down together and talk — but the results are astonishing. To see what this can mean to you and your community, turn to p. 6.

Good news for barbecues:

Delicate Wesson Oil is the only one you need for sauce . . . . . and for salad . . . . . and dessert

What better helper for barbecues—indoors or out. You just pour Wesson Oil for Jiffy Sauce. Wesson's matchless delicacy brings out all the lively barbecue flavors. Homemade Wesson sauce saves money, and naturally no bought sauce could match its fresh-made goodness.

In just 1 minute you make fresh Wesson dressing—a light, bright dressing especially tempting over salads served with spicy barbecue. Combine 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, ½ cup vinegar, 1½ cups Wesson Oil, and shake well.

For flaky, tender Stir-N-Roll tarts, Wesson Oil is your instant shortening. It pours to measure and stirs in. No messy shortening to measure or cut in. Wesson baking is the easy, modern way to old-fashioned flavor. None lighter, finer and fresher than Wesson in all the world.

WESSON JIFFY BARBECUE SAUCE

½ cup Wesson Oil
¾ cup chopped onion
¾ cup tomato ketchup
¾ cup water
⅓ cup lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Cook onion till soft in hot Wesson Oil. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer 15 minutes. Sear steak on both sides, then brush with sauce each time steak is turned. Serve with remaining sauce.

This fresh, flavorful sauce is excellent, too, with chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs and other barbecue favorites.

STIR-N-ROLL FRUIT TARTS

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, such as Gold Medal
1½ teaspoons salt
½ cup Wesson Oil
¼ cup cold milk
Sweetened fresh or frozen fruit for filling
Whipped cream for topping

Mix flour, salt. Pour Wesson Oil and milk into measuring cup (don't stir); mix with flour. Press into ball, flatten slightly. Roll pastry ⅛-inch thick between waxed paper. (Lightly dampen table top to prevent slipping.) Cut into 3½-inch rounds. Line 12 tart pans with pastry. Trim and flute edges, prick entire surface with fork. Bake at 425° (hot oven) about 10 minutes, until a delicate brown. Fill with sweetened fruit and top with whipped cream.

TRIUMPH OVER TOOTH DECAY

Crest Toothpaste with Fluoristan strengthens teeth themselves. You brush Crest on... it actually goes in... and locks decay out

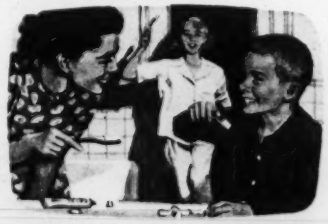

Fluoristan® is Procter & Gamble's exclusive stannous fluoride formula —proven the greatest decay-preventive in any toothpaste.

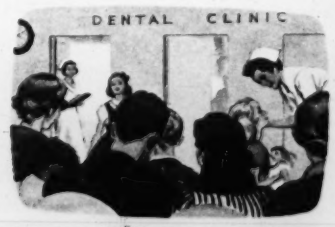

Miracle of the Towns Without Toothaches. For years, children growing up in certain Western towns were virtually without cavities. Then science learned why: nature's decay-preventive, fluoride, was present in their drinking water!

Science Long Tried to Capture Fluoride —only medically approved preventive of decay—in a toothpaste. At last, after years of research, university scientists discovered Fluoristan—the greatest decay-preventive in any toothpaste.

Fluoristan Makes Possible Crest. Without Fluoristan, you cannot get maximum protection against tooth decay with a toothpaste. You brush Crest on . . . it actually goes in . . . and locks decay out, for adults and for children, 6 and over.

Dentists Tested Crest for three years with 5,673 people. No toothpaste stops all decay—but Crest set decay-prevention records never approached by any other toothpaste. Thus Crest marks a new era . . . triumph over tooth decay everywhere.

IMPORTANT

Crest with Fluoristan is the only toothpaste ever developed that makes possible a major reduction in tooth decay for everyone, everywhere, by strengthening tooth enamel. Thereby, Crest marks a turning point in man's age-old struggle against this almost universal disease.

You brush Crest on . . . it actually goes in . . . and locks decay out. Each time you brush Crest on your teeth, Fluoristan builds new resistance to decay into tooth enamel. In this way, Crest actually fortifies and strengthens teeth to lock out cavities—the only toothpaste proved to do so. With Crest, your family approaches the long dreamed-of day of healthy, decay-free teeth.

JULY 1, 1956

As carpenter Daniel Rucinski (r.) studies the Declaration of Independence, others wait their turn to talk in free-for-all discussion of

20th CENTURY 'TOWN MEETINGS':

A new way to learn about liberty

On our 180th birthday, Americans relive the spirit of '76 by ED KIESTER

CHICAGO.

THIS WEDNESDAY the U.S. celebrates its 180th birthday. And around hundreds of tables here and thousands more through the Midwest, Americans like those on these pages — people named Rucinski and Cohen and Bottomley — are living again the stormy days that followed July 4, 1776.

Brandishing copies of the Declaration of Independence, they argue vigorously about whether the 13 colonies should sever ties with the British Crown. In a few weeks they will be just as vehement about the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and other great documents. The names of Hamilton and Jefferson and Washington will be lauded on the one hand, denounced on the other.

In these give-and-take discussions, participants are gaining new insight into America — from other Americans like themselves. There are no teachers or instructors or paid speakers. Opinions are aired freely by everyone. The result is a kind of 20th-century town meeting or cracker-barrel discussion devoted to the living America.

And this was just what a handful of men had in mind when, in 1950, they decided that the way to combat Communism was to talk about America. History, they felt, was on the side of democracy. Any American familiar with the historical facts — anyone who had experienced them — could not be tempted by any other ideology. To spread this gospel, they set up a tiny organization, the American Heritage Council, with a two-man staff and a $30,000 budget.

How well the Council has succeeded can be measured statistically: in the past year, more than 3,000 such discussions have been held in Illinois alone, with 145,000 persons participating. The groups have included labor unions, veterans' organizations, public-school students, fraternal and social clubs, professional associations, even one at the Stateville Penitentiary (where observers praised the high level of the inmates' discussions).

And this fall, AMVETS will launch a nation-wide program of discussions called "Your Legacy — USA." The pilot project already is functioning in Cook County here. Eight Midwestern states have started similar operations. Beyond the borders of Illinois the state departments of the American Legion, one of the first groups to adopt the Americanism program, have launched discussions in Florida and Washington. Inquiries have come in from New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota, Montana.

In all these places, "education for freedom" works much the same way. A favorite technique is for the moderator to hand out copies of the Declaration, tell the members to imagine the date is July 5, 1776, and that he is the "town clerk" reporting on yesterday's doings in Philadelphia. He asks them to vote whether to accept the Declaration, reminding them that such a vote is treason to the British crown, and that they are voting for such radical principles, for 1776, as "all men are created equal."

"But I don't believe that all men are created equal," someone is apt to remark, as one woman did at a recent meeting, and the group is off and running. The theme may veer from equality to secession to voting rights to the personalities of the Founding Fathers. Sometimes it can get quite heated. Recently, in a group of union representatives and teachers, a young teacher protested against the Revolution on conscientious grounds. "Killing is always wrong," she said. "There's always the power of moral example and prayer." A young carpenter shot back, "Couldn't you at least pray that King George would drop dead?"

With large groups, the session may break up into a number of tables of 10 persons each, with a spokesman to represent each table's viewpoint in the final meeting-wide discussion. The meeting has a moderator, but his function is not to force-feed material. Instead, he tries to keep the discussion on an even keel, the Revolution — starting point for a typical "Education for Freedom" program in Chicago.

to draw out the shy participants and to needle the speech-makers. Moderators, all volunteers who have been given preparation by the Council, are repeatedly amazed by the fresh thinking and shrewd grasp of ideas shown by the groups. They find, for instance, that Alexander Hamilton comes off considerably better in discussion than in textbooks, despite his alleged mistrust of the people. Even laborers defend many of his policies.

One reason, the Council's directors believe, is that the fathers of the country become flesh-and-blood persons during the discussions. College students are fascinated to discover that, except for Franklin and Washington, the Revolutionary leaders were mostly young men. The heroes of folklore generally emerge with more stature than before. "Say, those guys that made America really knew what they were doing," one meat-cutter summed up this admiration recently.

Some groups limit themselves to dissecting the Declaration and the Constitution — the most basic documents. But others become fired with zeal and dip into the Monroe Doctrine, the Emancipation Proclamation, Woodrow Wilson's 14 Points. Others have carried their studies right up to the present day, attempting to measure present policies by their lessons in fundamental Americanism.

Originally, the program was not aimed at schools. But then Mrs. Dorothy Weber, who had participated in one of the early discussion groups, tried it in a history class at Lane Technical High School here. She reported back to the Council: "More genuine knowledge of history was absorbed through such discussions than by traditional methods." Her students, she said, called it "learning history the painless way."

The program spread rapidly. In one high school, students turned out at 7:30 a.m. three days a week to meet for discussions. Today, Dr. Thaddeus J. Lubera, associate superintendent of schools, is a member of the Council board, and has determined that "the American Heritage program will go into every high school in Chicago." To prepare for this across-the-board program, the Council has outlined a graduate credit program to be taught at the University of Chicago.

Had such a program been operated nation-wide in the past, the Council believes, American POWs might never have succumbed to Chinese Communist brainwashing techniques. They could have overwhelmed their questioners with knowledge and belief in America. It was for this very reason that AMVETS recently announced their country-wide program.

How far will the hot-stove approach to history spread? Barnet Hodes, the politician-lawyer who dreamed up the program and is now chairman of the board, envisions it nation-wide, with the support of PTA groups, churches, schools, unions, veterans and patriotic organizations. What's more, he believes that such a goal might be achieved within five years. Wilbur C. Munnecke, chairman of the Council executive committee and vice president of the Chicago Sun-Times, is a little more cautious. But he, too, thinks saturation is more than an idle dream.

If you'd like to participate in this movement to teach America to Americans, the box on this page can tell you how. There are no prerequisites, no requirements of education — only the requirement of an inquiring mind. The payoff, both for you and for the nation, is renewed faith in America's heritage and a surer grasp of its guiding principles.

And there's a third reward, suggested by a steelworker during a recent red-hot discussion. "Man," he said when everyone paused for breath, "history can be a lot of fun, can't it?" ■

If you want to launch an "Education for Freedom" program in your community or club, the American Heritage Council (mailing address: 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago 1, Ill.) can tell you how to begin. The Council can furnish a limited number of copies of historic documents. Booklets on the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution also may be obtained from the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., Boston, Mass. A 50c paper-bound book, A Documentary History of the United States, including important documents from the Revolution to the present day, is recommended for groups wishing to go more deeply into the subject.

Five Chicagoans look at the Declaration of Independence

CHARLES SCHMITZ, PRINTER

"After all, governments aren't changed for small reasons. I don't think any free-thinking person would have hesitated to sign the Declaration—then or now."

HENRY A. COHEN, ELEVATOR OPERATOR

"I'm the world's most outstanding coward; I'd have been awfully hesitant about signing the Declaration. I'd be worried: what will happen to me and my family?"

MRS. ROSALIE HIGH, SCHOOL TEACHER

"We have to salute the men who signed the Declaration. It took terrific courage to do something like that."

JOHN MULARSKI, LABOR LEADER

"The Declaration was a dream, a question mark at the time. But there was a spirit of revolution in the world, and it gave the movement a goal, a direction."

MRS. MARJORIE BOTTOMLEY, HOUSEWIFE

"My husband's ancestor, Thomas Stone, signed the Declaration. I don't think either of us realized the chances he took in doing so."

MAD CAPS FOR '56

Though women's bathing suits have changed greatly since the '20s, most bathing caps have tended to look much like the one Gertrude Ederle snuggled on her head to swim the Channel in 1926. This summer, though, changes are being made, as these pictures show. Using new materials, colors and techniques, fashion has given caps a badly needed touch of — well, why not call it glamor?

If your child must travel alone . . .

FAR FROM HOME, this forlorn boy is one of annual thousands "lost" traveling alone.

. . . Here's how to be sure he gets there

The 8-year-old's face was tear-stained when she was found in the station waiting room. She had a too-heavy suitcase, a comic book and 38 cents. Her name was Linda.

It took officials two hours of questioning and phone calls to find out why she was there and to rescue her from being "lost." She had been put aboard a train early that morning, in a city hundreds of miles away, to come visit Aunt Marion — who would meet the train. But Aunt Marion, in a hospital, had never received the letter. When discovered, Linda had been waiting six hours.

This summer, Linda's story — with variations — will be repeated some 4,000 times, according to the National Travelers Aid Association, whose blue-and-white globe is a beacon of help in big-city stations, bus terminals and airports. Last year, its 105 local societies and 1,000 representatives in smaller towns rescued a total of 18,000 children who had been sent on trips alone.

With 50 years of experience behind it, the Travelers Aid advises against sending children under 10 on trips by themselves. If you have to send them, this non-profit organization offers six free services, charging only for needed phone calls and telegrams. 1) It advises you if, in its judgment, a child is mature enough to travel by himself. 2) It makes sure he is expected and will be met. 3) It helps in working out travel schedules and routes. 4) It places a child aboard his bus, train or plane with a letter to the driver, conductor or hostess telling where he is to get off. 5) It arranges for his care during stopovers and en route connections. 6) It holds him for pick-up at destination.

Travelers Aid also offers these tips:

Identification: Write out in duplicate the child's name, address and phone number, and those of the person he is going to see. Place one copy in the child's pocket; pin the other to his clothing where it can be seen.

Transportation: Using up-to-date timetables, work out in detail every step of the trip, avoiding connections or arrivals early in the morning or after dark; too close connections; long stopovers; travel over holidays and week ends. Remember that it's easier to keep an eye on a child in a Pullman car or plane than in a train coach. If the child is traveling by bus whose drivers change en route, provide in writing information to be passed along.

Double-check: Be sure the person the child is going to visit has full information regarding travel schedules, particularly the exact time and place of arrival. Double-check by phone to make sure.

Clothing: Keep the child's travel wardrobe as simple as possible. A description of what the child is wearing will be helpful to the person meeting him, or will help police find him if he is lost. Be sure he doesn't change clothes during the trip.

Children Get Upset Easily

Pre-trip Briefing: Children may be upset by events — like a train stopping or backing unexpectedly — that don't bother adults. If possible, familiarize the child with the vehicle he will ride in, either through travel pictures or the vehicle itself. Teach him: a) to ask the conductor or other official — not another passenger — any questions he has; b) to remain in one seat.

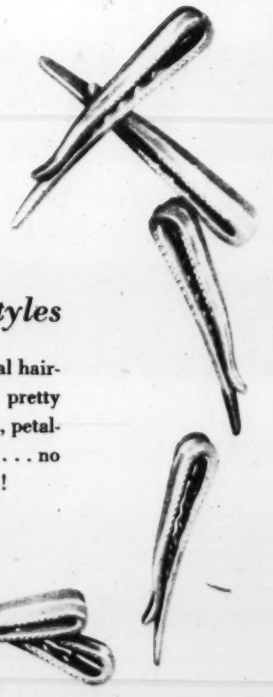

Luggage: Ship or check through anything not needed on the trip. The lighter the child travels, the better.

How Much Money?: Give him enough to cover any possible contingencies. Buy all tickets in advance and give him enough cash for meals and spending money.

If you have no Travelers Aid listed in your phone book, call your Community Chest or similar organization to help you locate the nearest representative. Last year, it supervised the travels of 9,000 children in comfort and without anxiety. It would rather operate that way with your child than rescue him after he becomes stranded. ■

DATE NIGHT: Off to a party, Bob Loy proudly escorts his girl friend, pretty Marye Gott, to his car, all shined up for the event. Says Marye: "Bob's one of the best drivers I know."

by KARL KOHRS

A CAR TO CALL HIS OWN

For this Tennessee boy, it is a symbol of growing up

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Today's cover, with its appealing theme of youth, is more than just a picture of a youngster with a jalopy and a group of admiring friends. It shows a typical teenager in one of the most important and exciting phases of growing up — when for the first time he comes into possession of something of value he can really call his own.

The boy in the 1940 convertible is Bob Loy, a student at Knoxville East High School here. It's the first car he ever owned, and PARADE's photos show how he makes it part of his life.

Bob recently reached his 16th birthday, but because he is big for his age (6' 2", 200 lbs.), he looks and acts somewhat more mature than most of his age group. Yet whether he realizes it or not, the status of ownership has given him a boost along the road from adolescence to manhood. It has given him a new feeling of responsibility, independence and prestige.

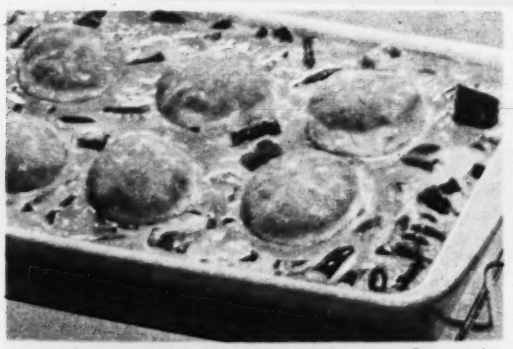

In getting the car, to begin with, he ran smack up against an adult responsibility — paying for it. His father, A. B. Loy, a local restaurant manager, wisely decided against giving Bob the car as a gift. Thus, shortly before Bob's 16th birthday, father and son walked up to the loan window of a Knoxville bank. The man behind the grill handed Mr. Loy $85 in cash. The latter, in turn, handed the money to Bob and said: "There you are, son. Go buy your car."

The loan, of course, was a man-to-man business deal. Mr. Loy had taken it out with the understanding that Bob was to pay him back. That is why Bob shortly began a $45-a-week pick-and-shovel job on a city construction project. Paying back at the rate of $20 a week, he figured to be in the clear in just about a month.

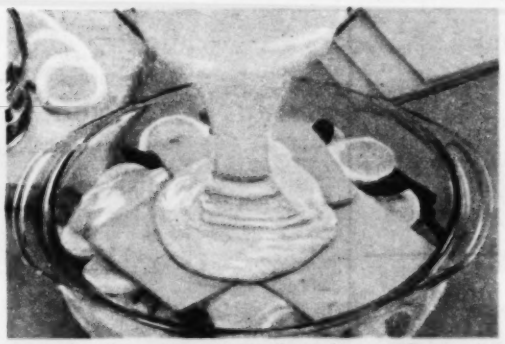

OVERHAUL: Array of parts means Bob is enjoying his new possession. He "souped up" car with a racing-car carburetor that cost $4.

RECIPE 1 Carnation 3-minute Cheese Sauce in
HAM AND CHEESE BISCUIT BAKE

The short-cut secret is a new, smoother Cheese Sauce that's ready in 3 minutes! Better-blending Carnation makes it possible; ordinary milk won't do. To make sauce, mix 1⅔ cups (large can) undiluted Carnation with 1 tablespoon prepared horse-radish and 1 teaspoon dry mustard in saucepan. Simmer to just below boiling (2 mins.). Add 2 cups grated process American cheese. Stir over low heat until cheese melts (1 min.). Alternately layer 3 cups diced cooked ham and 2 cups well-drained cooked green beans in 2-qt. casserole. Pour sauce over casserole. Top with biscuits. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15-20 minutes. 4-6 servings.

RECIPE 2 Carnation lump-free Cream Sauce in
ASPARAGUS, CHEESE AND EGG CASSEROLE

You get a headstart with an easy-to-make, always lump-free Cream Sauce, thanks to the special blending qualities found in Carnation but in no other form of milk. To make the sauce, blend 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper in saucepan over low heat. Add 1⅔ cups (large can) undiluted Carnation. Stir until thickened and smooth. Alternately layer 2 cups cooked 1-inch asparagus cuts, 3 sliced hard-cooked eggs, 8 thin process American cheese slices, ¼ cup chopped toasted almonds in buttered 1-qt. casserole. Pour sauce over casserole. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 20 minutes. Serves 4-6.

RECIPE 3 Carnation 3-minute Cheese Sauce in TWO-WAY TUNA AND MACARONI CHEESE LOAF

Serve it hot one day—cold the next! Start with 3-Minute Cheese Sauce from recipe above. Mix 2 beaten eggs, ¼ cup diced green pepper, ¼ cup diced pimiento, 2 tablespoons grated onion, 2 cups well-drained flaked tuna, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, 3 cups well-drained cooked macaroni, ½ teaspoon salt together in bowl. Blend Cheese Sauce with macaroni mixture. Place in paper-lined loaf pan (9 x 5 x 3). Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 25-30 minutes. Turn out on platter; remove paper. Slice loaf and serve at once, or chill and serve cold. Makes 8-10 servings.

RECIPE 4 Carnation lump-free Cream Sauce in
CREAMED CHIPPED BEEF AND RICE INDIVIDUALS

It's the smooth, lump-free Cream Sauce resulting from Carnation's special blending qualities that makes this recipe easy, failure-proof, delicious. You begin with the Cream Sauce recipe above. Then mix together ¼ cup diced celery, 2 tablespoons diced green pepper, 2 chopped hard-cooked eggs, 1 cup cooked rice and 1½ cups chopped, dried beef. Rinse beef in hot water; drain before use. Place ¾ cup beef mixture in each of 4 small casseroles; pour the cream sauce over each casserole. Mix. Bake casseroles in moderate oven (350°F.) 15 mins. Makes 4 servings.

DRIVE-IN snack tops off double-date evening. In back seat: Bob Smallman, Glenda Morrell.

Owning a car has given Bob a regard

In making Bob pay for the car, his father was furthering the boy's education as a man. For psychologists agree that parents who allow adolescents the maximum degree of responsibility as soon as they can handle it are doing the best thing possible to encourage maturity.

Scientific theories aside, there wasn't a prouder kid in all Knoxville the day Bob turned into the driveway of his home on East Magnolia Avenue at the wheel of his convertible. On hand as a welcoming committee were his Mother and Dad; brother George, 14; sister Jane, 11, and Bootsie, his cocker spaniel. Now the Loys were a two-car family — Bob's would be put to practical use while his father used the family car for business trips.

As it happens, a car and its mechanical problems mesh perfectly with Bob's plans for his career. He wants to be an electrical engineer, and so tearing down the convertible and putting it back together again simply amount to some advance classroom work. Bob is strictly a do-it-yourself driver. As he says: "I like to do my own work. Then, if anything goes wrong, I can't blame anybody but myself."

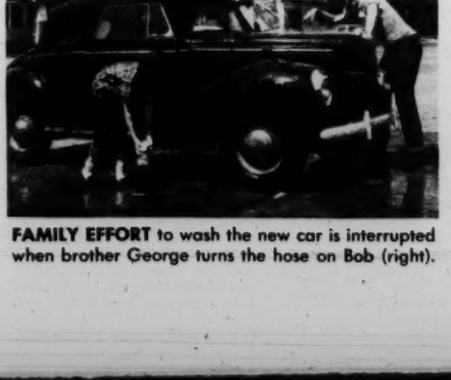

Bob keeps his overhaul operations within strict budget limits. He does this by the simple expedient of scrounging. To date, there is scarcely a junk yard or used-car lot in town that Bob hasn't visited to pick up parts.

He gets a lot of mechanical help at the gas station not far from his home — where, incidentally, he spends most of his spare time. The station manager lets Bob use special repair tools and gas up his own car. Gas is the biggest item in Bob's running expenses. He buys a dollar's worth at a time and that lasts him three or four days, with luck.

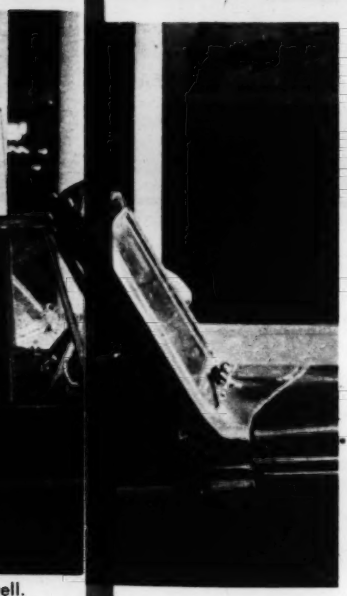

The expense of maintaining a car has naturally made Bob acutely aware of the value of a dollar. According to his father, Bob was never too concerned about money. As one of three children in a middle-income family, his allowance has been just about average. Dates and incidentals keep him chronically broke — a common teen-age affliction. But the car, his father observes, has made a difference in Bob's financial thinking. Says Mr. Loy: "He's looking ahead more now. And he's started a bank account."

At this stage in a boy's life, economic independence is highly important. It's not merely a matter of being able to pay for the things he wants; he needs to feel that he is on his own and free, to some degree, from parental authority. Moreover, he wants to be recognized as an individual by others of his age group. Now, as a properly licensed driver and the owner of a car, Bob feels he is "somebody" in his crowd.

As young drivers go, Bob is probably

FAMILY EFFORT to wash the new car is interrupted when brother George turns the hose on Bob (right).

FOR TEEN-AGE DRIVERS...

At PARADE's suggestion, the National Safety Council has drawn up this special set of rules to guide young drivers.

- Be a "pro" — drive smoothly. Don't make jackrabbit starts or squealing stops.
- Use sportsmanship. Be courteous and give the other fellow a break.
- Adjust your speed to road, weather and traffic conditions.
- Make sure you have plenty of room to pass and to change lanes.
- Stay alert; think ahead. Keep both hands on the wheel, both eyes on the road.
- Obey the law. Don't fudge at lights, signs or rail crossings.
- Keep your car in topnotch condition.
- Don't be a bumper chaser.
- Be proud of your driving. Do your part to prove that teenagers can be the best drivers on the road.

for possessions—and other people better than most. For one thing, he started learning at the age of 7, when he sat on his Dad's knee and steered the car. For another, he has taken the driver-training course at East High. He was considered an unusually apt learner and once represented the school in a teen-age radio panel discussion on car safety.

Like most teen-agers with sharp reflexes, Bob drives nonchalantly — though not carelessly — and is not afraid of traffic. As his father says: "Bob's really a better driver than I am. He knows the book rules and the mechanical operation of the car. And he has the proper respect for traffic laws."

Two Accidents, but...

The boy has been involved in two minor accidents, neither of which is listed on his license because he wasn't held at fault. In one, Bob hit a car that cut in front of him and crumpled his fender. Of the other accident, Bob says: "That was when a drunk tried to climb up my back. The whole front of his car was smashed. My back bumper was bent and the trunk lid was twisted out of shape.

"Neither of us was hurt. The police gave the guy a drunkometer test and it registered .28. The cops said a reading of .15 [.15 of 1 per cent] indicates that a person is intoxicated. Well, I figured this man really didn't mean any harm, and when his case came up I testified for him. I asked the judge to be lenient.

"The driver appreciated that. As it happened, he was a mechanic and he fixed up my car for nothing. Now it's better than it was in the first place."

That incident graphically illustrates how a growing youngster sometimes deals with a situation in a mature and responsible way. In Bob's case, there was no thought of revenge. His first instinct was to "give the guy a break." In thus showing tolerance and consideration, of course, he also was showing signs of maturing.

Undoubtedly the most important thing in Bob Loy's private world at the moment is his car. As with most adolescents, this personal possession is a source of keen satisfaction. It gives him stature and inspires added respect for personal property — not only that of others but his own as well.

Now he remembers, for example, to hang up some of his clothes, put away his belongings and shine his shoes. As his mother laughingly observes: "The car has done something to him. His room has always been the worst mess you can imagine. Now he's beginning to show a trend."

For the future of America, that trend is a pretty good sign that today's Bob Loys are growing into tomorrow's responsible citizens. ■

PRACTICAL USE for the car appears as Bob takes his mother to do marketing.

2 new Blueberry treats

It's the season for blueberries—and lemon

Big, misty-blue and beautiful, cultivated for maximum size and sweetness, blueberries are with us again for a brief season. Make the most of them while they last. Serve them plain, with cream, of course — and try these two new recipes. You'll like them!

LEMON-GLAZED BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

1 cup firm, fresh blueberries
2 cups sifted, enriched flour
⅓ cup sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, well-beaten
1 cup milk
¼ cup melted shortening

Pick over berries; wash; drain; spread on paper toweling; shake gently to dry. Mix and sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Combine egg, milk and melted shortening; add all at once to flour mixture; stir just until liquid is absorbed. (Batter will be lumpy.) Gently fold in berries. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full. Mix one tablespoon sugar and one teaspoon grated lemon peel; sprinkle over tops. Bake in hot oven (405°F.) 20 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 12 medium muffins.

BLUEBERRY PIE

3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
4 cups fresh blueberries
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Pastry for 2-crust pie
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Combine first five ingredients; let stand 15 minutes. Line 9" pie pan with pastry; fill pan with berry mixture; dot with butter or margarine. Cover with top crust; press edges together. Cut slits or holes in top crust to allow steam to escape. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) about 55 minutes. Serve warm, with Lemon Freeze.

LEMON FREEZE

¾ cup evaporated milk
6 tablespoons (½ can) frozen lemonade concentrate ¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt

Chill evaporated milk in freezer tray until ice crystals form around edges. Whip in chilled bowl with beater until stiff. Combine remaining ingredients; add one tablespoon at a time, continuing to whip. Freeze firm. Makes 1 quart.

Sizzling Ideas for better barbecues outdoors or IN Discover how Mazola® Oil makes everything —from salad to sauce—'specially delicious!

Let's have Shish Kebab! Quick marinating sauce: Take a clove of garlic, ½ cup of Mazola Oil, ¼ cup vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ⅛ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and a dash of cayenne. Blend. Pour over cubed meat in shallow dish. Let stand 1 to 2 hours.

Skewer chunks of beef or lamb alternately with cubes of vegetables. Brush with marinating sauce. Place on pre-heated grill or broiler. Broil 10 to 15 minutes, until tender.

Approach your barbecue with a spirit of adventure. But remember, for barbecuing . . . for baking . . . for salad dressings . . . nothing gives food wonderful "golden goodness" like Mazola Oil.

EASY-DO BARBECUE SAUCE

2 tbsp. Mazola Oil	½ tsp. salt
¼ cup chopped onions	2 tbsp. lemon juice or vinegar
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce	½ cup water
1 tbsp. sugar

1 cup chili sauce

Cook Mazola and onions over low heat, stirring frequently, about 10 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and simmer 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Makes about 1½ cups.

Barbecued chicken: Brush chicken with Mazola and place on grill or broiler rack. Cook, turning often. Baste frequently with barbecue sauce during cooking. Cook until tender. Serve with hot barbecue sauce.

Hint to remember—Brush your meat or fish with Mazola before you place it on the grill. This keeps meat from sticking. Mazola makes all meat delicious and juicy on the inside—crusty and brown on the outside.

COUNTRY GARDEN DRESSING

(Make it right in the bowl!)

½ clove garlic	Few grains pepper
¼ tsp. prepared mustard	¼ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. salt	1½ tbsp. vinegar
	4 tbsp. Mazola Salad Oil

Drop garlic clove in salad bowl. Add prepared mustard, salt and a few pepper grains. Blend thoroughly with fork. Add Worcestershire sauce, vinegar and Mazola. Beat with fork until thoroughly mixed . . . now add mixed greens and toss. For more than 4 servings, double recipe.

Whatever happened to DEANNA DURBIN?

CANDID PHOTO of Deanna today shows her (facing camera) at an outdoor market in the French village where she now lives. With her are her husband and son.

One of the greatest child stars in history has become a tranquil French homemaker

POSED PHOTO shows Deanna, aged 16, giving Robert Stack her first screen kiss. The occasion was Universal's 1939 film appropriately entitled First Love.

by LLOYD SHEARER
PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

NEAUPLE-LE-CHATEAU, FRANCE.

Remember Deanna Durbin, the little girl who sang like an angel?

Remember how single-handedly she lifted Universal Pictures out of the red by starring in 10 consecutive box-office hits? That series began back in 1936, with Three Smart Girls. Ten years later, at 23, Deanna was earning $200,000 a year but feeling pretty unhappy about it all. Not long after that, she was out of pictures.

You'd hardly recognize Deanna today. Matter of fact, she wouldn't give you the chance. Despite all the material gain it brought her, she wants desperately to forget her "unnatural Hollywood childhood fame."

Now 33, she lives serenely in this small village outside Paris. She lives with her third husband, film director Charles Henri David, and her two children, Jessica (by her second husband, producer Felix Jackson) and Peter, the small son of her present marriage.

Their home is an old, dilapidated farmhouse around which the grass grows uncut and the roses bloom full and thorny. Deanna does her own housework, her own shopping, once a week brings in a maid for the heavy cleaning.

She refuses to see people from Hollywood or newsmen who have driven down from Paris for a pleasant chat. The villagers have been instructed to answer all queries concerning her with, "I'm sorry, there is no Mademoiselle Durbin here." They lie with straight and convincing faces.

Does Deanna ever grow lonely?

"Hardly ever," her tall, bespectacled husband told me. "We have our close friends, and Deanna has her music teacher. Yes, she still takes singing lessons. Her voice, I think, is more beautiful than ever. She practices two, maybe three hours a day, but when she sings now, it is for the family.

"The family is really her whole life. Here in the country she is not bothered by agents, columnists, big deals. Here she has a chance to lead a normal life, something she never knew in Hollywood."

Back to Films?

Will she ever make another movie?

"That is hard to tell," M. David said. "I am sure that for a girl who has known such tremendous success there must be at least a little longing for the past."

In this quaint rural village, however, the townspeople disagree.

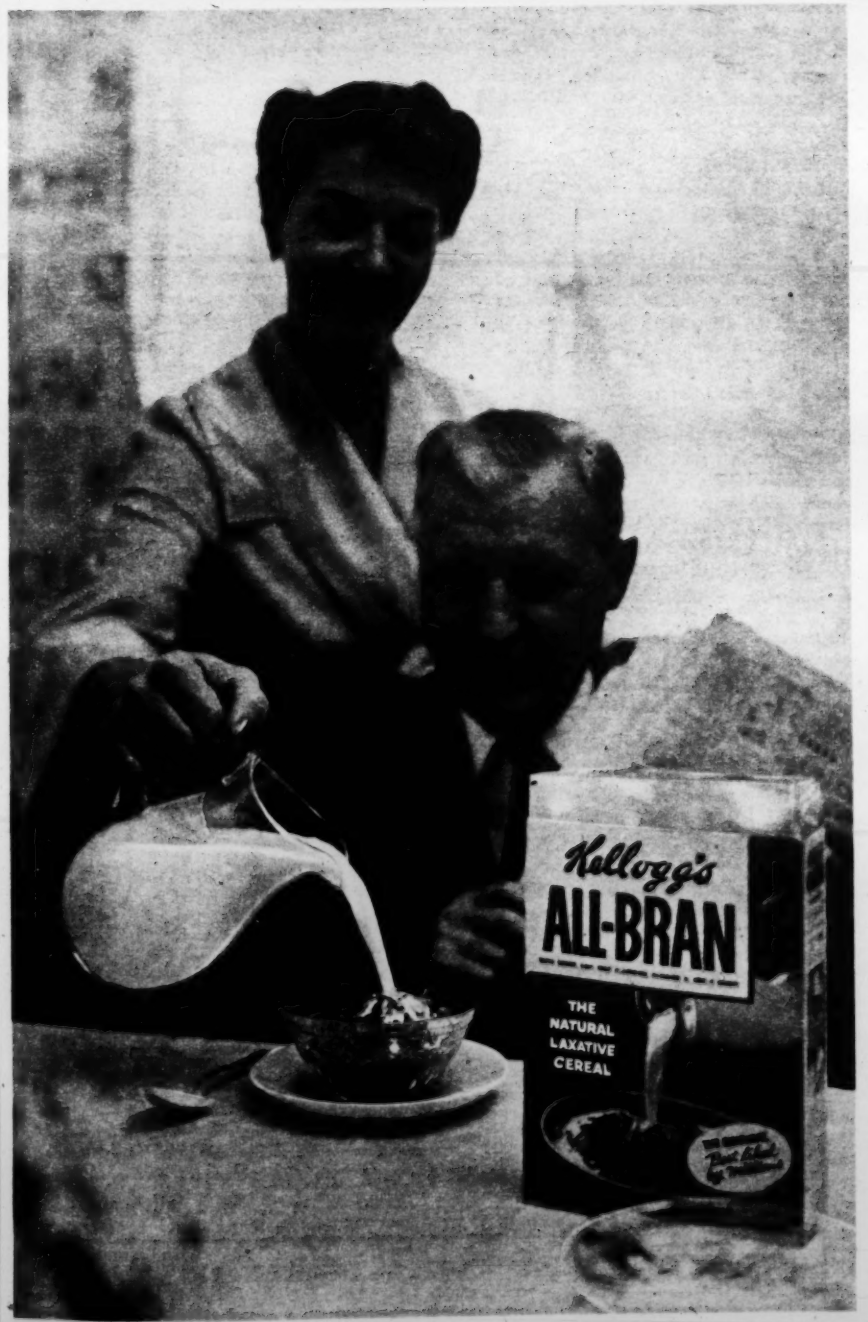

"Why should Madame David care about the past?" the baker asked. "It was not kind to her. She had two other marriages, very sour. Toward the end her movie career died. All she got from Hollywood was money and unhappiness.

"Today she is happy and gay. A little fat, perhaps, but her cheeks are red and her spirit is high. I do not blame her for wanting to forget the past."

So — if she wants it that way and is happy that way, then that is whatever happened to Deanna Durbin. ■

PROVED BY MILLIONS

A GENTLE NATURAL WAY TO BREAK THE LAXATIVE DRUG HABIT

Try All-Bran and Milk nature's great food combination for irregularity due to insufficient bulk

Delicious, appetizing—solid nutritional benefits

Nature never intended that we continually prod our digestive system into action with doses of drug-type purgatives, pills and powders.

Yet many folks (perhaps even you) still think nothing else will give them relief from irregularity. But there is another way—a safe, gentle way, proved by millions.

You simply enjoy a bowl of Kellogg's All-Bran and milk every morning. Or before bedtime at night. This pleasant, delicious and inexpensive cereal supplies all the good food bulk you need daily to keep regular.

All-Bran is a natural food remedy. Eaten daily, it corrects a rather common cause of irregularity—lack of bulk in the things we eat. Chemical and drug-type laxatives usually contain no bulk (since they are for temporary relief only). So you cannot expect these preparations to overcome irregularity due to insufficient bulk.

The Flavor Best Liked by Millions. W. K. Kellogg originated All-Bran over 40 years ago. He aimed to improve the flavor and eating qualities of whole bran without taking away any of the effectiveness of the natural laxative bulk.

He accomplished both. On taste alone, many people prefer All-Bran to any other cereal. And because it gets at the cause of irregularity due to lack of bulk (the gentle roughage that keeps us on schedule), All-Bran has literally helped millions who have made it a part of their daily diet.

There is nothing mysterious about this. All-Bran is a good wholesome food. It is made from the outer layers of whole wheat. A serving a day with milk provides not only bulk, but valuable food essentials—including vitamins, minerals and high-quality protein.

So if you suffer from irregularity caused by lack of bulk . . . if you long for freedom from the laxative drug habit, try Kellogg's All-Bran and milk every morning for 10 days. Just eat an average serving (about half a cup of All-Bran). See if you don't enjoy comfortable, natural elimination once again.

If you are not fully satisfied for any reason whatsoever, simply return the empty All-Bran carton and get twice what you paid. That's a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek, Mich.

PRIMER FOR AMERICANS

THROUGHOUT our history most Americans have believed that every person has certain rights and duties and responsibilities.

Americans have believed that there are certain things people should do, and things they should not do.

They have also believed in certain things that people are, and are not.

These things that people believe are called principles. This book is an attempt to state the Principles of America in simple, primer fashion so that you can understand them, learn them, and remember them.

This is important. It was because earlier Americans believed in these principles and guided their lives by them, that America has grown to be the good place it is.

If all of us learn and remember these principles—if we also guide our lives by them—then we can help to keep America growing better, and better, and better.

And if we follow these Principles of America, we can help make the world a better place to live in, too.

The Principles of America are these . . .

1. Each Person is of Importance and Value as an Individual.
2. We Believe that All Men should Enjoy Personal Freedom.
3. We Believe that All Men are Created Equal.

   It is worth noting that the Declaration of Independence expressed the belief that "all men are created equal." It did not state or imply a belief that men develop equally or have equal ability, or that they should ever be forced to an exact equality of thought, speech or material possessions.

   That would be equality without freedom. Americans have always believed the two should go together.

In our Constitution, and in other laws of our land, there are set down principles to protect the rights and freedoms and equality of individuals.

4. The Right to Freedom of Speech.

   This includes freedom of the press, of radio, of motion pictures, of every means by which man may express his thoughts.
5. The Right to Freedom of Assembly.

   As we believe in the right of individual action, so we believe that individuals should be free to act together.
6. The Right to Freedom of Worship.

   Not only is the individual free to worship as he will, but religions themselves are free and equal.
7. The Right to Security of Person and Property.

   Not just one, but three Amendments to the Constitution (4th, 5th and 14th) protect against illegal search and seizure, or loss of life, liberty, or property, without "due process of law."
8. The Right to Equal Protection before the Law.

   As individuals are equally important, so laws must apply equally to all, without special privileges for any group.
9. The Right to Freedom from Slavery.

   This includes "the right to quit," for no individual may be forced to work for another.
10. The Right to Petition the Government.

    The right of the individual to "petition the government for redress of grievances" is evidence of the American belief that government is the servant, not the master, of the people.
11. The Right to Vote for people of your choice.

    This is the individual's most potent weapon in the protection of his rights and freedoms . . . a weapon that to be effective must be constantly and wisely used.

Other Principles hold that every man has . . .

12. The Right to a Good Education.
13. The Right to Live where he pleases.
14. The Right to Work where he wants to.
15. The Right to Belong to an Organization.
16. The Right to Own Property.
17. The Right to Start his Own Business.
18. The Right to Manage his Own Affairs.
19. The Right to Make a Profit or to Fail, depending on his Own Ability.

There are other, similar rights of individual action which are Principles of America, but all of these individual rights may be combined in these two broad principles . . .

20. Every Man is entitled to Freedom and Equality of Opportunity.
21. Every Man may Earn his Living When, Where, and How he wants to.

There are also Limiting Principles . . .

Principles of individual freedom sometimes clash with those of individual equality. Therefore our rights as individuals must be limited, and those limitations are principles.

22. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with those of Other Individuals.

    Your right to swing your arms stops where the other fellow's nose starts.
23. The Rights of any Individual shall not Interfere with the Welfare of the People.

    Freedom of speech does not give the individual the right to shout "fire" in a crowded theatre.
24. Every Individual owes Obedience to the Laws under which he Lives.

    The individual has the right to talk against a law, to work and vote to change that law, but NOT to disobey that law.

Principles that are Patterns of Behavior . . .

Many of our principles of individual freedom and equality are guaranteed to us by law. But we have other beliefs, other general rules of action and conduct that have grown to the status of principles. And these too, are foundations of Americanism.

25. A Man shall be Judged by his Own Record.

    A man's family background, his race or his religion, is not as important as what that man himself can do, for Americans believe a man must stand on his own feet.
26. A Man is Free to Achieve as much as he can.

    We believe that where any boy may become President, where any man may achieve greatness, there is the greatest incentive for every man to do his best.
27. To Achieve anything, a Man should be Willing to Work.

    Americans have always known that "you don't get something for nothing," that to get anything takes a willingness to work.
28. Achievement also Depends upon the Ability to do a Good Job.

    Add to "willingness to work" the ability to produce results and the combination is the basis for most individual achievement in our country.
29. Every Man has the Right to a Fair Share of the Results of his Work and his Ability.

    Because of this belief, America has not only produced more goods, but they have been more fairly and more widely shared by more people than in any other country.
30. Security is the Ability of a Man to Provide for himself.

    The only true security for any individual is the opportunity, the ability, and the determination to work and plan and save for his own present and future. Self-reliance is vital to individual independence and personal freedom. No man can be "proud and free" who depends on others for his security.
31. When an Individual cannot Provide his own Security, the Responsibility should be Assumed by Others.

    We believe that no one should starve, or be without adequate clothing and shelter, so those who have more than their basic needs share the responsibility of providing the essentials of security for those who need help.
32. Each Individual must Deal Fairly with others.

    Honesty, fairness, and personal integrity are virtues that help free and independent individuals get along with each other without losing their independence.
33. Fair and Free Competition is a Good Thing.

    Americans have always believed that competition among individuals or groups encourages greater effort which in turn brings greater benefits to all.
34. Cooperation among Individuals is Vital.

    PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has said: "The freedom to compete vigorously accompanied by a readiness to cooperate wholeheartedly for the performance of community and national functions, together make our system the most productive on earth."

Principles of Individual Responsibility . . .

Freedom for individuals carries with it an equal responsibility to use that freedom wisely. If we wish to remain free, we must faithfully fulfill this responsibility.

35. The Individual is Responsible for himself and his Family.

    He must protect them and provide for their present and future well-being.
36. The Individual has Responsibilities to the Groups of which he is a Part.

    He must give of his best to his community, his church, his employer, his union, and to every group in which individuals cooperate for their mutual benefit.
37. The Individual has Responsibilities to his Country.

    He must be an active citizen, interesting himself in local, state, and national government, voting wisely, thinking and speaking and acting to preserve and strengthen freedom, equality and opportunity for every individual.
38. The Individual has Responsibilities to the World.

    Man's horizons have expanded. What happens in the world affects him, and his actions can affect the world. Today, therefore, each man has a responsibility to act—and to encourage his country to act—so that freedom and cooperation will be encouraged among the people and the nations of the world.

For America's Future

If we, the people of the United States, want to have more material benefits, we must believe in and follow these two principles:

39. The only way we can Have More is to Produce More; and
40. As we Produce More, we must make it possible for More and More People to Enjoy that which we Produce.

If we, the people of the United States, want to have a better life, spiritually as well as materially . . .

41. We must stand firmly for our Beliefs, our Rights, our Principles.

There are those who would chip away our confidence so that their special brand of tyranny might creep into America. They must not succeed. So, let us ask of every plan, or act, or idea . . .

Is it With or Against the Principles of America?

and you can't taste the difference

Sucaryl makes it easy for you to watch your weight . . . by giving you all sugar's sweetness, without a single calorie . . . and no bitterness or aftertaste.

This is Sucaryl: The first non-caloric sweetener that tastes just like sugar in ordinary use. Use it to sweeten your drinks, your cereal, your fruit. Cook with it—boiling and baking don't affect it at all. You can even use it in freezing. The fact is, you can use Sucaryl practically anywhere you would sugar, and you simply can't taste the difference. A point to remember, too, when you're buying dietetic foods and beverages: Sucaryl-sweetened products don't taste like "diet" foods.

Naturally, Sucaryl is for dieters and diabetics. Sugar has its place in normal diets as a source of quick energy. But where calories must be cut, Sucaryl lets you do it and still keep sweetness in your diet. If you're in doubt about your diet, ask your doctor. Your pharmacist has Sucaryl in tablets or solution; also Sucaryl Calcium for low-salt diets. Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago, Ill. and Montreal. Abbott

No calories—no matter how many cups—if you sweeten your coffee with Sucaryl!

TEEN-AGE TOPICS

The members of the Junior Girl Scout Troop #751 of Silver Spring, Md., were required to submit questions to my column in order to pass their final badge tests. Here are the most frequently asked questions and my replies:

Q. What should I wear when invited to a boy's home to dinner?

A. If you are invited to a boy's home for dinner on Sunday, wear ordinary church-going clothes. If you're invited to dinner after school, perhaps school clothes will be all that is expected. It all depends on the custom of the household to which you are invited. Talk it over with the boy.

Q. What should I do if a boy tries to kiss me?

A. Never let a boy kiss you if you find the idea distasteful. It isn't a matter of manners. A brief goodnight kiss from the middle teens on is quite usual, but certainly not necessary. To ward off an unwanted kiss, merely extend your hand to bid your escort goodnight.

Q. When should I start wearing make-up?

A. I see some 12-year-olds wearing make-up more suited to their mothers. A 13-year-old can be allowed light lipstick, light nail polish and a dusting of powder, at least for parties. The first year of high school is plenty of time for real make-up; even then, the application should be conservative.

Q. If two boys ask you to dance at the same time, which one should you dance with?

A. You can just say, "I'd like to dance with both of you. You settle it between yourselves as to who dances with me first."

Q. How long is it proper to talk on the phone?

A. The matter of phone conversation is something to work out with your family. If you want to use the phone for more than five minutes, ask the others in the family whether this is convenient. Try to limit your telephoning to times when the phone is not needed by others. Remember, too, that it is irritating for those trying to get the house to find the wire constantly busy.

Q. Should I pay for my fare on a bus, lunch, movie, refreshments, etc., when a boy invites me to go out? Is it ever correct to go "Dutch"?

A. I like "Dutch treating" to be limited to groups where perhaps one person is in charge of the whole "kitty." Usually when a girl and boy go Dutch, the boy feels rather inferior and the girl feels neglected. It is always better to choose something in the way of entertainment that the boy can manage by himself.

Early Evening, Muny Opera

Pre-Sundown Patrons Chat and Sip Soda, Watch Stagehands, Survey Other Patrons

In their seats a full hour before show time, members of this family group make themselves comfortable. The little girl looks in her mirror, her father tries out his binoculars.

About midway down the rows of seats, several women sip drinks as they watch the arrival of other early comers.

ARRIVING EARLY at Municipal Opera provides some patrons with a show in advance of the one to be presented on the stage. Like fans who get to the ball park in time to watch batting practice, they enjoy the preliminaries almost as much as the main attraction.

Every night some opera-goers show up even before the gates are unlocked. Some of these are perhaps in the habit of being punctual. They are the ones who find plenty of parking space close by, avoid ticket lines, miss the jostling when the big wave hits. Most of the earliest arrivals settle down in their choice of some 1500 free seats that are available for every performance.

Getting in their seats early provides patrons with a chance to visit, have refreshments, watch the stagehands, and cool off if the day has been sweltering. Some enjoy looking at the crowd as it gathers and gradually fills other seats. Studying faces, attire and sun tans of aisle passers-by provides diversion and additional topics for conversation. Then there is the opportunity to view the color changes of sunsets, of watching the green outlines of surrounding trees dissolve in the gathering dusk.

A father and son, caught in the golden glints of sunset, study program before proceeding to seats.

A group of women wait it out in the free-seat section near columned upper entrance of the huge amphitheater. The parasol is providing protection from the sun.

The sun is behind the trees and starting time is getting closer. Now the seats are filling fast. There are knots of patrons waiting for an usher, and those who have timed their arrival closely are streaming in by way of entrance ramp in background. Theater gates are opened at 7:30 p.m., an hour before the show begins.

ELECTIONS IN THE NEWS

Egypt, Peru, Bolivia Choose Presidents; Women Vote for First Time in All Three

Former President Prado votes in Peru's presidential election. After his apparent victory, Prado, 67, pledged help for the country's impoverished Indians. Under his presidency in World War II, Peru was the first South American country to side with the United States.

Fervent admirers press against the automobile of Premier Nasser, waving, as he rides through Port Said on the Suez Canal. The 38-year-old Egyptian leader had just raised his nation's flag at a military base there to terminate 74 years of British occupation of the canal. "Today Egypt is entirely free. Not a single foreign flag flies over Egyptian soil," Nasser said at the ceremonies, held just before his election as President.

BOLIVIA AND PERU, nations more accustomed to dictatorship than to democracy, have elected new presidents. Egyptians, in "yes" or "no" balloting, overwhelmingly proclaimed Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser their President. Women voted for the first time in all three countries. In another election with far-reaching importance to the United States, Iceland's voters increased the parliamentary strength of the two parties that want to oust American troops from NATO air and naval bases on the strategic Atlantic island.

Peruvians sharply repudiated General Manuel A. Odria, dictator since 1948. His candidate in the presidential race ran a poor third. Unofficial tabulations indicated that former President Manuel Prado y Ugarteche, a conservative, won the six-year term, which starts July 28. A big factor in Prado's apparent victory was support from the outlawed Alianza Popular Revolucionaria Americana, a left-wing anti-Communist party.

In Bolivia, 42-year-old Vice President Hernan Siles Zuazo easily won the nation's top office. He led the 1952 revolution that put exiled President Victor Paz Estenssoro in power. Paz Estenssoro's government nationalized Bolivia's rich tin mines, but has been disappointed with output under public ownership.

Besides holding the one-candidate presidential election, Egypt also adopted a new constitution, in voting that was heralded as marking the transition to civilian rule from the martial law, in effect since the overthrow of King Farouk in 1952.

Taking advantage of their first opportunity to cast ballots, women predominate among waiting voters outside a polling place in Lima, Peruvian capital.

Surrounded by confident supporters giving the "V" for victory sign, Siles Zuazo proceeds to the polls in La Paz, capital of Bolivia. His term will run four years.

Fernando Belaunde Terry, a late entrant who ran a close second in Peru's presidential election, receives his ballot. He campaigned only two weeks, was backed by a group of political amateurs.

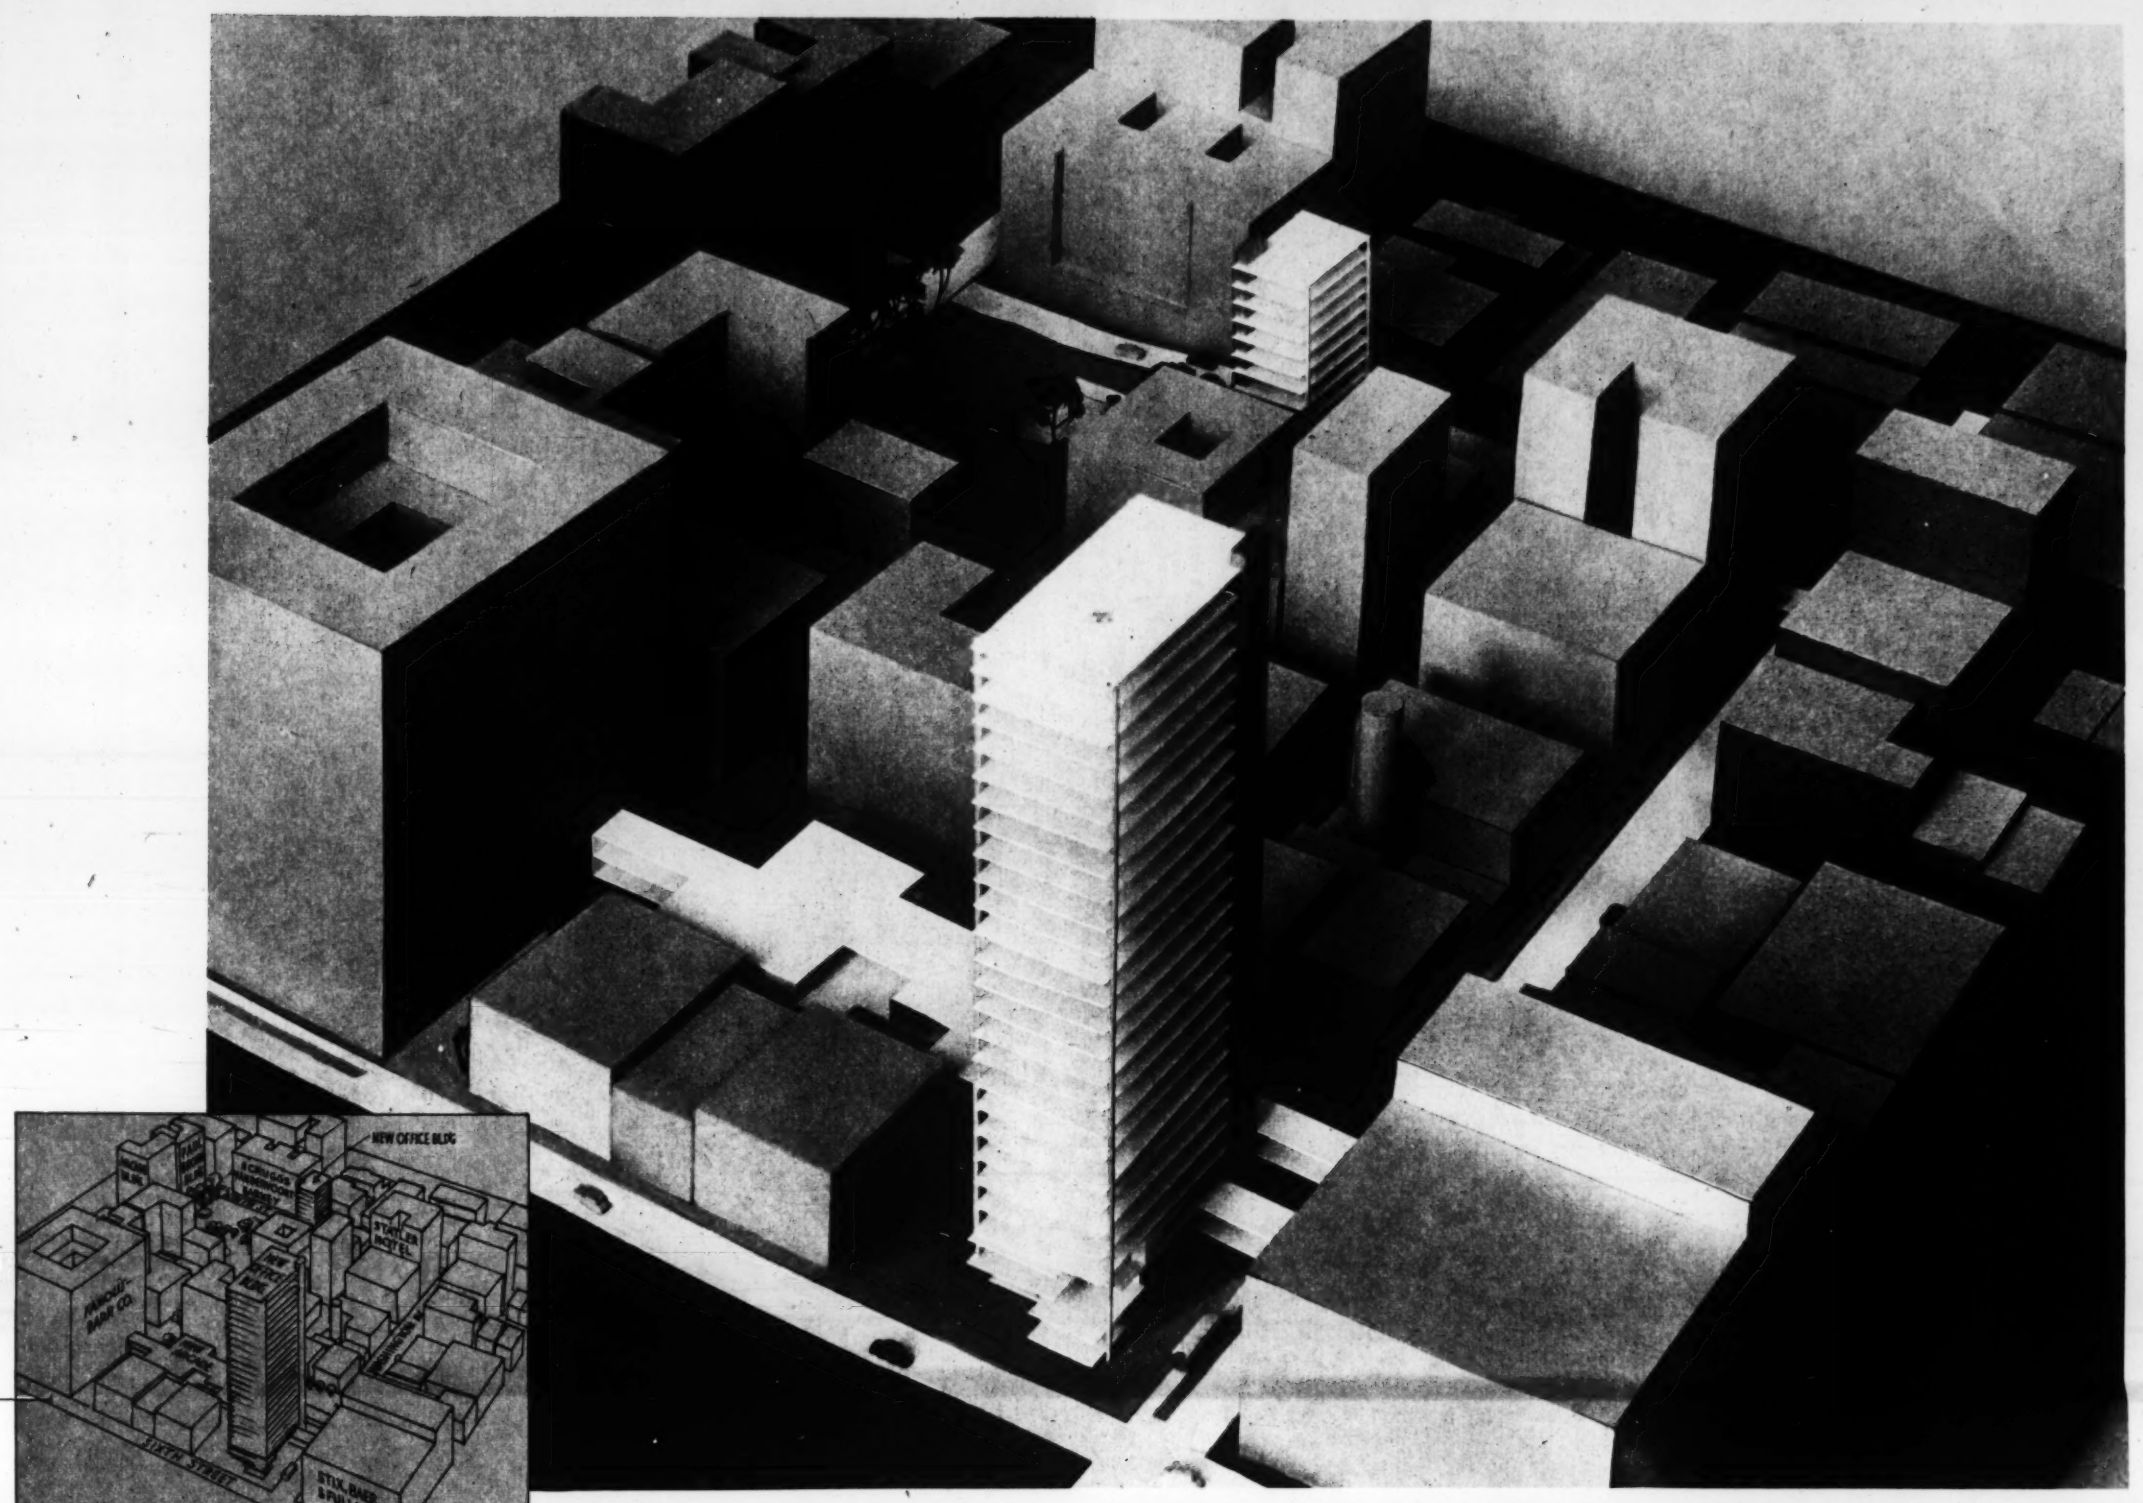

Still holding his camera, a Lima newspaper photographer is carried into the paper's office after having been injured in a fight between supporters of the rival presidential candidates. The election itself was orderly, but tempers flared occasionally as the lead shifted during ballot counting.

IDEAS FOR DOWNTOWN, MIDTOWN

Students' Models Envision Pedestrians-Only Department Store Area, New Apartment Houses

Model of downtown St. Louis area is the work of Heinz Zobel. It is approximately four feet square, scaled 16 feet to an inch, stands about a foot high. Zobel was assisted by two other St. Louisans, Harold Smith and Charles Hansen, both undergraduates in the Washington University School of Architecture. Buildings are identified in key diagram.

In this model, Fredrick Osman of St. Louis shows cluster design of middle-income apartments. Three buildings are connected through center unit which would contain elevator and stairs. Every third floor of the center unit is an elevator stop with a lobby. Stairways lead to a lobby above and to one below the elevator stop. Runways from these go to the apartments. The lobby above each elevator stop is a utility room, the lobby below a play area. The structure and five others like it would occupy four city blocks, merged into a single area.

A PLAN THAT envisions an area in the heart of downtown St. Louis as a single closely knit unit, with all its streets converted to pedestrian walkways, has grown out of a project at the Washington University School of Architecture. The plan was developed simply as a laboratory exercise by a fifth-year student. It has attracted attention because of its novel and conceivably practical approach to the problem of downtown traffic congestion.

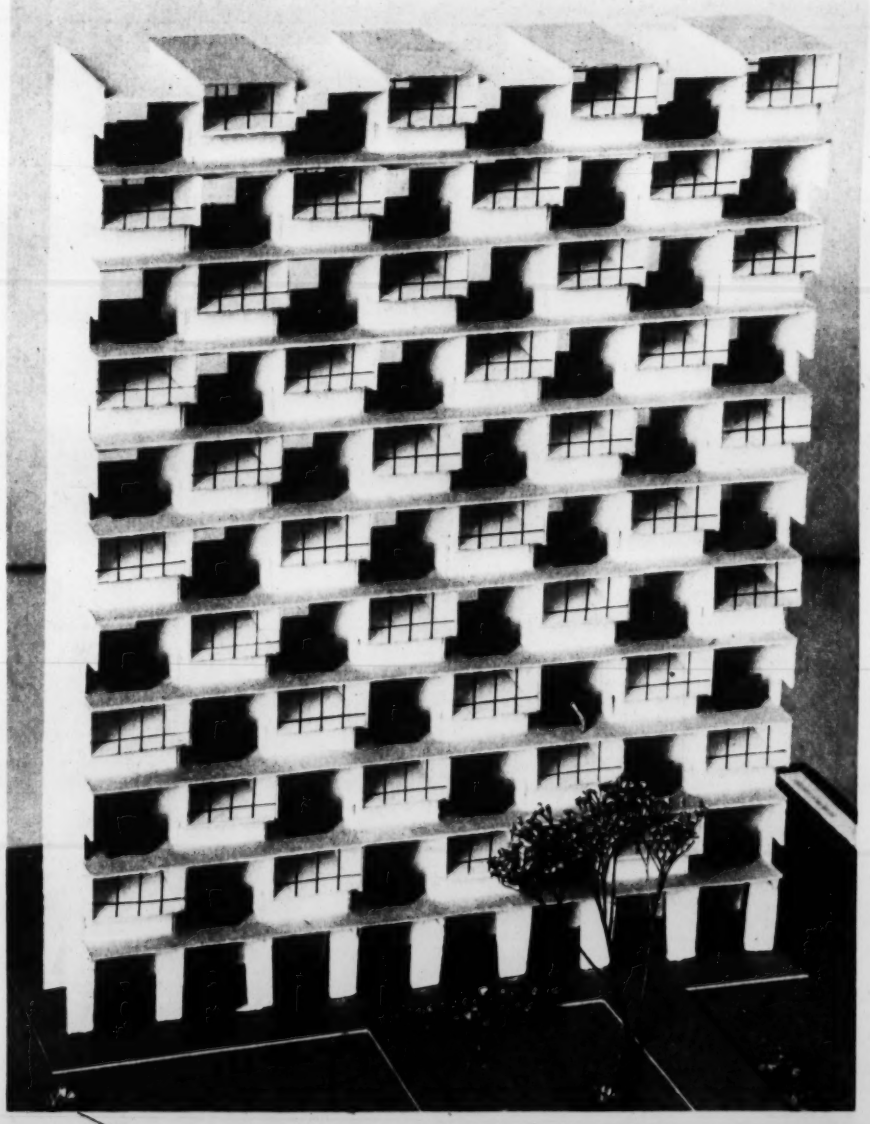

The plan, shown in model at top of page, would route all vehicular traffic around the area bounded by Sixth, Ninth and Olive streets and Washington avenue. To make it effective, parking space would have to be available around the area's perimeter. This space would, of course, also serve other sections of the downtown area.

The plan was worked out in terms of existing buildings, which are shown in darker tone. Some new construction, introduced to demonstrate how contemporary architecture might fit into the downtown skyline, is shown in light tone. It includes two new office buildings of waffle-slab construction in glass and stainless steel, and a three-level arcade connecting two department stores.

Where the old Federal Building now stands, at the corner of Ninth and Olive streets, a tree-grown plaza is shown. Under the plaza would be a subway train station.

Models of modern apartment buildings shown in lower photos are two different answers to a classroom problem of designing middle-income housing for a now blighted area east of Grand boulevard and north of Chouteau avenue.

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

In another experiment with middle-income housing, Zobel, builder of the downtown model, prepared this design of apartment built of concrete units precast on the ground and lifted into place. Ground level would be a covered playground. The split-level apartments would have living quarters below bedrooms, with large windows. Each unit has its own balcony, open at both ends to let breezes sweep through. An elevator and stair shaft (not shown) would connect by runways with the building.

DISASTER, 10 MINUTES FROM PORT

74 Killed When Crippled Venezuelan Plane, Returning to Idlewild, Crashes Into Sea

Aboard a Coast Guard cutter, crew members sift through wreckage and the personal belongings of victims. The crash was the first of the airline, Linea Aeropostal Venezolans, in 10 years of flying passengers between United States and Venezuela.

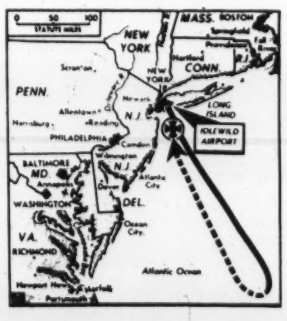

A girl's dress and other articles found floating in the sea after the crash are held by a Coast Guardsman. Bits of the plane and personal items of passengers were found along a two-mile stretch of the ocean.

AFTER A ROUTINE NIGHT TAKE-OFF from New York's Idlewild Airport, the 64 passengers and 10 crewmen of a Venezuelan airliner settled down for an overnight trip to Venezuela's capital, Caracas. They were scheduled to arrive seven and one-half hours later, in time for breakfast. About an hour later the plane was 250 miles east of Norfolk, Virginia. Captain Luis F. Plata, a pilot who had logged 12,000 hours of flying time, radioed that because of engine trouble he was bringing the four-engine Super Constellation back to Idlewild. At the airport, meals were prepared for the delayed passengers, 20 of them Americans, 24 Venezuelan school children returning to their homes from the States for summer vacations. As radio messages from Captain Plata became terse and troubled, a Coast Guard plane was dispatched to guide the crippled liner. Lieutenant Commander Frederick J. Hancox, after sighting the airliner, saw fire break out on the right wing. At 1:23 a.m., only 40 to 50 miles south of Idlewild and just 10 flying minutes away, the plane plunged through the bright moonlight and into the sea. The 74 persons aboard were killed. It was the world's worst disaster on a regular airline flight. Coast Guardsmen were assigned the task of collecting floating parts of broken ship and bodies.

Solid black line of map traces airliner's route after take-off. Engine trouble developed at point where line becomes broken. The broken line leads to circled cross indicating point where the plane plunged into the sea.

A pair of seats, ripped from plane in the crash, is examined by a Coast Guardsman.

A Fountain Runs Its Course

The Play of Water
Jets in Lucas Park
Forms Beguiling Patterns
Of Flying Drops and Foam

THE FAN-SHAPED FOUNTAIN rises and falls intermittently in Lucas Park, a small sunken public square across Locust street from the Central Public Library. From jets beneath the pool's surface, white water is sent surging upward to a height of some eight feet. There, it seems to pause for an instant, then it falls back to send miniature waves lapping at the edges of the pool. A short interlude of quiet and another burst of water foams upward to repeat the cycle.

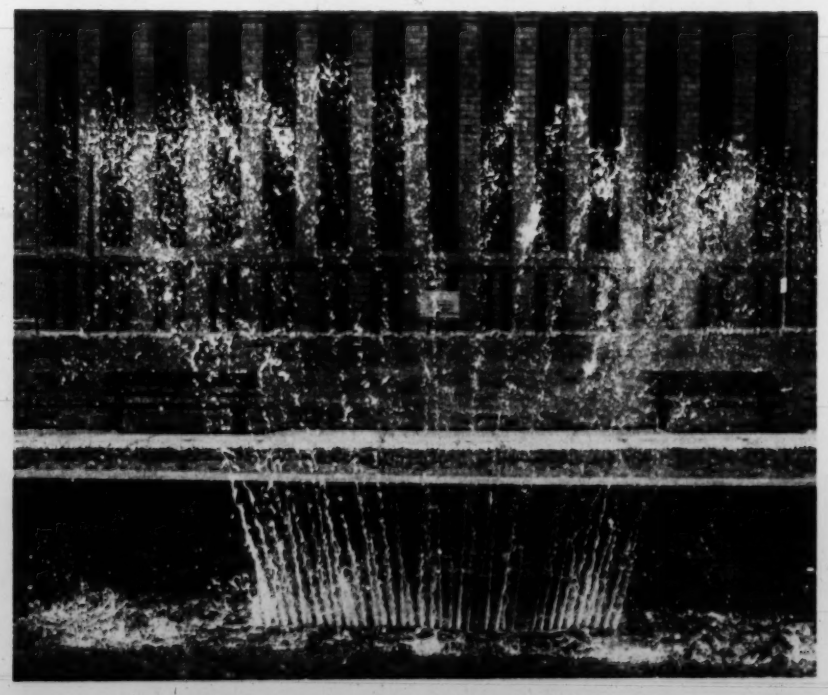

For downtowners taking their noonday ease in Lucas Park and languidly contemplating the fountain, the play of water is soothing to eye and ear. Confirmed fountain-watchers, who in winter are likely to be confirmed fire-gazers, take endless pleasure in the infinite variations of their favorite elements.

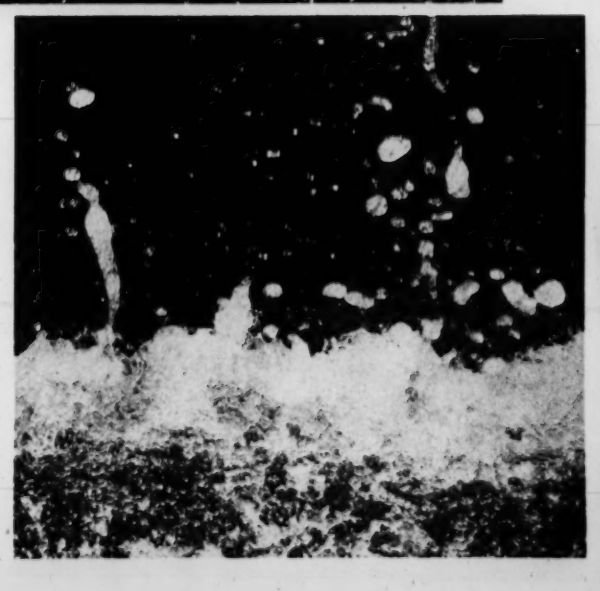

The surge of Lucas Park's moving water is captured in these photographs made at various stages of the fountain's cycle. The progression of rising water begins in photo in lower left corner; the spray has reached its height in photo at the very top, and the patterns it makes in descent appear in photos on right side. In the photo immediately below, the fountain is shown in its entirety.

Harvesting Missouri's Medicinal Plants

STRIPPING SLIPPERY ELM

With pocketknife, Arthur Ehler removes thin layer of white inner bark from slippery elm tree. He had previously shaved away outer bark with a drawknife. New bark will grow over patch. Slippery elm bark, worth up to 30 cents a pound, finds use in poultices and in some internal medicines. Baseball's former spitball pitchers, like the Cardinals' Burleigh Grimes, kept well-supplied with slippery elm bark.

Ehler grubs out a small sassafras tree, careful not to injure its root, which yields a marketable bark. In photo below, bark shavings are held in one hand, the denuded root in the other. Choice sassafras root bark brings 45 cents a pound. Sassafras has long been used for a household tea with tonic qualities. The aromatic bark produces an oil used by perfumeries and it is employed medicinally.

SASSAFRAS YIELD

Ehler, the root hunter, on the prowl for medicinal plants near his farm at House Springs. On one shoulder is grubbing tool with homemade handle, on the other a gunny sack in which he carries his findings. Ehler, 48 years old, has been gathering roots since childhood. He concentrates on seven roots, barks and herbs found on his own 28-acre farm and nearby land where he gets permission to "hunt."

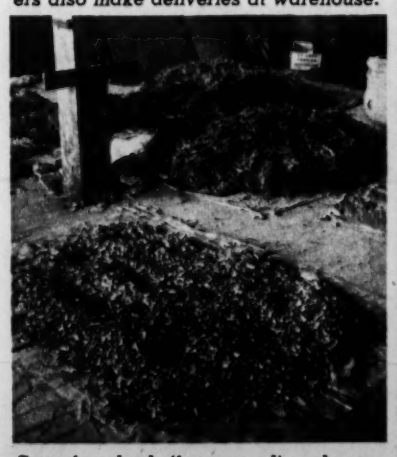

WILD GINGER

Single wild ginger plant (above) and a patch of it (below). Rootstock, the valuable part, brings about 25 cents a pound. The plant, widely known as Canada snakeroot, inconspicuously frequents woodland spots and rich soil along roadsides. Pioneers and Indians found use for it in treatment of colic and dyspepsia.

Earl L. Donzelot, the botanist and a partner of the St. Louis firm that buys and sells roots, barks and herbs, sorts through packages received in a morning mail. Company requires that items be wrapped separately, must be clean and bone dry. Some root-growers bring their products to the warehouse, at 117-123 South Third street. Buyers who drive through countryside making purchases from individual growers also make deliveries at warehouse.

Sassafras bark (foreground) and mayapple roots are spread out on warehouse floor for drying. At this time of year, floors of the four-story warehouse are piled high with drying plant products awaiting shipment to pharmaceutical houses on order. Also in warehouse is gas chamber in which purchases are fumigated to rid them of insects and fungi.

DRYING MILKWEED ROOT

Sylvan Jacobson, vice president of the firm, kneels to check quality of milkweed root spread on warehouse floor. Both Donzelot and Jacobson have been buying and selling medicinal plants for more than 50 years.

By CHARLES MENEES of the PICTURES Staff

AMONG MISSOURI'S WILD PLANTS and trees are numerous specimens long used as remedies for human ailments. Some of these medicinal plants are plentiful enough to make harvesting them a paying proposition. Root-diggers, as the plant harvesters are known, are relatively few in number but they prepare and ship to market large quantities of roots, barks and herbs that are resold to pharmaceutical houses in this country and abroad.

From May until the autumn leaves blanket the ground, the diggers tramp the state's forests, meadows and even wastelands on the lookout for mayapple, ginseng, bloodroot, wahoo, sassafras and slippery elm trees and other plants with marketable roots or bark.

Only a few root-diggers work at it steadily. Most of them are farmers who look for the plants in their spare time, hunters and fishermen who keep an eye out for saleable items to help defray expenses of their trips, housewives in quest of pin money. Efforts of this unorganized group have made Missouri one of the leading states in the supplying of medicinal plants. Illinois also ranks high; Arkansas is believed to be the biggest producer of top-quality products.

One of those who devote considerable time to the gathering, cleaning, drying and marketing of medicinal plants is Arthur Ehler, operator of a small farm near House Springs, Jefferson County. He is an expert at tracking down goldenseal, wild ginger, snakeroot and many others. From sassafras alone he has realized about $500 a year. Like most successful root-diggers, Ehler is close-mouthed about the location of his best stands of medicinal plants.

Ehler is one of some 25,000 root-gatherers from about 30 states who market their findings with the only firm of its type in St. Louis, a consolidated enterprise with the name St. Louis Commission, Incorporated, Minner-Donzelot Company. It is the leading crude drug firm in the Middle West, one of the biggest in the country.

Market prices that the firm pays for roots, herbs and barks currently range from a few cents to several dollars a pound. Only a few of them bring more than a dollar. Way out in front as a money-maker is wild ginseng root, now worth upwards of $16 a pound. Ginseng, which has no known medicinal value in this country, is sent to China. The root, frequently with a vaguely human shape, has been prized in China for centuries as a cure for all of man's ills.

Photos by SAM CALDWELL of the PICTURES Staff

Root-Diggers Range Fields and Forests for Products Marketed In the United States and Abroad By a St. Louis Commission Firm

Ehler takes no chances of damaging a valuable ginseng plant he has discovered. He holds the stem with one hand, and scratches dirt away from its root with a small hoe. Ginseng is recognizable through its arrangements of five leaflets, two of them smaller than the others, its yellowish green flowers at this time of year, its scarlet berries in the fall. Its favorite haunts are in leafmold beds of the undergrowth in hardwood forest slopes facing north or west. In early America, Indians and pioneers used ginseng root for a mildly medicinal chewing gum and tea.

GINSENG—A VALUABLE FIND

This is a ginseng root, dried and ready for market. Chinese use it in food, believing it cures ailments and prolongs life, and carry it as a lucky charm. China has never been able to harvest enough of its own ginseng to meet the demand. Pile of ginseng roots (below) in St. Louis warehouse has estimated value of $3500. Roots shrink considerably in drying —a 13-ounce root may dry up to two or three ounces.

MAYAPPLE

Ehler fills sack with dried mayapple root (photo left) preparatory to sending it to market. He has averaged as high as $50 a week for roots and barks, did well during World War II when prices rose. Current price of mayapple root is 32 cents a pound. In the photo above, patch of mayapple is shown as it grows in woods. The plant is also known as mandrake, ground lemon, raccoon berry, Indian apple. Low woods and fields are best growing places.

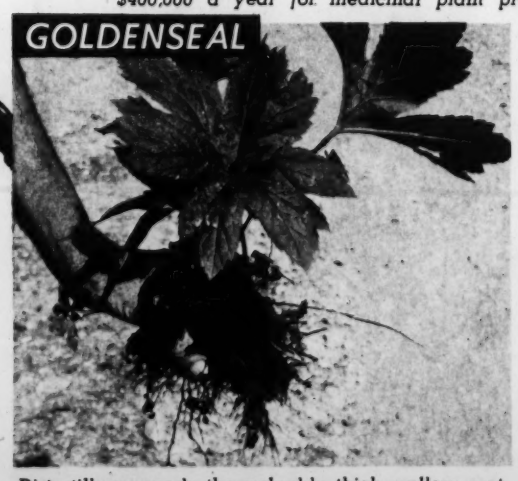

Jacobson weighs 25-pound sack of mayapple root just received at warehouse. Most of the small shipments to the warehouse are by parcel post; a hundred or so packages a day are not unusual at this time of year. The firm pays out more than $400,000 a year for medicinal plant products.

BLOODROOT

The marketable portion of the bloodroot plant is the rootstock, which brings 10 cents a pound. Blood-red juice of stem and root was used by Indians to color war paint. Plant has such other names as redroot, red puccoon, red Indian paint. It grows primarily in rich open woods. Roots must be carefully stored because moisture affects quality.

GOLDENSEAL

Dirt still surrounds the valuable thick, yellow rootstock of this goldenseal plant. Goldenseal patches occur primarily in high, open woods or on hillsides or bluffs affording natural drainage. Goldenseal root, used in a number of medicines, brings about $1.80 per pound; the tops, for which there is little market, get 10 cents a pound. Because goldenseal is becoming scarcer in growth range, it is being cultivated in many localities.

READY FOR SHIPMENT

Sacks of pleurisy root, awaiting shipment, line warehouse floor. Pleurisy root—not named after the disease—is from one of about 15 varieties of milkweed. It is one of two types of milkweed root that are saleable. The other is black Indian hemp. Both are purchased by commission house only on order from patent medicine firms.

Passengers board Santa Fe's new "hi-level" train for demonstration run. Wide windows provide panoramic view from seats on upper deck. Car has entrance door on each side.

TWO-STORY TRAIN

Santa Fe's El Capitan Carries All Passengers on Upper Deck

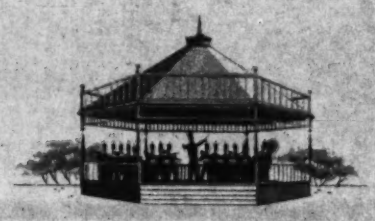

Each car has 72 seats, arranged in double rows on each side of aisle. Besides center stairway, this car has stairs at rear to give access to standard car if one should be coupled on.

A "HI-LEVEL" streamlined train is the Santa Fe Railroad's entry in the field of new passenger equipment designed to arrest the decline in rail travel. It will be christened next Sunday at Albuquerque, New Mexico, and placed in service on the El Capitan run between Chicago and Los Angeles. Seven chair cars, diner and lounge car make up the train.

The new two-level cars are 15½ feet high, two feet higher than conventional cars. Reclining seats are on the upper level, eight feet above the rails, or four feet higher than the floor of a regular chair car. The lower level is devoted to luggage shelves and rest-rooms. Passengers step directly into the cars at platform height through doors in the center of each car; a center stairway leads to the seating deck.

The double-level arrangement eliminates vestibules in passengers' compartments and permits 28 more seats than in a standard chair car. The extra elevation is expected to provide a smoother ride with less noise and vibration.

'SLINGSHOT' RETRIEVER FOR FROGMEN

Swimmers Are Flipped Into Pickup Craft, 25 a Minute, With Elastic Catapult

A device, built on the principle of a small boy's slingshot, is being tested by the Navy to speed the return of frogmen to their boats after reconnaissance or demolition missions. The device, a shock-absorbing cord, allows swimmers to be retrieved while the pickup boats travel at high speeds. After a swimmer grasps the snare of the cord, which trails in the water, his weight stretches the spring-loaded cord. As the swimmer's speed becomes equal with that of the boat, the spring contracts, catapults the frogman safely aboard. In this photo, sailor is being pulled at speed faster than boat is traveling to a point where he will be flipped into the rubber raft.

The high-speed pickup begins as snare man in rubber liferaft hands cord to waiting frogman. Formerly, snare man had to help haul swimmers aboard. The pickup device could also be used to bring survivors of sea disasters aboard rescue craft.

In less than three seconds after taking hold of cord, a man is pulled onto the raft, which is lashed to speedboat. Tests have shown that with a naval landing craft traveling 14 knots, 25 frogmen can be snatched from the water and deposited in a liferaft each minute.

ELECTRONIC PRIVATE EYE

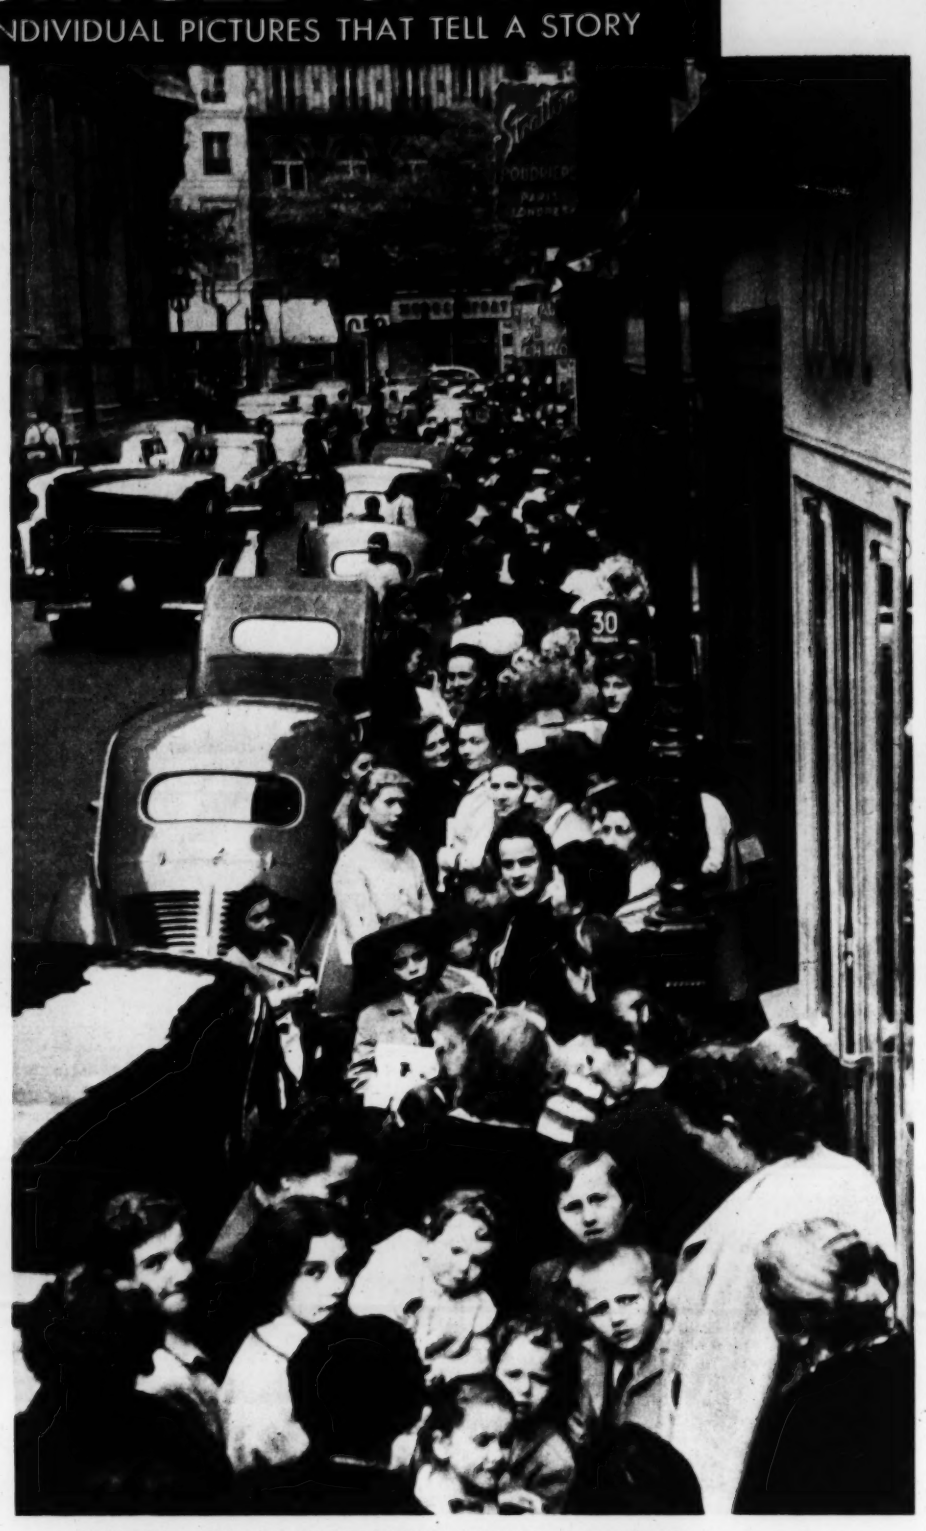

A Newark, New Jersey, department store has put television to work as a private eye in its campaign against shoplifters. Mounted on a balcony at L. Bamberger and Company, the television camera keeps watch over the store. Here, John Hegan, assistant protection manager, monitors screen in an office. The camera can be remotely controlled to give over-all or close-up views of the floor area.

CHANGE OF PACE

To add variety to women's pumps, which are usually of simple style, one designer has fitted them with interchangeable heels. The heels slide on metal ridges, lock in place. The shoes, which are sold with two extra sets of heels, are made in suede and alligator. The spare heels make available a choice of rhinestones, enamel polka dots, bead patterns, other ornamentation.

MORE THAN ENOUGH CHILD ACTORS

After the director of a small theater in Paris ran a two-line classified advertisement in one of the city's dailies inviting child actors to apply for roles, police had to be called to keep order among nearly 3000 parents and the children they brought for auditions. The line of aspiring parents, mostly mothers, and their children fills the sidewalk of a city block in the French capital.

CLEAN SWEEP PROTEST OF OVERPARKING

Women and children use brooms in a fashionable residential neighborhood of the New York East Side to dramatize how parked cars prevent sweeping machines from doing their jobs. Their quarries are the automobiles of doctors and diplomats who leave cars at the curb during the hours street cleaners are at work. In New York, doctors are allowed to park for one hour in restricted zones, and diplomats are immune from parking regulations. The sweepers, members of the Citizens Committee to Keep New York City Clean, turned out to call attention to what they called widespread abuse of immunity enjoyed by the doctors and diplomats. They stuck tags, tickets on windshields of offending cars reading: "Because your car is parked here contrary to the regulations, there is a dirty spot in this otherwise clean street."

GUNRUNNERS' FEUD

Alan Ladd, Lloyd Nolan Slug It Out in Film "Santiago"

1. Before 1898, when the United States declared war against Spain to help Cuba win her independence, rebel Cubans fought alone against Spanish rulers. Their guns were supplied by American gunrunners who braved the Spanish blockades for profit and excitement. Cash Adams (Alan Ladd, left), and Clay Pike (Lloyd Nolan), old enemies, meet aboard the Vicksburg, a former Mississippi River sidewheeler chartered to run guns. Each man has his own cargo of guns to be smuggled into Cuba. Also aboard is Dona Isabella (Rossana Podesta), a Cuban patriot returning from the States after raising money for the rebels' campaign.

2. As the Vicksburg completes the first leg of its journey to Santiago, where the guns are to be delivered, Pike's aid, Jingo (Frank DeKova), attacks Cash with a cargo hook. Jingo is knocked overboard by Cash. Ashore at Port-au-Prince in Haiti, where final arrangements are made for delivery of the guns, the party is met by Isabella's 8-year-old brother, Juan.

3. The Vicksburg approaches the Cuban shore. Drum signals from the insurgents warn of a Spanish artillery position. Isabella, who knows the nearby terrain, swims ashore to lead the boat party into the jungle. Cash, Pike and their men use skill gained as Indian fighters to surprise and wipe out the Spanish detachment.

4. With the passage to Santiago now cleared of Spanish artillery positions, the temporary truce between Cash and Pike ends. They clash over Isabella, and Cash wins.

5. As the gunrunners make their way through the jungle for delivery, Juan (Francisco Ruiz), who had stowed away aboard the Vicksburg, is killed by the Spanish. Isabella receives word General Maceo has been attacked by the Spaniards, robbed of the money to pay for Cash's and Pike's guns. Pike starts to sell his guns to the Spaniards. He is thwarted and killed in a gun duel by Cash. Cash has found something more than money to fight for —the freedom of Cuba and the woman he loves.

Lamb Ribs for Inexpensive Barbecue

1. Mrs. Jones trims away any unsightly pieces from the lamb ribs. A damp cloth wiped over the meat will remove any loose bone matter.

2. Basting sauce is made by mixing together equal amounts of barbecue sauce and catsup, then adding Worcestershire sauce, crushed garlic, ground pepper, salt for additional flavor.

3. Ribs are placed on rack high above bed of hot charcoal to cook slowly. They are turned occasionally until browned.

By MERNA LAZIER

BY USING LAMB RIBS, one of the budget cuts of meat, Mrs. Edward D. Jones Jr., formerly of St. Louis and now of Williamsburg, Missouri, prepares a deliciously tender and tasty barbecue at little expense. Hot barbecue sauce is diluted with mild catsup to reduce its spiciness to suit the delicate flavor of lamb. Worcestershire sauce and garlic add additional flavor which is complementary to this meat.

After trimming and cleaning the slabs of ribs, Mrs. Jones places them on highest rack above the hot charcoal to prevent too rapid cooking. Two hours are usually required to render most of the fat from the ribs. Sauce should be brushed on near end of cooking so as not to char the meat. Additional fuel may have to be added from time to time, but should always be done gradually so as not to cause blazing. A sprinkling of water will subdue any flames. Two to three coatings of the sauce, turning and cooking between each, are usually sufficient. Whole tomatoes should be placed on grill and turned frequently to heat through. Any leftover ribs may be reheated and served later.

INGREDIENTS

Allow one-half to one slab of lamb ribs per person depending upon appetites

For the sauce

Three-fourths cup barbecue sauce

Three-fourths cup mild catsup

One clove garlic, crushed

One to two tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

Fresh ground pepper and salt to taste

4. When ribs are tender and the fat has cooked out, they are brushed with basting sauce. Ribs are turned to expose both sides to the heat. Repeat basting as desired. Tomatoes are heated until skins pop.

5. Ribs are cut with kitchen shears into serving pieces and served with tomatoes. Mixed green salad, hot rolls and dry red wine complete the menu.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R. FOSTER

Our Story: PRINCE ARN SHOUTS, AND BY THE SOUND OF HIS VOICE GARM KNOWS SUCCESS HAS AT LAST CROWNED THEIR WEEKS OF TOIL.

BELOW THEM STRETCH MILES OF FERTILE PLAIN AWAITING THE FARMER'S PLOW.... AND THEY HAVE FOUND A FEASIBLE ROUTE ON WHICH TO REACH IT WITH A ROAD.

IT SEEMS AS THOUGH THEIR SURVEY WILL BE COMPLETE IN A FEW HOURS. AS THEY WORK THEIR WAY DOWN THE SLOPE GARM MARKS THE WAY WITH CAIRNS, WHILE ARN CAREFULLY MARKS HIS MAP.

SUDDENLY GREAT CLOUDS ROLL OVER THE HEIGHTS BEHIND THEM, BLOTTING OUT THE SUN, AND AN OMINOUS WIND MOANS AMONG THE PEAKS.

"HASTEN, YOUNG MASTER!" URGES GARM, AS THE FIRST FLAKES COME HISSING DOWN. "WE MUST REACH THE SHELTER OF THE TREES IN THE PASS. IT WOULD BE FATAL TO GET TRAPPED BY SNOW ON THIS SIDE OF THE MOUNTAINS!"

SOON THE GROUND IS WHITE WITH SNOW AND THEY WOULD CERTAINLY HAVE BECOME LOST WERE IT NOT FOR THE MARKERS.

7-1-56

WHILE STEPPING OVER A TINY BROOK ARN SLIPS. AT ANY OTHER TIME THIS MIGHT BE FUNNY, BUT NOW IT ONLY FILLS GARM WITH DREAD.

HAL FOSTER

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN HOUR TO REACH SHELTER. THE WIND IS BITTER COLD. ALREADY ARN IS SHIVERING. THE LIFE OF A FUTURE KING OF THULE IS IN GARM'S HANDS.

LANCE

2. YOUNG MANHOOD

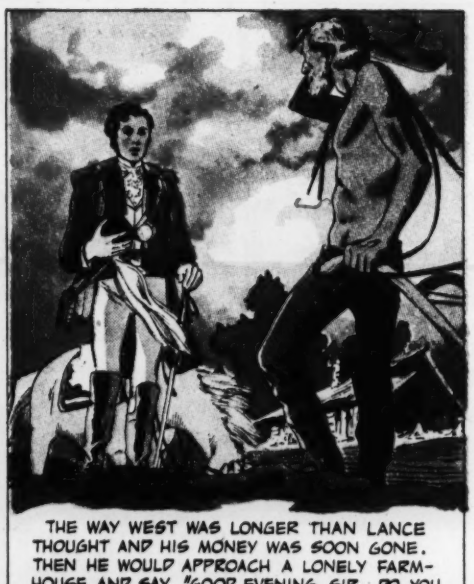

HEAD OF LANCE LAY EIGHT LONG YEARS OF SCHOOLING! THIS SEEMED PRETTY GRIM TO AN ADVENTUROUS LAD OF 14, FOR MEANWHILE THERE WAS EXCITEMENT TO BE FOUND ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER!

LATE ONE NIGHT, MAKING HIS DECISION, THE YOUTH BUCKLED ON HIS FATHER'S OLD CAVALRY SABRE AND CREPT TO THE STABLES.....

HE WANTED TO SAY GOODBYE, TO KISS HIS MOTHER ONCE MORE AND SHAKE HANDS WITH HIS FATHER...BUT THERE WOULD ONLY BE TEARS AND PROBABLY AN ARGUMENT.....

THE WAY WEST WAS LONGER THAN LANCE THOUGHT AND HIS MONEY WAS SOON GONE. THEN HE WOULD APPROACH A LONELY FARMHOUSE AND SAY, "GOOD EVENING, SIR. DO YOU HAVE WORK IN RETURN FOR A NIGHT'S FOOD AND LODGING?"

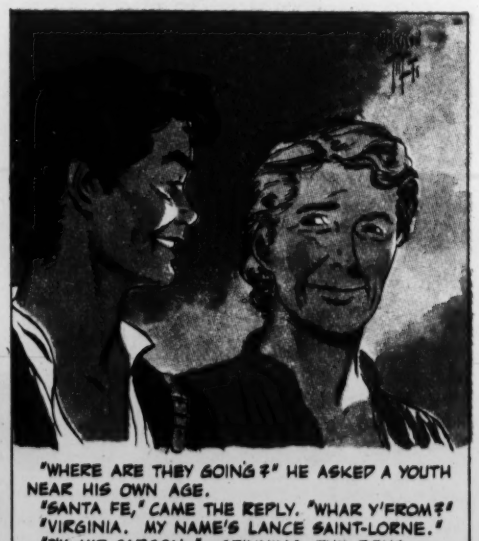

THE FARMERS ALWAYS GOT A BARGAIN AND THIS MADE THEM SHAKE THEIR HEADS IN WONDER. WHO WAS THIS TIRELESS YOUTH WHO DRESSED LIKE A PRINCE AND SPLIT RAILS LIKE A BACKWOODSMAN?

TWICE ON THE ROAD LANCE'S FINE HORSE BECAME A TARGET FOR THIEVES. AFTER ALL, WHAT FIGHT COULD THEY EXPECT FROM A BOY!

AT LONG LAST, LOOKING LESS LIKE A PRINCE, LANCE REACHED A PLACE CALLED OLD FRANKLIN. HE PAUSED TO WATCH, WIDE-EYED, AS A HUGE FREIGHT CARAVAN LUMBERED OUT OF TOWN.....

"WHERE ARE THEY GOING?" HE ASKED A YOUTH NEAR HIS OWN AGE.
"SANTA FE," CAME THE REPLY. "WHAR Y'FROM?"
"VIRGINIA. MY NAME'S LANCE SAINT-LORNE."
"I'M KIT CARSON." GRINNING, THE BOYS SHOOK HANDS AND THEN RETURNED THEIR GAZE TO THE BIG WAGONS. SANTA FE WAS WEST, AND WEST WAS ADVENTURE AND EXCITEMENT.....
